BARNES DISPUTES COLONEL FLATLY

Attacks Adversary's Testimony and Explains His Own Political Philosophy.

DENIES SLUR AT "RIFF-RAFF"

But Asserts That All Parties Need Organization and Demand Leadership.

EXPLAINS RACING FIGHT

And Declares That Colonel, at White House Interview, Practically Ordered Him to Consult Belmont.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, May 13.—William Barnes went on the witness stand in the Barnes-Roosevelt libel trial today, and placed Colonel Roosevelt squarely in his own "Ananias Club." Again and again the former Republican State Chairman contradicted the testimony given by Colonel Roosevelt in the first days of the trial, as to what was said in conversations between them when the Colonel was Governor and President, adn denied that other conversations referred to by the Colonel had taken place at all.

Mr. Barnes's testimony did not, however, consist entirely of denials. He brought out new matter in relation to the fight on Governor Hughes's anti-racing legislation in 1908, and said that the President practically ordered him to see August Belmont about it and that Colonel Roosevelt wanted the Percy-Grey law prohibiting race track gambling repealed. Under the guidance of his counsel, William M. Ivins, Mr. Barnes hammered for hours at the Colonel's elaborately prepared defenses. As a final effort to mend the breaches made, Colonel Roosevelt will go on the stand again and do some contradicting on his own part.

In his own way Mr. Barnes is nearly as effective a witness as was the Colonel. He is bigger than the Colonel physically, and he has a dominating personality, although he utterly lacks the Colonel's inimitable manner of emphasizing his remarks by gesticulation and forceful utterance. He has an easy grace on the stand and he has caught the Colonel's trick of talking directly to the jury. The one thing he lacks, however, is the Colonel's ability to hold an audience spellbound.

Mr. Barnes was at his best when, in denying that he had ever told Colonel Roosevelt that the people were not fit to govern themselves, he swung toward the jury and, following the Colonel's example, defied his political philosophy, which was that leaders were necessary to control a political organization, and without them there could be no discipline or order.

Mr. Ivins carried his witness step by step over the ground covered by the Colonel's testimony, and had him categorically deny practically every statement of importance the Colonel had made reflecting upon Mr. Barnes as a boss. In this way the witness denied that he ever had discussed the franchise tax bill with Mr. Roosevelt until after its passage; that he ever had said that Anthony N. Brady and other Democrats had contributed to the Republican campaign fund; that he had talked with the Colonel about the reappointment of L. F. Payn as Superintendent of Insurance or urged it, or that he had ever told Major J. J. Dickinson, a newspaper correspondent, that party success, in his mind, was paramount to all other political considerations.

Mr. Barnes's version of what took place at the conference regarding the anti-racing bills was the most sensational testimony of the day. Mr. Ivins introduced it by reading into the record a copy of a telegram that President Roosevelt had sent to Mr. Barnes on March 14, 1908, inviting him to luncheon at the White House. Talking directly to the jury, as the Colonel had so often done, Mr. Barnes in his most impressive manner gave this description of what had taken place:

"I went to Washington," he said, "and saw Secretary Loeb and asked him what the President wanted to see me about. Then I went to the White House and kept the luncheon engagement. Mr. Roosevelt told me that August Belmont had been to see him in relation to the Agnew-Hart bill, which provided for the repeal of the Percy-Grey law against race track betting. He told me that he wanted me to go to New York and see Mr. Belmont; that the legislation should be repealed, as Mr. Belmont should be considered. I demurred, and told the President that Timothy L. Woodruff was Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and that he was the proper man to consult if anything of that kind was to be done.

"President Roosevelt then made some reflections on Mr. Woodruff and again requested me to see Mr. Belmont. I consented to do so, although I stated that the matter was sure to be misrepresented, that scandal would result, and that it would unquestionably lead to criticism. I said I would be glad to see Mr. Belmont, however, and I went to New York."

During the recital the Colonel watched Mr. Barnes's every movement. He leaned over and whispered to his counsel that it was in direct contradiction of his letter to Mr. Barnes, in which the Colonel said that he was not going to take sides in the racing matter.

Barnes's Political Philosophy.

The other most striking feature of the session was Mr. Barnes's address to the jury regarding his political theories. Mr. Ivins asked him if he had ever said to Colonel Roosevelt that it was necessary to protect big business, that without leaders or bosses party government was impossible, and that the people were not fit to govern themselves.

"I never said any such thing," replied the witness with deliberation, "but I unquestionably said to Mr. Roosevelt, as I have said to a great many men, that if we were to maintain in this country a system of party government, it was necessary that these parties be organibsed, and that no movement of any character ever came to achievement unless it was organized; that the idea of the people moving en masse without order or discipline was absurd on its face. They do not so move without leadership or order in any political party or any organization known to human data. If they do not move in order, they do not move at all.

"I unquestionably said that no political organization could possibly conduct operations unless financed or conducted by men who gave up their time to it. For ordinary purposes, no political organization which ever existed from the beginning of time, be it Republican, Democratic, Progressive, Labor, Socialist, or Independence League could go ahead unless it was so organized. I never said to Mr. Roosevelt or to any other man that political organizations should give protection. I have said that those who believe in the party of their choice have the right to give to it as they will and to see that the people they elect to office carry out their will. This is the substance of my conversations with Mr. Roosevelt and many other men."

One of the features of the session was the calling by the plaintiff of a dozen witnesses who were members of the Legislature during the fight on the United States Senatorship in 1911. All were Republicans. They were asked if they ever had received orders from Mr. Barnes as to how they were to vote in this contest. Each witness replied that he had received no orders and each was allowed to go without cross-examination.

Next to Mr. Barnes the most important witnesses of the day were Alfred Towsley of Toledo and Newman Erb, President of the Ann Arbor Railroad Company. They corroborated the testimony given yesterday by W. J. Wollman of the J. S. Bache Company that the meeting between Mr. Barnes and William Loeb, Jr., at Mr. Wollman's office occurred after the election of President Wilson in 1912, and not during the Senatorship fight in 1911, as testified to by Mr. Loeb, who said that at this meeting Mr. Barnes said that he couldn't interfere in the Senatorship fight because of an agreement he had with Charles F. Murphy.

Barnes a Frank Witness.

Mr. Barnes was called to the witness stand shortly before the noon hour. He was thoroughly self-possessed and answered Mr. Ivins's questions with apparent frankness and often with a smile.

Mr. Ivins brought out that Charles E. Gants was the Business Manager of The Albany Journal during most of the period under discussion, that he was succeeded by John H. Lindsay, who died last November, and that the present Business Manager is Condé Hamlin.

"Are you interested in the politics of your party?" Mr. Ivins wanted to know. The witness replied with a smile that he was, and that he had begun to take an active interest in the Spring of 1889 during the primary elections. In reply to another question Mr. Barnes said that he had been a delegate to every State Convention since that time with the exception of 1892. He said he was a member of the Republican State Committee from 1892 until 1910, and that at various times he had been Chairman of the Executive Committee.

Q.—Were you the leader of the party at that time. A.—I'll have to ask you for a definition of that word.

Q.—Well, were you in control? A.—Certainly not.

Q.—Who was the leader at that time? A.—Senator Platt was called the leader. He was extremely influential.

Q.—Did you during those three years solicit or receive any contributions for campaign purposes? A.—I did not solicit any. I may have received some checks and passed them over to Mr. Odell.

The witness said that Reuben L. Fox was the active Treasurer, and when he was asked if any checks had passed through his hands to the Treasurer he replied:

"I recollect there was one check for $2,000 from August G. Young of Albany."

Mr. Barnes said that he first met Colonel Roosevelt at Oyster Bay in the Fall of 1895, and he told of meeting him again at the Fifth Avenue Hotel headquarters.

Q.—What were your relations with Lou Payn after Mr. Roosevelt became Governor? A.—They were quite unfriendly.

Q.—Were you on speaking terms? A.—I should say not.

Mr. Ivins produced this line of testimony to show that Mr. Barnes did not ask the Governor to keep Mr. Payn in office as the Colonel testified. Mr. Barnes said that he recalled meeting Mr. Roosevelt on a railroad train and then said that he called upon him at the Executive mansion in Albany after his inauguration to pay his respects, and that he did not meet him at the Capitol until some time thereafter. Colonel Roosevelt testified that he had many conferences with Mr. Barnes at the Capitol during this time. The witness then said that during this period his health was poor and that he was suffering from an attack of nervous prostration.

Denies Roosevelt's Testimony.

The witness told of meeting Colonel Roosevelt again at a dinner party at the Executive Mansion in March, 1899, when a number of women were present. Colonel Roosevelt testified that Mr. Barnes told him at that time that leading Democrats had contributed to the Republican campaign fund and should be protected, and Mr. Ivins asked the witness if any such conversation had taken place. The witness said he could not remember.

Q.—Did you have more than one conversation with Mr. Roosevelt at the Capitol regarding political matters after Jan. 1, 1899, until after the passage of what I will call the Roosevelt Franchise Tax bill? A.—My recollection is, that I never had more than one such conversation with him at the Capitol.

Q.—Did you ever talk with Governor Roosevelt on legislative and executive matters? A.—I should say on two occasions, in regard to appointments and bills.

Q.—What are the facts regarding your conversation with Mr. Roosevelt as to the issues between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Platt? A.—I never knew there were any issues between them; not to my knowledge did I ever discuss anything of the kind with Mr. Roosevelt.

Q.—Did you ever talk with him about Mr. Platt and the organization being antagonistic to Mr. Roosevelt? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know of an antagonism between Mr. Platt, the organization and the defendant? A.—I knew of his relations to the Franchise Tax bill, but I never talked with Mr. Roosevelt about the bill before it was passed.

Mr. Ivins wanted to know again if the Colonel ever had talked with the witness about the issues between the Colonel and Mr. Platt.

"I have already testified," the witness replied, "that I know of no such issues. I can't testify that he did not talk to me."

"Can you testify that you did not talk to him?"

"I can't testify that I kept silent," replied Mr. Barnes. "I was in the position of listener. I had no particular interest in the matter as I was not involved in it in any way."

Barnes Cites Editorial.

The witness said that it was not impossible that he had discussed the Ford Franchise Tax bill with the Governor after its passage. When he was asked if he was opposed to the bill, Mr. Barnes referred Mr. Ivins to an editorial in The Albany Journal on May 16, 1899. This was read to the jury and it showed that Mr. Barnes had criticised it.

"Did you ever have a discussion with Mr. Roosevelt prior to the passage of the bill in which it talked about the effect upon campaign contributions the taxing of franchises would have?" Mr. Ivins asked.

The witness thought for a moment and replied that he did not.

"Did you ever, at any place or time or under any circumstances discuss with Mr. Roosevelt the matter of political contributions by both parties and particularly by Mr. Brady and Mr. Pruyn and the effect the franchise bill would have upon such contributions?" Mr. Ivins asked.

"I talked to Mr. Roosevelt about both Mr. Brady and Mr. Pruyn," the witness replied. "I said that Mr. Brady had been a very liberal contributor to the Democratic party in Albany County, especially in 1898 when Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Van Wyck were opponents and I said that Mr. Brady's activities were largely responsible for the loss of Albany County. To my knowledge Mr. Brady did not contribute one dollar to the Republican Party."

This was in direct contradiction to Mr. Roosevelt's testimony that Mr. Barnes had told him that representatives of the big Democratic interests had contributed to the Republican party and would do so no more if such legislation as the franchise bill was passed.

Disputes the Colonel.

Mr. Ivins then read more of the Colonel's testimony in which he said that Mr. Barnes urged him not to sign the bill but to follow Senator Platt's advice in the matter, and he asked the witness if he had ever asked the Governor not to sign the bill.

"Of course not," replied Mr. Barnes.

Mr. Ivins took up the statement of Colonel Roosevelt that Mr. Barnes had urged him to reappoint L. F. Payn as State Superintendent of Insurance because he represented big financial interests, and he asked the witness if he ever urged Mr. Payn's reappointment.

"Not that I can recall," said Mr. Barnes.

Pressed further on this point, Mr. Barnes continued:

"I did not favor the reappointment of Mr. Payn; I had no idea that Mr. Roosevelt would reappoint him. The first time I talked with Mr. Roosevelt about it was when he asked me when his term expired. There never was any question about the matter, so far as I was concerned."

The Colonel had made much out of the Payn incident, and asserted positively that Barnes and Platt had opposed Payn's removal. Mr. Ivins kept harping on the subject.

"Did you ever say to Mr. Roosevelt, he asked, "that Mr. Payn should be reappointed because of his connection with financial institutions?"

"No, I did not," was the flat denial.

Mr. Ivins next took up the alleged conversation between the Colonel and Mr. Barnes in which, according to the Colonel, Mr. Barnes asserted that bosses were necessary and the people were not fit to govern themselves. It was then that Mr. Barnes made his declaration of political principles. When he had finished Mr. Ivins put the question to the witness as to whether he had ever referred to the voters as "riff-raff," as Mr. Roosevelt had testified. Mr. Barnes looked disgusted.

"I can't recall ever saying anything of the kind. I don't know what 'riff-raff' is. If you will look up the dictionary—"

Mr. Bowers, who seemed satisfied to let Mr. Barnes talk as much as he pleased, interposed one of his few objections, and Mr. Barnes's statement was cut short.

Mr. Ivins then started on another tack, and wanted to know who succeeded Benjamin B. Odell as leader of the party in the State after 1906.

Mr. Barnes said that he would have to have the meaning defined before he could answer.

Q.—Well, who was Chairman of the State Committee? A.—Timothy L. Woodruff.

Q.—As distinguished from a Chairman who is a leader? A.—The question of leadership is determined at a State Convention. The person whose will prevails there, the man with the most persuasive force, is accepted as the leader.

Q.—Well, who was the head of the convention in 1906. A.—Mr. Roosevelt was.

Q.—Who was the head of the convention in 1908? A.—Same answer.

Q.—In 1910? A.—Same answer.

Mr. Barnes's cross-examination was suspended at this point to allow Alexander McDonald, Fred A. Ahern, Edward A. Ebbetts, Harry B. Haynes, and Thomas L. Smith, all members of the Legislature in 1911, to testify as to whether Mr. Barnes had tried to influence their votes. All denied that Mr. Barnes had tried to influence them in any way. Then Mr. Barnes was recalled and Mr. Ivins took up the incident of the plaintiff's visit to Washington at the request of President Roosevelt in 1908. Mr. Barnes identified a telegram and the witness identified it as the one he had received from Mr. Loeb on March 14, 1908. It was as follows:

The President wants to know if you will lunch with him on Monday at 1:30 o'clock. Please wire reply.

Mr. Barnes then told of his visit to the White House and how the President insisted that he call upon Mr. Belmont in regard to the Agnew-Hart bill.

Mr. Ivins wanted to know what the witness had ever done in regard to the bill, but Mr. Bowers objected. Mr. Ivins then said that he wanted to prove that Mr. Barnes did not influence Senator Grattan to change his vote on the bill and vote against it, but that Senator Grattan acted because his constituents were against it and wanted him to oppose it. Justice Andrews said he would like the witness to show that he did not influence Senator Grattan, and Mr. Ivins then put in evidence a copy of an editorial which appeared in The Albany Journal the day after the defeat of the bill, in which the writer, who was presumed to be Mr. Barnes, had attacked Governor Hughes for using what he termed bulldosing methods. Mr. Barnes said he could not remember writing it. Mr. Ivins took up the testimony of Major J. J. Dickinson, the Albany correspondent, who had an interview with Mr. Barnes on April 14, 1908, in which Mr. Barnes was quoted as saying that party success was paramount in his mind to all other political considerations, and that he, Mr. Barnes, had no illusions as to politics. Mr. Barnes also was quoted as saying that he told Governor Hughes that if the Governor's attitude regarding the race track legislation was a matter of conscience and not of votes, "there was no common ground on which we could stand."

What Barnes Told Hughes.

Mr. Ivins asked the witness if he remembered being present at a dinner with Governor Hughes, and Mr. Barnes replied:

"I was toastmaster at that dinner and Governor Hughes sat next to me. During the evening I told the Governor that I thought he was making a mistake in regard to the proposed race track bill. He replied, 'I disagree with you.' I then said that I feared his action would cost the Republican Party 25,000 votes at the coming Presidential election, meaning that it meant two votes for every one we lost. He then said:

"'My conscience would never be clear if the iniquitious law remained on the statute books.' I told him that I thought we were discussing votes, and that if it was a matter of conscience it was no affair of mine.'

"Did you say," asked Mr. Ivins, "that there is no common ground on which we can stand?"

"Absolutely not," replied Mr. Barnes. "I said no such a thing."

Mr. Ivins next took up the conference which Mr. aBrnes, Mr. Hinman, Mr. Parsons, and others had with Colonel Roosevelt at Oyster Bay in 1908 regarding the renomination of Governor Hughes. He asked Mr. Barnes what he had said to Colonel Roosevelt at that interview and the witness replied:

"I protested against the renomination of Governor Hughes, and told Mr. Roosevelt that I had objections to it. Mr. Roosevelt said he did not wish to make his friends cut their throats again. No agreement was reached at the conference and I went away. I recall that Mr. Roosevelt said to me that of course I would continue my opposition to Governor Hughes at the convention, or words to that effect, and I replied that of course I would."

Q.—Well, did you oppose Governor Hughes? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you have a candidate of your own? A.—I seconded the nomination of Mr. Wadsworth.

Q.—Did you move to make the nomination of Mr. Hughes unanimous? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you work to elect him? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you go into every polling place?

Mr. Bowers objected before the court could rule Mr. Barnes said he did not. There was a general laugh at the answer, in which Colonel Roosevelt and the court joined, and as adjournment time had come, Mr. Barnes left the stand in high good humor.

At the morning session Mr. Ivins called Senators Walters of Syracuse, George T. Argetsinger of Rochester, and Assemblyman Harold J. Hinman. They all testified to the suggestion made by Mr. Barnes that, inasmuch as it would be impossible to elect Chauncey M. Depew for Senator during the Senatorial fight in the Legislature in 1911, the Republicans should unite with the ndependent Democrats or some other man, preferably Thomas Mott Osborne.

"Barnes told me," said Mr. Hinman, "that Mr. Osborne would be the worst meal for Tammany to swallow, and his election would keep up the breach in the Democratic Party."

At the close of the session Mr. Ivins said he hoped to finish with Mr. Barnes tomorrow and that he would complete his case either tomorrow night or Monday morning. He expects to call several more witnesses. Mr. Bowers said he also expected to call several witnesses. Among them will be Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Loeb. Both lawyers said they expected the case would reach the jury by next Tuesday night.

STATE BOARD HEARS OF CHILDREN TIED UP

Begins Inquiry Into Charities Department and Randall's Island.

NO SUGAR FOR CEREALS

Commissioner Kingsbury's Subordinates Tell of Abuses Under Mrs. Dunphy's Management.

The hearing by the State Board of Charities on conditions in the Department of Charities, and particularly at the New York City Children's Hospital and Schools on Randall's Island, whose Superintendent, Mrs. Mary C. Dunphy, was suspended by Commissioner Kingsbury on March 6 last, began yesterday afternoon at the Charities Building, 105 East Twenty-second Street.

This is the investigation which Commissioner Kingsbury termed "the last gasp of a dying and discredited machine," with the suggestion that the State Board itself was a more suitable subject for investigation. Letters read at yesterday's hearing by Robert W. Hebberd, Secretary of the State Board, showed that the board had assured Commissioner Kingsbury that the inquiry would be constructive in its nature, and that Mr. Kingsbury had assured its members of his co-operation.

The committee which began the investigation yesterday consisted of William Rhinelander Stewart, Dr. J. Richard Kevin, and Dr. Stephen Smith of New York and Horace McGuire of Rochester. Deputy Attorney General Leonard J. Obermaier appeared as counsel for the board, and Joseph P. Cotton, Special Assistant Corporation Counsel, for the Department of Charities.

The first witness was Henry C. Wright, Deputy Commissioner of Charities, who said that in the seventeen months of his tenure of office he had made twenty or thirty visits to the island. He admitted, however, that probably not more than eight of these had taken place before Mrs. Dunphy's removal early last March.

"It would be highly desirable," he said, "to visit every one of the department's institutions every day, but I have not had time to visit any institution sufficiently. The amount of supervision necessary depends on the competence of the person in charge."

Mr. Wright said that while he had heard complaints of harshness, he had seen no brutal treatment or severe punishment, and only one case of a child tied up without the orders of a physician.

"I didn't report it," he said, "for I didn't consider it a flagrant instance. But such things rarely occur when an administrative officer is making a visit."

He said the helpers received from $180 to $540 a year besides their board and lodging, and that for the larger sum it was possible to get competent men.

"Sometimes," he said, "you can get satisfactory helpers at $10 a month. But since we got a larger appropriation we have worked to cut down the number of employes and increase the pay. Lack of funds was a great hindrance under the old conditions."

The number of beds, he admitted, was not at all adequate to the number of the patients, but he could not recall the exact figures. In the main, he said, the buildings lacked proper means of egress in case of fire or emergency. He said work was now going on to remedy these conditions.

"With regard to food," Mr. Wright continued, "we heard complaint that large quantities of meats were sent to the nurses' home three times a day. We ordered the amount reduced. Little attention was given to what the children would or would not eat. The children in many cases refused to eat their cereals; it was found that this was because the allowance of sugar had not been ordered, and an order was given to correct this.

"The reception building to receive incoming patients and hold them for a detention period in view of possible isolation of diseases was not properly managed. Though patients were assigned to separate detention rooms they all had a common dining room, and caretakers who had charge of the food supply were domiciled with patients. The patients ran about more or less freely." Mr. Wright said he had no personal knowledge of any case of disease spread in this way.

Howard B. Dinwiddie, General Inspector of the Department of Charities, who, after complaints had reached the Commissioner, conducted the investigations which resulted in Mrs. Dunphy's suspension, said he had seen twelve or more cases of inmates who were tied to chairs or beds without the physician's order. He said that he personally had seen no brutal punishment. The hearing was adjourned till Monday at 3 o'clock.

B. R. T. GETS JOSEPH P. DAY.

Real Estate Man Will Handle Advertising in Company's Cars.

Advertising signs were removed from the cars and stations of the B. R. T. on May 1, when it failed to reach an agreement with the Intercity Car Advertising Company as to a renewal of the advertising contract, but yesterday the railroad company announced that it had practically completed arrangements to handle the advertising, vending, and news privileges on its lines through its own representatives.

Joseph P. Day, the real estate man, has been appointed managing director of the business, and he will have as his chief assistant Stanley E. Gunnison, who for ten years was connected with the advertising house of Ward & Gow.

BOY SAVES DROWNING CHILD

Edwin Brown, the four-year-old son of Mrs. Louise Brown, of 30 Bay Side Place, Rockowoy, finding a rowboat moored to the bank of Jamaica Bay behind his house yesterday afternoon, jumped into the boat and pushed off, intending to play it was a battleship. A strong tide setting out to sea caught the boat, and Edwin jumped over the side when he realized he was drifting away. Not being able to swim, he sank several times.

From the shore Charles Hart, 11 years ol, saw Edwin's danger, and swam out to the boy, rescuing him just in time. Edwin was taken to the Rockaway Hospital, where he soon recovered.

GERMAN AIR DRAWS FINE.

Playing "Die Wacht am Rhein" Costs $3 in Tombs Court.

For playing "Die Wacht am Rhein" on a mouth organ and thereby causing a crowd to collect on Park Row at Ann Street, Frank McCarthy, 23 years old, no home, was fined $3 by Magistrate Handy in the Tombs Court yesterday afternoon.

He did not have the money and went to jail for three days.

Polish Soprano Here from Spain.

Mme. Louise Onszkiewicz, a Polish soprano, arrived last night on the Spanish steamship Manuel Calvo to spend two months with friends because she was prevented from returning to her home, Lemberg, Galicia, which is in the possession of the Russians. The singer said her husband was serving in the Austrian army and she had not heard from him or her little son for seven months. On April 20 Mme. Onszkiewicz said that she sang before the King and Queen of Spain at Madrid by Royal presented her with an autographed photograph.

SAFETY FIRST CAMPAIGN.

D. P. Kingsley, in Accepting Presidency, Outlines Plans.

Darwin P. Kingsley, President of the New York Life Insurance Company, has accepted the presidency of the Safety First Federation of America, and under the by-laws of the organization automatically becomes a member of the Executive Committee as well as the Board of Directors for the full term of three years.

In accepting the presidency of the national body, Mr. Kingsley said:

"The Safety First Federation of America represents primarily an effort to achieve uniformity of action in the field of public safety through the power of a wider public opinion. The work of the federation will be wholly educational, but that is the only efficient method we have in this country in the achievement of reform. Laws and ordinances are easily obtained when an educated public opinion demands it.

"Everybody, for example, needs to be educated as to what they should and should not do on the streets, especially in the larger cities. Street traffic has been revolutionized in twenty years. The old way of crossing the street will no longer do. It is dangerous. A dog no longer runs against or under an automobile, as he did when they first appeared. He has changed his whole attitude toward street traffic. The average man has not changed; he still goes wandering across the street as he did when the traffic was wholly made up of horse-drawn vehicles. On the other hand, the traffic, as against the pedestrian, has grown aggressive and careless.

"Safety first in street traffic regulation is only one of our objects. We look to the greatest development in the direction of co-operation with the existing machinery which is to be found throughout the country in the local safety first organizations or public safety committees of Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, automobile clubs and kindred bodies interested in public welfare, which necessity and urgent demand or corrective measures have already created. My full sympathy with the object of safety first has been enlisted, and in accepting the presidency of the Safety First Federation of America, it is my hope and desire to further the work that means true economy—conservation of life and property."

'RIPPER' CRY ANGERS CROWD

Man Who Stabbed Girl Beaten Before Police Rescue Him.

Jacob Ruggs, 50 years old, of 235 East Nineteenth Street, was held in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Levy in the Yorkville Court yesterday after Lewis Levine of 537 East Twelfth Street and Mrs. Sadie Alexander of 332 East Eighteenth Street had testified that for the last two weeks Ruggs had annoyed little girls in Stuyvesant Park. Levine said he heard Ruggs ask others in the park whether there were any developments in the ripper murder cases.

The cry of "Ripper" was raised when Thomas Di Stefano, 27 years old, a tile layer of 51 Meserole Street, Williamsburg, fled after stabbing Anna Arcardi, 19 years old, of 27 Union Avenue, in front of St. Catherine's Hospital, Brooklyn, yesterday, and before Policeman Schmitt of the Stagg Street Station arrived a crowd had caught Di Stefano and beaten him almost senseless. The girl was not badly hurt. Di Stefano was held for the Grand Jury.

Magistrate House discharged Gertrude Fetzer, 18, a domestic in the home of Mrs. Mildred Schoeller at 961 Simpson Street, the Bronx, yesterday, after the girl had explained that the reason she wrote a note to Mrs. Schoeller warning her that a ripper would "get" her children was that she wainted the woman to let her receive calls from a young man friend whose presence would serve as a protection to the house.

BOY STUDENT MISSING.

Overwork Made High School Pupil Melancholy.

Isidore Becker, son of Samuel Becker of 1393 Stebbins Avenue, The Bronx, has been missing from his home since May 5. He is seventeen years old and a student at the Townsend Harris High School. eH is suffering from melancholia, brought on by overwork, his father says.

Two months ago his father took him from the school and sent him out on a farm. When he came back his health seemed to have improved. He left his home on May 5 for a walk, and did not return. He is five feet, eight inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has blonde hair, fair complexion and brown eyes. eHwas dressed in a dark gray-green suit, and wore a gray-green plaid cap, blue striped white shirt, dark blue tie and laced shoes.

Comes Here to Get New Feet.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the Red Cross Line steamship Stephano from St. Johns was Thomas Dawson, a survivor of the arctic sealing fleet that was overwhelmed in the blizzard of March, 1914, and who came here to get a pair of artificial feet. He said he lost a large portion of both feet during his exposure for seventy-two hours in the blizzard, in which seventy-five of his shipmates perished.

CITY BREVITIES.

There was a fifteen-minute delay in the Hudson tubes yesterday when the third rail protection boards in the west-bound downtown tubes, between Cortlandt and the Pennsylvania Station, became loosened and knocked off some of the power shoes on the cars.

The Rev. Dr. Stephen Wise will deliver a sermon next Sunday morning at the Free Synagogue, Carnegie Hall, on "The Case of Leo Frank—A Last Appeal."

Prof. Morris R. Cohen of the department of philosophy of the College of the City of New York will deliver a lecture this evening on "The Philosopher's Vie of the Ideal Republic" at the Thomas Davidson School, 307 Henry Street.

Isidore Berry of 134 East Seventeenth Street umped in front of a north-bound express train in the Grand Central Station late yesterday afternoon, and, although the front car passed over him, he may survive. Berry was held a prisoner in the Flower Hospital charged with attempted suicide.

John Ringelman, a music teacher, 55 years old, who was once prosperous, killed himself yesterday afternoon by inhaling gas in the kitchen of his flat, at 3,601 Third Avenue, the Bronx.

A man who visited the small dry goods store of Mrs. Sarah Wolf, 517 East 138th Street, the Bronx, yesterday, hit the woman on the head with an iron pipe as she bent to get some cheesecloth. She screamed and he ran. Abraham Wolf, husband of the woman, said his neighborhood was infested with cocaine "fiends," one of him he thought made the attack.

NORDICA'S GEMS APPRAISED.

Many Curios Among Jewels Worth $250,000 Owned by the Diva.

Late yesterday afternoon in a private room at the safe deposit vaults of the Fidelity Trust Company, Newark, N. J., more than $250,000 worth of the jewels of the late Madame Nordica were appraised by State Senator Henry E. Ackerson, the temporary administrator of her estate, appointed in place of Secretary of State Crater, who died a few weeks ago.

Among the ornaments was one valued at $75,000, and there were many whose value ran from $15,000 to $30,000. Among the curios were a multitude of medals and insignias presented to the diva by nearly all the crowned heads of Europe.

George W. Young, Madame Nordica's husband was not present. In addition to Senator Ackerson, and the representatives of the safe deposit and bonding company, there were present Albert G. Thorne and Walter W. Westall of New York, counsel for Mme. Nordica's sisters; Messrs. Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, Mr. Young's counsel, and William Hamilton Osborne, proctor in New Jersey for Mrs. Castilio and other sisters of Mme. Nordica, who are contesting the prior will filed in New Jersey by Mr. Young. A commission was recently issued to Thursday Island, in Australasia, to take testimony to determine the validity of the will of 1914, executed by Madame Nordica a few months before her death.

MAID SAVES PAINTER IN FALL

Held Him as Scaffold Slipped—Companion Badly Hurt.

A painter's scaffold, rigged at the level of the eighth floor of the studio apartment building, 140 East Fifty-seventh Street, slipped from the holding tackle yesterday afternoon, dropping to a perpendicular pasition. One of the two painters on it, an unidentified man about 32 years old, was precipitated to the sidewalk, suffering a fracture of the skull and internal injuries. He was removed to Polyclinic Hospital by Dr. Morris.

The second painter, Philip Rabinowitz, 32 years old, of 520 East 157th Street, was rescued by Elizabeth Burke, a maid employed in the apartment of Frederick H. Howell, on the seventh floor. She caught Rabinowitz as he was losing his grip on a rope and dragged him bodily through a window.

CHINA CALLS ACTION OF JAPAN DRASTIC

Ultimatum Uncalled For, Republic Contends in "Frank, Plain Statement" to World.

GAVE HEED TO ALL DEMANDS

Although It Was Palpable That Japan Sought Concessions for Which No Return Was Proposed.

PEKING, May 13.—The Chinese Government has issued "a frank and plain statement" connected with "the drastic action of Japan" in presenting its ultimatum on May 7. Contending that China aimed at the consolidation of the friendship existing between China and Japan and was particularly solicitous for the preservation of peace in the Far East, the statement says:

"Unexpectedly, on Jan. 18, Japan adopted the unusual course of presenting a list of twenty-one momentous demands arranged in five groups. The first four groups were each introduced by a preamble, but there was no explanation of the fifth group. Respecting the character of the demands in this group, however, no difference was indicated in the document between them and those embodied in the preceding groups.

"Although there was no cause for such a démarche, the Chinese Government, in deference to the wishes of the Japanese Government, immediately agreed to open negotiations on those articles which it was possible for China to consider. Despite the palpableness of the whole of the demands being intended to extend the rights and interests of Japan without securing a quid pro quo of any kind for China, China approached the pending conference in a spirit of the utmost friendliness and with the determination to deal with all questions frankly and sincerely."

The document complains of the questions raised by Japan as to the formation and procedure of the conferences and of Japan's refusal to agree to sign the minutes of the conferences and the suspensions of meetings. "obviously with the object of compelling compliance with the views of the Japanese Minister."

Even when Japan dispatched large bodies of troops to Shantung Province and Manchuria, with the ostensible purpose of relieving the garrisons, it is pointed out, China, although the action caused indignation and alarm on the part of the Chinese people, exerted its influence to prevent a rupture of the negotiations.

"Throughout the conferences," says the statement, "the Chinese Government steadfastly strove to arrive at an amicable settlement and made every concession possible. Of the twenty-one demands submitted, China agreed to fifteen, some in principle, some textually, six of them being initialed by both parties."

The statement sets out at great length the demands to which China agreed. At the first conference she accepted in principle the demand that she assent to the transfer of German rights in Shantung to Japan, but wished to add a clause that the matter should be left to a discussion of all the parties interested at a peace conference, and that Japan should agree to restore the leased property to China. This, it is contended, was not a demand on Japan but a reiteration of Japan's statement made in an ultimatum to Germany last August.

Other demands agreed to by China were that she should not cede or lease to any third power any territory inland or land on the sea border of Shantung; that Japan should have preference, provided Germany abandoned her privilege of supplying capital for the construction of a railway from Che-foo or Lungkow to connect with the Kiao-Chau-Chinanfu Railway, in the event of China deciding to build that railway with foreign capital; that China should open certain important cities in Shantung as trade marts under regulations approved by Japan, although these privileges were additional to any enjoyed by Germany, and, in the opinion of China, acceptance was not essential to the preservation of peace in the Far East. Later, China agreed to the extension of the leases of the Dairen-Port Arthur-South Manchurian Railway and the Antung-Mukden Railway.

MISS WILSON ON BOSSES.

Social Centres One Way to Defeat Them, She Says.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 13. — Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson, daughter of the President, condemned the college sorority today as an influence against work, and as a cause of division into hard and fast classes. She declared that it should be done away with. "It should give way to the social centre," she told her interviewer.

Music, she said, was to be her life profession. Continuing, she said:

"Outside of music there is another large interest that I find quite absorbing. That is social centre work. Now, don't mistake my meaning. Social centre work (with the emphasis on the centre) is not social settlement work.

"In Rochester, where Professor Ward of the University of Wyoming gave the social centre its first significance, the people used to meet and talk and have concerts until——" here Miss Wilson broke off to weigh her words.

"Until," she resumed, "the boss up there, Aldridge, I think his name is, interfered. You know they just got rid of the members of the Board of Education there that favored the social centre idea. And now they have—concerts again.

"There is only one way to prevent such a thing. That is for the people to take the matter out of the hands of the Board of Education and fight until they have social centres provided for by law.

"It is not one class lifting another, it is not class division to give one class an opportunity to feel it is helping another. It is common effort, common interest, common work for the common good."

"And do you know," she continued, "the politicians are afraid of social centres? Now here are they trying to help them, and of course there is Rochester to show."

Engaged Pair at Ellis Island.

Alejandro Troulk, 21 years old, and Eugenia Lifchitz, 18 years old, who arrived last night from Barcelona on the Spanish liner Manuel Calvo, were ordered sent to Ellis Island for further examination by the Immigration Inspector. Troulk, who had $40 in cash, said his father was a well-to-do farmer in Sevastopol, Russia, and that he and the girl came to New York to get married and live because the bride-to-be has brothers living at 1,385 Fifth Avenue. Word was sent last night to the address.

MARCONI INJUNCTION HOLDS

Judges Lacombe, Ward and Rogers, sitting in the Circuit Court of Appeals, handed down a decision yesterday affirming the order of Judge Hough granting a preliminary injunction to restrain the de Forest Radio Telephone and Telegraph Company, the Standard Oil Company of New York and Lee de Forest from infringing the fundamental Marconi and Lodge patents, relating to wireless telegraphy.

It had been urged by the defendants that it was unfair that they should be restrained from the use of the de Forest system, pending the determination of the patent action brought by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, on the ground that the Marconi people had recently raised the price it charged steamship companies for the use of its system to $100 a month for each vessel.

In granting the injunction, however, Judge Hough stated that the expense of operation and litigation to which the Marconi company had been put had been so enormous in the past, that it had so far received no fair return for its invention. In so doing he upheld the contention of the Marconi people that it was only fair that in reckoning the rental they charged to steamship companies for the use of their apparatus the cost of the establishment and maintenance of shore stations should be taken into account.

The Circuit Court of Appeals in affirming the ruling of Judge Hough also denied the motions to vacate or modify the injunction.

FOR WIRELESS TO BELMAR.

Marconi Company Plans Service from Here to Jersey Resort.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, May 13.—Randolph Miller, Edwin Taylor, and Frank E. Hoyer, all of Asbury Park, were appointed today by Justice Kalisch of the Supreme Court as Condemnation Commissioners to fix the price of land wanted in Belmar, N. J., by the Marconi Telegraph Cable Company for the establishment of a wireless station.

Application for the Commissioners was made by John L. Grigg, President of the Marconi Company. The company's main station is at New Brunswick, and the Justice was told that it was desired to establish wireless communication between Belmar and New York.

H. T. MARTIN INCOMPETENT.

Jury Finds He Is Unfit to Manage His Financial Affairs.

A Sheriff's Jury yesterday found that Howard Townsend Martin, brother of the late Bradley Martin, was incompetent to care for himself or his property. On the application of Mr. Martin's son, Townsend, and his nephew, Bradley, a commission was created by the Supreme Court to conduct the inquiry. The Commissioners were William F. Claire, Dr. John H. Girdner, and John P. Leo.

Among the witnesses were three physicians, who had examined Mr. Martin, and Bertram Cruger of the Metropolitan Trust Company, a life-long friend of the patient.

Dr. James F. Nagle of 16 West Fifty-fourth Street testified that the patient had kidney trouble and heart disease, and because he was mentally diseased he was excitable and confused, but not at all violent.

Dr. Samuel Getty of Yonkers testified that when he asked Mr. Martin where he was he could not tell, but thought he was somewhere abroad. Dr. William G. Schoonover, also of Yonkers, said Mr. Martin talked of the recent deaths in his family and seemed to think that he was in Paris.

Mr. Cruger testified that he had paid all of Mr. Martin's bills and that his estate, consisting entirely of personalty, amounted to $214,804.92. He inherited $75,000 by the will of his brother, Frederick Townsend Martin.

BYRON DOUGLAS IN JAIL.

Actor's Wife Alleges He Owes Her $8,229 in Alimony.

Byron Douglas, the actor, was locked up in Ludlow Street Jail late yesterday by Deputy Sheriffs in a proceeding begun by his wife, Marie Booth Douglas, who says he owes her back alimony amounting to $8,229. Mrs. Douglas, who is a niece of the late Edwin Booth, got a separation in 1904, with alimony of $20 a week. She says that he paid her only $450 and then refused to continue the payments.

Mrs. Douglas described herself in her application to Supreme Court Justice Weeks, who issued the arrest order, as being without means of support, and said that because of her poverty it was necessary for her to spend some time in the charity ward of t hospital. She says her husband earns $300 a week and that he is connected with a moving-picture concern. She said his home was in Maine, and that he intended leaving this State. Bail was fixed at $9,000.

Fast Driving Widow Fined $100.

Mrs. Bessie M. Follansbee, 24 years old, a widow, of 160 Stratford Road, Brooklyn, was fined $100 as a third offender against the speed ordinances yesterday when arraigned in Morrisania Court before Magistrate House. She was charged with running an automobile at thirty-five miles an hour on upper Broadway.

YAQUIS IN MEXICO KILL AMERICANS

Attack a Colony in Sonora, Leaving Two or Three Dead and Many Wounded.

LOOTING AND MURDER GO ON

NOGALES, Mexico, May 13.—Yaqui Indians attacking a colony of sixty-five Americans, including women and children, near Esperanza, south of Guaymas, have killed three and wounded several others, according to information received today by Frederick Simpich, American Consul here. The battle continues.

The Americans reported killed are John Wilson, W. A. Fay, and William Stocker. J. J. Donovan is missing and is believed to have been killed.

José Maytorena, Villista Governor of Sonora, has ordered a detachment of 500 troops to entrain at Guaymas and proceed to the aid of the Americans. The railroad, however, is only partially repaired and is in poor condition.

Refugees from the interior report conditions in Sonora to be little short of appalling. The Yaquis and lawless elements of all sorts have taken to pillaging and to murder, they say. The Indians are reported to be butchering men, women, and children indiscriminately.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Two Americans were killed by Yaqui Indians in the vicinity of Esperanza, State of Sonora, Mexico, according to a telegram received late this afternoon by the State Department from Consul Houstetter at Hermosillo. The message gave no particulars beyond saying that 500 Yaquis had taken the valley around Esperanza, and that two Americans were reported killed and a number wounded.

The State Department today received a telegram from Senhor Cardoso, the Brazilian Minister in Mexico City, stating that the Acting Secretary of Foreign Relations of the Villa-Zapata Convention Government had called upon him and delivered a note in which he asks that there be conveyed to the Secretary of State, in order that he may inform President Wilson, an expression of condolence on the part of the convention to the American people and the United States Government for the loss of American lives on account of the disaster to the Lusitania. It is further stated that "the news of this regrettable happening has caused profound pain to the convention Government and its people."

Secretary Bryan expressed appreciation for the message.

REPORT OBREGON REPULSE.

Villa Men Say Fighting Has Been Renewed Near Leon.

EL PASO, May 13.—Fighting has begun between the Villa and Obregon forces east and west of Leon, State of Guanajuato, according to a message today from Villa's headquarters at Leon.

It was stated Obregon was repulsed to the east, losing 200 killed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Carranza agency today received a telegram from Vera Cruz denying that any large engagement had been fought between the Obregon and Villa forces since April 15, when Villa's army was defeated at Celaya. The message said:

"Since April 15, when General Obregon defeated all Villista forces, he has not had any real battle with them. In all the small fights General Obregon has been engaged in recently the Villistas have been completely defeated and in one of the skirmishes the Villista General Frayre was killed. It is entirely confirmed that reactionaries were driven from the Panuco region, our forces capturing from them many arms, ammunition and supplies. First Chief Carranza went out of town today to see the tests of the new Constitutionalist artillery."

"You can deny report that our troops have suffered defeats inasmuch as no encounters have taken place. Panuco in our possession after twelve hours' fighting, our troops capturing large number of arms and prisoners of the Villista army. Our troops are in the outskirts of Monterey. The whole territory of Tepic is in our control after many defeats inflicted on reactionaries."

Another cablegram from Vera Cruz to the Carranza agency read:

"Rioting between Zapatista Generals and attack on Gonzalez Garza in his residence in Mexico City are confirmed. By order of Emiliano Zapata the forces in the city are withdrawing to the Ajusco Mountains, leaving the city practically without garrison. Constitutionalist forces have begun their campaign to clear the way between Apam and Pachuca without any difficulty because Zapatistas are lacking in ammunition. Aristocratic reactionaries of Mexico City continue to assist Zapata, but the great majority of the citizens desire the return of the revolutionists to the city."

STARVATION NEAR IN MEXICAN CAPITAL

Americans Report Dangerous Conditions — Daily Fights Between the Factions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, May 13.—Real starvation in Mexico City within two weeks is now predicted. A party of Americans arrived yesterday after a five days' trip. They attempted to leave the city four times, but were stopped by Zapatistas, who refused to allow anyone to leave or enter the city. They succeeded in passing the lines at night in express wagons, paying 200 pesos apiece.

Starvation is near in Mexico City, they said. Tortillas are selling for 10 cents each; no flour is to be had; the water supply is running low owing to the misuse of the machinery, and there is much disease, smallpox and typhoid. Hundreds daily storm the Zapatista headquarters seeking passes to leave the city.

Upon their arrival at the Constitutionalists' lines at Ometusco they say they were treated well, soldiers offering food in exchange for cigarettes. Passes were given to Vera Cruz. They say unless General Carranza takes Mexico City soon riots will begin. Merchants are refusing to take Villa banknotes. Daily fights are reported between Zapatistas and forces of Gonzales Garza.

General Carranza is sending fifty-five school teachers to Boston to study modern teaching. Before leaving on the Monterey he advised them also to study the civil life of the greatest democratic republic in order to make Mexico the same free country.

SQUND LINER IN COLLISION.

The Georgia Badly Damaged as Result of Accident in Fog.

SAUNDERSTOWN, R. I., May 13.—The Joy Line passenger steamer Georgia, from New York to Providence, and the lumber-laden three-masted schooner William L. Elkins, St. John, N. B., for New York, were in collision eight miles southeast of Watch Hill during a thick fog early today. Both vessels suffered considerable damage, but no person was hurt.

The steamer had a big hole stove in her starboard bow above the guards and abreast of her pilothouse, and her bulwarks were smashed. The schooner lost her headgear, and portions of her stanchions and bulwarks were carried away. She was towed here by the Georgia which later proceeded to Providence.

HUERTA'S BIG FAMILY ARRIVES FROM SPAIN

HAD MORE THAN 100 TRUNKS

Senora Huerta Feared Immigration Officials Might Detain Her—Go to Forest Hills Today.

The family of General Victoriano Huerta, which included his wife, children, tutors, governesses, and servants, making a party of thirty persons, arrived last night from Barcelona on the Spanish steamship Manuel Calvo, with more than 100 trunks. They were met at the pier by the General with five automobiles to convey them to the Hotel Ansonia.

During the voyage Señora Huerta expressed her fears to some of the passengers that the immigration officials at Quarantine were very severe in their dealings with aliens arriving in the United States, but after her arrival she said they had been most kind to her and her children.

General Huerta said that his family would only remain one night at the Hotel Ansonia, and would go today to the home he had established for them at Forest Hills, L. I.

The welfare of the party during the voyage was intrusted to Fernando Gil, the Mexican adviser of General Huerta, who spoke excellent English, and was the only one in the party who did. The women of the family were all dressed in black, according to Spanish custom. After Señora Emilia Aguila de Huerta, whose age on the manifest was given at 53, had answered the questions of the immigration and customs officials, Mr. Gil presented the rest of the party, who almost filled the main saloon.

Their names were Ramona Huerta, Teresita Huerta, and Ursula Huerta. The first two unmarried and the latter a widowed sister of the General, who brought sons, a tutor for each of the sisters; then Captain Luis Fuentes and his wife, 23 years old, a daughter of the Huertas; then Elena Huerta de Quiroz, 19, and her husband, a civil engineer. Elina Huerta de Colon, 32 years old, and her husband, Dagoberto, and Eva and Celia, the youngest daughters, aged 11 and 9 years, respectively, children of Huerta. Jorge, the eldest son of the General, came with his wife, Berta, and their four children, and with Mr. Gil came his wife and their two children.

While the examination of the party was going on Señora Huerta walked down the gangplank to the pier, where she was greeted affectionately by the General, who wore a soft brown hat with overcoat to match. After the baggage had been passed the party left the pier for the Hotel Ansonia with General Huerta and his wife in the leading automobile, and Mr. Gil bringing up the rear.

EX-WIFE SUES F. C. DALE.

Asks $150,000 to Support Herself and Child in Affluence.

Francis Colgate Dale was sued yesterday in the Supreme Court by his divorced wife, Lillian P. Dale, who wants him to pay her $150,000, which she says would provide for herself and her son in the manner in which they have been accustomed to live, and would, therefore, only mean the keeping of an agreement her husband made with her when she sued him for a divorce. The Dales were married on Jan. 1, 1900, and they have one child, a son, Francis Colgate Dale, Jr., 5 years old.

Mrs. Dale says that in September, 1910, "for sufficient and just cause," she entirely separated from her husband, and has never lived with him since. On Dec. 24, 1913, she went to Washoe County, Nevada, and obtained a divorce on the ground that her husband had failed to provide the necessaries of life for herself and her son. Before taking this step, in June, 1913, she says, she made an agreement with Mr. Dale providing that in the divorce action she would not ask for alimony, and that because of this Mr. Dale promised that she "should be supported in affluence for the rest of her life, in keeping with her standing and social position."

For some time after she had obtained her divorce, Mrs. Dale says, her husband contributed some money for her support, but she has given her nothing since March 1 last. She says she was born on July 12, 1889, that she can reasonably expect to live for some years, and therefore the amount of damages she has sustained through the failure of the defendant to keep his agreement is reasonably estimated at the amount sued for.

Mr. Dale is the son of the late Chalmers Dale, who was a broker, and who left his estate in trust for his son. Mrs. Dale says that this trust fund yields from $30,000 to $40,000 a year. The defendant was educated at Leipsic and Berlin. He was the Republican candidate for Congress in the Sixteenth District in 1912, but Peter J. Dooling beat him nearly three to one.

Mr. Dale aroused considerable enthusiasm during the campaign by promising, if he were elected, to give his salary to his needy constituents.

But such an opportunity is here at Macy's, and if you are an early visitor to the Store tomorrow you will have the pick or several hundred Suits, the quality of which will be a revelation to you.

The Fabrics include: Glen Urquhart Plaids, Pencil Stripes, Tartan Checks, Overplaids, Homespuns, Plain Blue and Cambridge Grey, Herringbone Weaves, Pin Checks and Silk Mixtures.

Some of the garments full-lined, others half-lined and some quarter-lined, skeleton body. Many of the Coats are Mohair-lined and some are silk finished with silk sleeve lining.

These Suits are the product of several of the best-known manufacturing concerns in this country

All the new style features are reflected in the Suits—the English soft-roll Sacks with long rolling lapels; one- or two-button effects; narrow shoulders and semi-form fitting for the young men, and more conservative styles with stationary roll for the older men—comfortable yet stylish garments.

Youths' Suits with Long Trousers, $12.75
Ages 14 to 19.

We have a Special Department devoted to clothing for boys who have reached the long-trousers age. Correct styles and fabrics, of course, for nothing less will satisfy young America. English models with patch pockets—nobby Summer Suits.

Others at $9.75—An Excellent Value.

Knitted Overcoats, Feather Weight, $12.75
Were $14.75 to $18.50.

This is one of the most useful garments ever designed. Ideal for wear at the seashore or in the mountains, and just the thing to keep away the chill while motoring. May be packed in your grip, for the fabric will not wrinkle.

The Curve at the Waist
And the Small Hip

In this pleasing combination of figure lines rests the charm of the new silhouette.

You have been unable to accomplish it! Then—to illustrate how beautifully it can be done—stop at The Redfern Corset Shop and ask to be fitted to some of the new Redfern models.

Among the many styles is just the one for you, that will give you the effect you are after, and at the price you wish to pay. All corsets, from $3 to $25, are fitted by the same expert cosetieres at The Redfern Corset Shop.

SPEAKERS CAUTIOUS AT FLEET RECEPTION

THREE MORE VISITING DAYS

Host of School Children Inspects Sea Fighters—Enlisted Men Enjoy Sports at the Garden.

The officers of the Atlantic Fleet were tendered a reception by the members of the Union League, in the clubhouse at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street last night. The outside walls of the clubhouse were brilliantly illuminated with strings of electric lights, while from the cornices blinked green and red ship lights. American flags were everywhere, big ones and little ones, and in the midst of the many that waved, or were attached to the Fifth Avenue side of the house, there fluttered a four-starred pennant in honor of Admiral Fletcher, Commander in Chief of the fleet.

The interior decorations were elaborate, and at the head of the grand stairway the full uniformed band of the Seventh Regiment played. The scene was a brilliant one, the navy and army officers being in full dress uniform. On few previous occasions has there ever been so much gold lace and braid seen at a reception in New York.

The speeches which preceded the supper were all impromptu and all brief. Those who spoke were Admiral Fletcher, Colonel E. A. Glenn, U. S. A., Chief of Staff on Governors Island; President Charles E. Rushmore of the club, Samuel W. Fairchild, and President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University. The speeches were not made public, but it was explained that, owing to the serious situation resulting from the Lusitania disaster, the speakers were all very careful not to say anything sensational. Every one realized, it was said, that the time was one when the people should stand back of the President, and let him do the talking.

As each guest arrived he was met by a member of the Reception Committee, at the head of which was Mr. Fairchild.

Visiting Days Drawing to a Close.

Three more days are left during the afternoons of which the public will be permitted to visit the warships now in the Hudson. On Monday, the day the President will review the fleet as it swings at anchor, no visitors will be permitted to board any of the ships, and neither will pleasure or excursion craft be allowed to cruise among the ships while the Mayflower, from which the President will review the fleet, is circling the fighting craft.

Yesterday was another big day for the ships, and it seemed that all of the people who were kept from visiting the ships on Wednesday, as a result of the rain, boarded the ships yesterday afternoon. All afternoon there were long lines of waiting people at all the naval and public boat landings, and it required from two to half a dozen policemen at each landing to keep everybody from trying to get on the same battleship-bound craft at the same time.

Among yesterday's visitors to the battleships were many school children, who had the time of their lives scampering about the gun decks and climbing to the tops of the big turrets from which the fourteen-inch and twelve-inch guns protrude. There were also some older pupils, who inspected the ships from stem to stern and speculated on what could be expected of the big fighters in the event this country gets into trouble in the future. They all agreed the Atlantic Fleet would do its part and do it well, no matter which way the pendulum swung.

Two more destroyers, the Balch and the Benham, steamed into the Hudson yesterday and took up their anchorages on the Jersey side.

If the weather is favorable, the police anticipate that the biggest crowds ever seen on Riverside Drive and the river shores will gather tomorrow night and the two succeeding nights to view the illuminated fleet and enjoy the fireworks and special events that will be interpolated into the program tomorrow and Monday nights. Police Commissioner Woods has ordered a full force of reserves to reinforce the regular men assigned to fleet duty, and every precaution has been taken for the safeguarding of the enormous crowds expected.

Band stands have been erected all along the Drive, and in each one of them a brass band will play during the spectacle tomorrow night. The concerts will be repeated on Monday night during fleet races and the water carnival.

On Tuesday morning the fleet will proceed to sea, being reviewed by the President as it passes out.

The Board of Estimate granted yesterday the $10,000 which the Board of Aldermen had suggested should be set apart for the entertainment of the fleet. It will be spent as follows: Five hundred dollars for the construction of a grand stand for the land review, $500 for band concerts, $2,500 for fireworks, and the rest for incidental expenses.

Navy League With Fleet Today.

Today will be Navy League Day with the fleet. United States Government tugs will convey members of the league to and from the warships, and the officers of the fleet will receive the visitors. Six thousand members of the league and their wives are expected to make the trip. Parties will be taken from the Seventy-ninth and Ninety-seventh Street wharves, and regular trips back and forth between the ships and the shore will be made between the hours of 2:30 and 5 P. M.

Among the league members expected to take part in the trips of inspection are Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Colonel and Mrs. R. M. Thompson, General Horace Porter and guests, George C. Boldt, George C. Boldt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John D. Archbold, Allison V. Armour, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Baker, Jr., Otto M. Bannard, Bernard M. Baruch, Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Bourne, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Frick, Mr. and Mrs. William Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Vail, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Wickersham, Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Berwind, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Ledyard, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer L. Schiff, Mr. and Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sloan, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Judge and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Davison.

5,000 TARS AT THE GARDEN.

Uncle Sam's Fighting Men Enjoy Vaudeville and Boxing Bouts.

The old arena has been the scene of many impressive sights, but it is doubtful if ever before it had held so many men from the United States Navy or a more appreciative and enthusiastic audience. The doors were open at 7 o'clock and in a few minutes the sailors began to arrive in batches of tko and three, and then they started to come in squads of twenty or thirty. As they entered the Garden from Madison Avenue, each man was handed some cigars and a package of cigarettes. They took any seats they liked except in the boxes immediately surrounding the arena, which were reserved for invited civilians. Three bands furnished the music, as soon as one stopped the other started up, so that there was not a moment that there was not something doing.

A specially prepared program of nautical songs afforded the men an opportunity to join in the choruses, which they did lustily. Just before the entertainment started one of the orchestras started up "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." This brought forth vociferous applause, and every sailor in the Garden stood up and sang the refrain.

Joe Humphries opened the proceedings with a speech of welcome which brought down the house. The first part of the program was a number of high-class vaudeville turns, all of which were enthusiastically received. This was followed by numerous boxing bouts by ring celebrities of the past and present.

Each event was refereed by some noted person in the sporting world. The exhibitions were all three-round affairs, with eight-ounce gloves.

The first bout was between Young Weinert and Jack Saxby of Newark, and was refereed by Frank S. O'Neill, Chairman of the New York State Boxing Commission.

The funniest show of the evening was between "Kid" Griffo and Joe Bernstein, both old-time lightweights, who are now in vaudeville. It was a most realistic fight. The men pummelled each other all over the ring, and soon had the crowd yelling. In the second round Bernstein's nose started to bleed, from an attachment he had in his glove, and his face was soon smeared with "gore." In the third round Griffo was groggy. A short left to the jaw and he went down for the count. He was assisted to his corner by his second and refused to shake hands with his opponent. Half way down the aisle to their dressing room the men again started to fight, and the Sergeants at Arms, of whom there were about 100 from the different ships, rushed over to separate them. They were finally torn apart, smiled at each other, and went down the aisle arm and arm, after almost causing a small riot among the spectators.

The fighter who received the greatest reception was Terry McGovern, who refereed the bout between Sailor Fitz and Battling Levinsky. Cheer after cheer went up for the former champion and he had a hard job to refrain from making a speech.

Among the other boxers to show were Jack Britton, Mat Wells of England, Sailor Maddon, Benny Leonard, and Joe Jannette.

CONFER OVER WAR GAME.

Naval Officers at Newport Discuss 'Campaign' Against Fletcher's Fleet.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 13.—Rear Admiral Frank E. Beatty arrived here today in the scout cruiser Chester, followed by the minelayer San Francisco and the destroyers Cummings, Benham, and Balch, representing the enemy, or attacking fleet, in the coming war game, for a conference with Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, President of the Naval War College, regarding the campaign against the Atlantic fleet under Admiral Frank E. Fletcher. Admiral Knight will be the umpire of the game, using as his flagship the cruiser Brooklyn, now in the harbor coaling from the collier Jupiter, which arrived today.

The fleet gave a touch of warlike reality to these waters today, with salutes, visits, and the presence of Rear Admirals Knight, Beatty, Winslow, Cowie, and Stanford.

It is reported that the ships of the fleet will dock at their home yards next month, later making their base on Narragansett Bay, to remain until October, carrying on extensive drills and manoeuvres ashore and afloat.

Tomorrow afternoon Admiral Beatty will sail away with his fleet, hoping to "capture or destroy" Admiral Fletcher's fleet. Admiral Beatty has Lieutenant C. Thompson on his staff, and takes Lieutenant Commander Harry E. Yarnell of the Naval War College, who represents Admiral Fletcher. Admiral Knight will have with him as a member of his staff on the Brooklyn Lieutenant Commander William S. Pye of the Naval War College as assistant umpire, with Lieutenants William D. Puleston and Gaston D. Johnstone, attending the college course. Captain William S. Sims, commander of the Atlantic torpedo flotilla, has been assigned to the Brooklyn, representing Admiral Fletcher, and on the former's staff will be Lieutenant Commander Franck Taylor Evans, executive officer of the Training Station.

EDISON FITS OUT SUBMARINES.

Making Cells and Storage Batteries for Two of the Fleet.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., May 13.—The Edison Storage Battery Works here is busy making cells for the United States submarine E-2, which is being refitted, its lead batteries having been unsatisfactory. It is also constructing storage batteries for the submarine L-8, the first government-built submarine, which will be christened by Mrs. John Eyre Sloan, daughter of Thomas A. Edison.

It has been a long time since the Edison works have been so busy. Trade in all departments is reported good. All the buildings gutted by fire on Dec. 9 have been rebuilt and are being occupied.

BURNS LETTER BRINGS $405.

A letter of Robert Burns, dated Ellisland, Dec. 20, 1789, and addressed to Provost Marshall, incorporating an academical poem, was knocked down to George D. Smith for $405 at the sale yesterday in the Anderson Galleries of Part V. of the collection of the late John Boyd Thacher of Albany, N. Y.

Mr. Smith obtained for $325 a letter of Sir Francis Bacon, dated July 2, 1613, and addressed to King James I. He also gave $230 for a document signed "Fr. Bacon" and "Lo. Tresorer of ye Excheq'r" and dated Whitehall, Nov. 26, 1616. The paper is signed also by Sir William Knollys, Sir Fulke Greville and others.

Mr. Smith obtained for $22 a letter written on July 20, 1705, by Joseph Addison. James F. Drake bought for $19 a letter of Sir Jeffrey Amherst, dated New York, April 4, 1759, and addressed to Colonel John Bradstreet. Mr. Drake also paid $9 for a letter of Sophie Arnould, the famous wit and actress, dated Paris, Feb. 2, 1800.

A document signed by Johann Sebastian Bach, the great composer, brought $33. Mr. Smith gave $32 for a letter of John Baskerville, printer of the "Baskerville Bible," addressed to Robert Dodsley, poet and dramatist, and $12 for a document signed by Richard Baxter, the great English nonconformist. A music manuscript marked "No. 9," and authenticated as written by Beethoven, by A. Schindler, went for $62.50.

A letter of William Blake, the prophetic painter and author, was knocked down for $37 to Mr. Smith, who obtained for $16 a document signed by Thomas Blood, who waylaid and captured the Duke of Ormond and attempted to steal the crown jewels. He also paid $115 for an autograph letter signed by Lucrezia Borgia, Ferrara, Oct. 14, 1515, and $62 for a letter of James Boswell, Johnson's biographer, written to his daughter.

The total was $2,500. The sale will be continued today.

ITALY'S POPULATION GROWS

Deaths and Illiteracy Decrease While Savings Increase.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, April 25.—National statistics have just been issued which are now of unusual interest because of Italy's international situation. The first thought roused by a contemplation of these statistics is that Italy does not suffer, as does France, from a diminution of population.

According to the last census (1911) the population of the Kingdom surpassed 36,500,000, so that with less emigration lately and less mortality the figures have probably risen now to about 40,000,000. Between 1901 and 1911 the medium augmentation of the population was 6.5 per cent. in the thousand, in the whole Kingdom, the greatest increase being in the north, the lowest in the Abruzzi, with 0.7 per cent., now further lowered by the great earthquake, while of the big cities Naples holds the palm.

In Italy, as in other countries, more males are born than females, but as the census shows a predominance of the latter there must be more mortality among boys than girls. In 1901 there was a proportion of 1,011 women to 1,000 men, while in 1911 the proposition had risen to 1,036. The marriage statistics remain about the same since 1872, 7.50 in every thousand inhabitants in that year, 7.56 in 1908, and 7.88 in 1911. The birth rate has somewhat decreased, as it is now 32.4, while forty years ago it was 39.3. To compensate for this the death rate is less. In 1872 30.8 per cent. of the people died, while in 1912 only 18.2.

It is interesting to know that the greater number of deaths among children does not take place in the poorer districts. Lombardy, centre of industry and Socialism, holds the record for numbers; the lowest number is in Sardinia, savage and rude.

Crime in Italy is on the decrease. The number of murders since 1908 has steadily gone down, the largest number being in Campania and Sicily and the lowest in the Veneto. The palm in suicides goes to Liguria, sixteen in every 100,000, and also to the Abruzzi, among the richest provinces of the country. The savings of the people are increasing yearly as wages improve and safe depositories are provided for them, so that at the end of 1912 there were 6,826,000,000 lire.

Illiteracy is also decreasing, so that from 60 per cent. in 1872 it has gone down to 48 per cent. in 1901 and to 37.6 in 1911. The north is practically free from it, only 11 per cent., while the proportions are greater in the south. But with it all progress is being made in every direction, and Italy may well look hopefully forward to the future.

Sale of Bibles Increases Despite War

A large increase in the sale of Bibles during the past year was reported at the annual meeting of the American Bible Society. The report shows an increase of over a million, in spite of the fact that large parts of the earth were cut off from communication because of war. The society announced its intention of establishing a Bible distribution point at Panama within the coming year.

Hurt Her Feelings Again.

"I've hurt my wife's feelings again," said Mr. Meekton.

"By something you said?"

FLAG INCIDENT STIRS PEACE COURT DINNER

Dr. John W. Hill Denounces Americans Who Retain the Hyphen in Times Like These.

MEN NAMED TO DRAW PLAN

Speakers Foresee End of Wars and the World on the Basis of a Universal Republic.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 13.—Delegates of the World Court Congress burst into applause this afternoon when Dr. John Wesley Hill of New York, in an impromptu speech, pointed dramatically to a huge American flag above his head and shouted:

"Any English-American, German-American, French-American or other hyphenated American who does not support that flag in the present situation is unworthy of the citizenship he owns."

An orchestra in an alcove began to play "The Star-Spangled Banner," the audience rose and sang the hymn, and many wept.

Dr. Hill's declaration was not made at a regular session of the Congress, but at a dinner given by the business men of Cleveland to the delegates. The Congress had forbidden comment on the war situation.

To Formulate World Court Plan.

John Hays Hammond, Chairman of the Congress, today announced a commission of delegates to draw up a definite plan for a world court of justice. Its members are James Brown Scott, Washington jurist; Theodore Marburg, Baltimore, former Minister to Belgium; Henry Lane Wilson, ex-Ambassador to Mexico; Bainbridge Colby, New York, attorney; Judge D. C. Woodmanze, Cincinnati; Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks, New York. Mr. Hammond, by the ruling of the Congress, also is a member of the commission.

Henry Lane Wilson, Judge D. D. Woodmanze, and Williams Dudley Foulke were the principal speakers at to-night's session. Mr. Wilson gave his attention to the limitations and possibilities of a world court.

"The court must be a tribunal of spontaneous appeal," he said, "and behind every decree should lie the powers of the united signatory nations in the form of an irresistible police power, or of an international ban, which is a more terrible weapon than fleets and armies.

"A world court should be international in its attributes. The unhappy consequences following the interference of this Government in Mexico should serve as a warning. It frequently happens that governments, from policy, caution, or timidity, turn deaf ears to the just complaints of their nationals abroad. Shall such nationals have no recourse? Here lies an undoubted sphere for a world court."

World Republic Drawing Nearer.

Mr. Foulke declared that "the development of our national Constitution and judiciary foreshadows in its general features the development of some coming federation of the United States of Europe or the world."

He pointed out the gradual union of mankind in first small and then large units through family, clan, tribe, city, and nation, and finally the empire or great federated republic. "Next," he said, "will come the world empire or world federation.

"It was at the outbreak of this war that the world found a number of great powers in alliance. It is at its conclusion that we may hope for a league of the powerful nations which will have for its purpose the maintenance of a permanent peace."

"If a court such as we propose had existed a year ago," said Judge Woodmanze, "Austria never would have made the demand she did on Serbia. Austria's normal rights in the matter would have been quickly determined. Today she and other nations would not be in the throes of war, and Austria herself would not be faced with the possibility of extinction as a nation."

Henry Clews Praises Wilson.

Henry Clews, the principal speaker at this morning's session, praised President Wilson's effort in behalf of peace.

"While yielding to none in my lifelong devotion to the principles of the Republican Party," he said, "due credit must be given to the present Administration for its accomplishments for the cause of peace, President Wilson has done noble work."

Mr. Clews said he believed that universal peace, through the application of an international court of justice, would ultimately prevail. Of the present war, Mr. Clews said:

"After all is said as to the causes of the war, the fact remains that militarism was its predominating motive, and back of that was the personal ambition of certain rulers and their immediate followers."

The address of Emerson McMillin, New York banker and capitalist, dealt with a tentative plan for the formation of the proposed world court, based upon the population and commerce of the nations.

Mr. McMillin predicted that in less than a generation after the inauguration of the international court, international law will assume a stability to which it has not hitherto attained. "And in the court we propose," he said, "the sovereignty of every nation will be recognized. The smallest nation will stand on a footing level with that of the greatest."

"The European war has raised the demand for an international court to a worldwide propaganda, organized and unorganized," said Danys P. Myers, Boston, a member of the Board of Directors of the World Peace Foundation, in an address following Mr. McMillin's. "If that world cry can be resisted by Governments, the judgment of many people is sadly at fault.

"I cannot believe that the court of arbitral justice, as now proposed, can fail. The world knows now, as it never knew before, its need for international justice."

Invitation to the Nations.

Two resolutions were presented to the congress this morning. One recommended to the Congress of the United States a joint resolution inviting the nations to join in establishing The Hague a court of nations and for an international army and navy.

The other provides that the next Hague conference be urged to provide a penalty for the infraction of its conventions, or for a refusal to submit disputes to arbitration that a commercial embargo shall be declared against the offending nation.

Tomorrow will be the last day of the congress. The final meeting will be held in the evening and John Mitchell will be the principal speaker.

TEN DAYS IN OPEN BOAT.

Seven Men with Capt. Nuss Died of Exposure and Starvation.

Captain A. Nuss, who commanded the American bark Matanzas, which foundered on her voyage from Newport News to Cadiz in April, arrived yesterday from South America on the Brazilian steamship Rio Janeiro and went to his home in Mystic, Conn.

According to the story told by the Captain, he left the bark in the long boat, with nine of the crew, and drifted about on the open sea for ten days before they were picked up by a steamship bound for Brazel. By that time only himself and two of the seamen were left alive in the boat. The remaining seven had died from exposure and want of food and water. Five days after they had left the Matanzas four of the men died and the other three died on the ninth day. The two seamen who were landed with him at Rio Janeiro are now in the hospital and doing well.

The Matanzas, which sailed from Newport News on March 11, was a wooden vessel of 929 tons register, owned by Pendleton Brothers of 130 Pearl Street, and was built at Bath, Me., in 1889. She was 196 feet 3 inches long, 37 feet 4 inches beam, and 17 feet 5 inches depth of hold.

PRINCETON WINS SAGE GIFT.

$500,000 Now Pledged to Build Dining Halls.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 13.—Princeton's new dining halls, which will cost $500,000, have been assured according to an announcement made by President Hibben today through gifts from Mrs. Russell Sage of $250,000, and smaller subscriptions from other persons. The terms of Mrs. Sage's gift demanded that her donation should be equalled by July 1 of this year by other subscriptions.

Work on the new buildings, which will complete the Sage group on the university campus, will be begun before the end of this month. The new dining halls will be partly finished by next March and will be used at once for the two lower classes. The work will be completed finally by Sept. 1, 1916.

ICELAND SHIP'S CREW TOASTED AT DINNER

GULLFOSS AFTER SUPPLIES

Speakers Remind Diners That Columbus Was Told About the New Land by the Monks of Iceland.

Sixty natives of Iceland gave a dinner last night at Peck's restaurant, 140 Fulton Street to Captain Peterson and the crew of the Gullfoss, the first ship owned by Icelanders to arrive in this country in about 900 years.

Last September the Hermod, which is not owned in Iceland, came to this country for foodstuffs for the 90,000 inhabitants of Iceland, whose usual supply of flour and other commodities from England and Norway and Denmark was cut off by the war. The Gullfoss will take back a cargo of about 900 tons, chiefly of flour. The Gullfoss is the fist ship of the Icelandic Steamship Company, a newly formed national organization in which nearly every family in Iceland is a shareholder.

The diners were reminded last night by Captain F. W. Hvoslef, agent for the Gullfoss, and by other speakers that it was Iceland which had originally given America a place on the map of the world.

"The discovery of Vinland the Good by Lief Ericsson, son of Eric the Red," he said, "in about the year 1,000 is so well authenticated as to be no longer a matter of mere tradition. There is a chain of evidence to prove that Columbus passed a Winter in Iceland before his memorable voyage to the West Indies and that the monks in Iceland gave Columbus the first information about that wonderful land to the west named Vinland the Good.

"Let us remember that the Icelander Thorvald Ericsson was the first white man and Christian who was buried in American soil, that Thorfinn founded the first European colony in the Western Hemisphere, and that the infant Snorri was the child of European blood to open his eyes in the New World."

Henry Goddard Leach, Secretary of the Scandinavian-American Foundation, said that in spite of its population of only 90,000, Iceland possessed more than 100 genuine poets. Einar Jonsson, an Icelander, he said, was one of the greatest living sculptors and the dramatist, Sigurjonson, one of the greatest living dramatists. Sigurjonson's play "Bjergeyvind," he said, would soon be produced in this country, probably at the Little Theatre.

Other speakers were Olaf Olafson, Chairman; Captain Peterson of the Gullfoss, Vice-Consul Hans Rye of Denmark, T. H. Bjornson, and S. T. Olafson. A poem in Icelandic composed for the occasion by J. Johansen was read and Icelandic songs were sung by Einar Hjaltasted.

Conductor Little Killed.

William P. Little, 24 years old, of 1,913 Balcom Avenue, the Bronx, conductor on a New York, Westchester & Boston Railroad train, was killed yesterday by falling out of a side door of his train just south of the 180th Street Station. When Motorman James J. Ehrman stopped at the 180th Street Station he waited for the signal to start. It did not come, and he found that Little was missing. He walked back along the tracks and 500 feet south of the station found Little's body. Superintendent Smith of the line said Little had evidently broken a rule of the road by opening the side door while the train was in motion. Coroner Flynn accepted this theory.

SMITH PAVES WAY FOR MINIMUM WAGE

Offers Constitutional Amendment to Authorize Legislation for Women and Children.

FOR FLEXIBLE LABOR LAW

Commission Proposed with Power to Relax Statute Provisions—Plan for County Home Rule.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 13.—Power would be vested in the Legislature to enact a minimum wage law affecting women and children under an amendment to the Constitution proposed at the session of the Constitutional Convention today by Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic leader of the lower house. The State Factory Commission, of which Mr. Smith was Vice Chairman, in the course of an investigation of labor conditions in this State, reached the conclusion that a minimum wage should be established. The plan roused much opposition and the constitutionality of the proposal was challenged.

Two other amendments affecting labor were presented by Mr. Smith. One gives the Legislature authority to vest in any commission or administrative agency the power to modify provisions of the labor law to meet emergencies. Another would give the Legislature power to prohibit manufacturing in tenement houses.

"My minimum wage amendment is offered for the purpose of giving the Legislature full power to enact a minimum wage law for women and minors," said Mr. Smith. "The constitutionality of a minimum wage law even for women and minors has been challenged in this and other States. Whether it is advisable to enact such a law is a matter concerning which there may well be a difference of opinion, but it is clear that the Legislature should have the power to deal as it considers advisable with a subject which is of such vital importance to the State. The investigations of the Factory Commission showed that thousands of women were receiving less than a sum sufficient to maintain them in health and decent comfort and that this condition was inimical to the health and morals of the women workers and to the welfare of the State generally.

"The second proposed amendment gives the Legislature power to authorize a commission, board, or other administrative agency to make rules and regulations; to vary, modify, or supplement the provisions of the labor law and kindred statutes to meet different conditions so that safety for employes may be secured and substantial justice done to all concerned. The investigations of the Factory Commission showed how unfair it was to have a rigid, inflexible labor law.

"It has often been urged that it would be an unlawful delegation of the Legislature's power to give a board power to vary the provisions of a statute, when, under special circumstances, they were unnecessary or would involve hardship if enforced to the letter. This amendment is offered for the purpose of meeting such constitutional objection.

"The third amendment gives the Legislature power in its discretion to prohibit manufacturing in tenements in whole or in part. The Jacobs case, decided some years ago, held that it was unconstitutional for the Legislature to prohibit the manufacture of cigars in tenement houses. Since that time it has always been contended that the Legislature had no power to prohibit manufacturing in tenements, regardless of the evil and insanitary conditions under which such manufacturing might be carried on.

"The Factory Commission in its investigations showed that manufacturing in tenements destroyed home life, bred disease, enlisted the services of children of a tender age, and decreased wages to a starvation point. I am not prepared to say that all manufacturing in tenements should be abolished, but I do maintain that the Legislature should have power to deal with this important problem as occasion may arise."

Another labor amendment introduced by Joseph Rosch, a Republican delegate from Sullivan County, makes lockouts, strikes, and all forms of industrial differences subject to statutory regulation and provides for the creation of councils of conciliation and boards of arbitration to settle industrial differences.

Courtland Nicoll, Republican delegate from New York, proposed an amendment under which Judges of the Court of Appeals would be appointed by the Governor.

Civil actions in the Supreme Court would be tried before one Justice or three Justices instead of before a jury, unless either party to the case demands a jury trial within ten days after issue is joined under an amendment presented by Arthur J. Baldwin, Democrat of New York.

Home rule for counties is provided in an amendment introduced by Henry R. Barrett, Republican, of Westchester. The amendment limits the right of the Legislature to enact laws affecting counties to statues general in their application and would give so-called Governing Boards of counties the right to repeal all present laws affecting only their respective counties. The amendment also makes it mandatory for the Legislature to enact not later than May 1, 1917, a law providing for three alternative forms of county Government. In a city which includes two or more counties it is provided that the powers of the County Governing Boards may devolve upon the City Government.

Senator George A. Blauvelt, a Democratic delegate representing the Richmond-Rockland District, presented an amendment which would lighten the burdens of taxpayers by providing that the surplus in the Sinking Funds of the State, which now exceeds $20,000,000, may be appropriated by the Legislature for the same purpose for which the debt was created.

FATHER CHIDWIC PLEADS.

Urges Constitutional Amendment for Spanish War Veterans.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 13.—The Rev. John D. Chidwick, who was Chaplain of the Maine when she was sunk in the harbor of Havana, offered the opening prayer in the Constitutional Convention today. He invoked the Divine guidance for the President to the end that the decision he should reach in the present crisis should rebound to the glory of God and the United States. Father Chidwick appeared later in the day before the Civil Service Committee of the convention to advocate an amendment introduced by William M. K. Olcott which gives veterans of the Spanish war the same preference in the civil service of the State which veterans of the civil war now enjoy.

"The way to keep the fires of patriotism alive and strong," said Father Chidwick, "is by sanctioning and approving the acts these men performed. Some one has called the Spanish war veterans 'an aggregation of adventurers.' No one had the hardihood to call them adventurers when they went out valiantly to do their full duty to the flag, without a thought of gain and not counting the loss."

Lemuel Ell Quigg appeared in opposition to the amendment.

"These men are getting a pension," he said. "Well, any one who winks at war can get a pension these days. There is no reason why a man who merely does his duty should have a preference. Going to war is part of the duty of every American citizen. Under the present pension system our veterans are amply rewarded, at least so it seems to me."

Speaking of the civil service system in general, Mr. Quigg said:

"Frankly, I am a spoilsman. I would like the law fixed so that appointments could be made from the competitive list, but in such a way that the Governor or a department head need not name any man not of his own party if he should not wish to.

"I do not believe the people are prepared to go back to the old spoils system, however. I have introduced an amendment providing that all appointments and promotions shall be made after a competitive examination. My plan provides for no preference, no exemption. The present constitution provides that competitive examinations shall be held 'as far as practicable,' and that makes the present merit system a contemptible fraud. I say it again: Sincerely, I am a spoilsman."

JUDGE DIKE IS REBUKED.

Criticised by Justice Benedict for Cross-Examining a Defendant.

In granting a certificate of reasonable doubt yesterday to Leo Friedman, recently convicted of petit larceny before County Judge Norman S. Dike and a jury in Brooklyn, Supreme Court Justice Benedecit criticised the trial Judge for interfering in the cross-examination of the defendant.

Friedman was tried on a charge of having stolen a gold watch and chain from the home of Walter E. Seeman. The identification of the defendant by Henrietta McGurk was held to be faulty by the attorney for Friedman, and Judge Dike, according to Justice Benedict, interrupted the cross-examination by the District Attorney, "and took it upon himself to cross-examine the defendant further, in an apparent endeavor to bring out clearly the fact that the defendant was testifying falsely, or, at least, that the story which he told lacked probability. The worst criminal has the right to a fair and impartial trial by unprejudiced triers," continued Justice Benedict, "and he cannot have such a trial if the Judge presiding does not hold the scales of justice at a true balance, nor if he abdicates has high function as a Judge and becomes the prosecutor as well."

Friedman was released in $750 bail on the certificate of reasonable doubt, pending an appeal.

SEES HUSBAND STABBED.

Mrs. Martin Lane Says Assailants Had Demanded Money.

The screams of a woman brought Policeman Gaffney running to Pelham Parkway and Eastchester Road, the Bronx, last evening, and he found Mrs. Margaret Lane bending over her young husband, Martin, who lay on the ground stabbed in the stomach and back. The young woman was hysterical, but she told the policeman two well-dressed men had stopped her and her husband as they were on their way to their home, 232 McDonald Street, and demanded money. Lane had refused to give them any and they had attacked him, knocking him down and then stabbing him while Mrs. Lane stood by screaming. They had run before Gaffney arrived.

The policeman telephoned for Dr. Oguri from Fordham Hospital and for the reserves of the Westchester Station, who came under command of Lieutenant Robinson and searched the neighborhood. The men escaped, however. Dr. Oguri treated Mrs. Lane, who was hysterical, and took her home in the ambulance, continuing then to the hospital with her husband. He said Lane's wounds were severe, but his chances of recovery were good.

CITY SENDS ONLY 6 TO FAIR.

Mayor and Committee to Aid New York Day at San Francisco.

The municipal party which was to travel to San Francisco by special train to take part in the New York Day on May 26 at the Panama-Pacific Exposition has dwindled down to a committee of five. Mayor Mitchel will be there, and it was intended there should be with him not only a committee of five, consisting of President McAneny, Borough President Pounds, Alderman Frank Dowling, Alderman Frank E. Stenevenson, and Albert E. Hull of the Finance Department, but a subcommittee of city officials with City Chamberlain Bruere as Chairman.

The subcommittee, however, has failed to materialize. Controller Prendergast took the stand that there was no reason why the city should send any of the officials except the committee of five, and it then turned out that none of those named for the subcommittee could go except Bridge Commissioner Kracke. He has now withdrawn. Mr. McAneny must serve as Acting Mayor in Mr. Mitchel's absence, and his place on the committee will be taken by Alderman Henry H. Curran.

Auto Truck Hits Load of Dynamite.

An automobile truck owned by the Sterling Trucking Company of 518-520 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, bumped into a horse-drawn vehicle carrying 1,000 pounds of dynamite at 110th Street and Lenox Avenue yesterday. The automobile truck, driven by William Harper, of 1,720 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, struck the dynamite wagon, owned by Charles H. Ditmar, of Baychester N. Y., a glancing blow. Harper turned his vehicle aside, and in doing so smashed a wheel of a limousine owned by G. D. Dickey of 27 East Eighty-seventh Street. The dynamite wagon was not damaged.

GOV. WHITMAN FINDS MORE WAYS TO SAVE

TWO ITEMS PUZZLE HIM

Proposed Expenditures for Removal of Grade Crossings Hang in the Balance Because of Protests.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 13.—Governor Whitman today, in his scrutiny of financial bills, eliminated appropriations aggregating $89,682 for the Banking and Insurance Departments, the office of the Secretary of State, and the up-State Public Service Commission. The Governor has worked four days over the bills and has eliminated items aggregating $1,411,765.

When the Governor stopped work tonight an appropriation of $352,000 for the removal of grade crossings in the territory over which the up-State Public Service Commission exercises supervision, and another of $200,000 for similar work in New York City were in the balance. The Governor indicated that he would like to cut out both of these items and let the commissions worry along with a reappropriation of $325,000 remaining from sums set aside for grade crossing work by previous Legislatures.

Seymour Van Santvoord, Chairman of the up-State Public Service Commission, urged the Governor to let the $500,000 appropriation for the up-State work remain.

"It is more essential that grade crossings be eliminated up-State than in New York City," said Mr. Van Santvoord. "There is a grade crossing in Bronxville which we must take care of. It is a hub from which a number of roads with heavy traffic radiate. There have been many people killed and injured at that spot in recent years. The very day I went down to inspect it a woman was killed."

"In this very bill," he said, "there has been set aside for up-State $700,000 against $200,000 for New York City. This amount will no more than pay for grade crossings which have been cut out at Far Rockaway and Main Street, Flushing. On Atlantic Avenue there are twenty-four grade crossings in a six-mile stretch, all of which should be done away with. Fifteen people are killed and twenty-five injured annually in New York City as a result of grade crossings. It would take $30,000,000 to eliminate all the grade crossings in the city. Of this amount 25 per cent. should be supplied by the State. And yet all that New York City has received in eighteen years is $500,000, while over $1,000,000 has been allotted to other sections of the State." Governor Whitman said he would defer final action in the matter.

Banking Department	$9,380
Insurance Department	57,802
Secretary of State	12,000
Public Service Commission, Second District	10,300
Total for the day	$89,682
Total for previous days	1,322,083
Grand total for four days	$1,411,765

Superintendent of Banks Eugene L. Richards told the Governor that he had kept his appropriation $10,000 below last year's, although he had many additional employes. The items cut from the budget of this department were to pay the cost of printing lists of unclaimed savings banks deposits and copies of the revised banking laws.

When the Insurance Department was taken up, one of the first items to catch the Governor's eye was $750 appropriated for the expenses of First Deputy Henry D. Appleton, including a trip to California. That was cut out. Another item was for additional employes—$3,928.

"Zip! it comes out," said the Governor, drawing his blue pencil through the line.

An item of $5,000 for traveling expenses for the Superintendent and appropriations aggregating $10,000 for new employes also were cut out in rapid succession. A printing item of $25,000 also was exterminated.

Appropriations for the Prison Department, the State Engineer's Department, and the Departments of Education and Public Works will be scrutinized tomorrow.

Israel T. Deyo of Broome and Ray B. Smith of Onondaga, both Republicans, offered amendments in the Constitutional Convention today which would permit the Governor to decrease a direct tax rate after the adjournment of the Legislature if decreases in the appropriation bills should justify such action. Without this timely expedient, Governor Whitman this year will be unable to cut down the direct tax without reconvening the Legislature, despite the prospect that by his present scrutiny of the financial bills he may reduce the total amount of appropriations enough to justify a reduction in the direct tax rate.

TRACED THROUGH WOMAN.

Fugitive Long Sought by New York Police Arrested in Atlantic City.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 13.—Sought by thepolice of New York, Frank H. Thompson, who is said to have been an associate of Charles Gondorf, a convicted wiretapper, was arrested today in Ventnor, a fashionable suburb of this city, where he had settled as a member of the exclusive Summer colony. After the police search had led from coast to coast the prisoner was finally found through his friendship for Miss K. Bradley, a Chicago girl. After his trail had grown cold and the police efforts to locate him had lessened it was through Miss Bradley that they finally got on the trail again.

Thompson was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Police Inspector Faurot of New York charging him with grand larceny. Beyond the brief record of the New York Detective Bureau little was known of the offense for which Thompson was wanted. Holz Furtner, of 342 West 122d Street, New York, charges that he was swindled out of a large sum of money by three men. The trio conducted a bogus "Stock Exchange," where, it is alleged, Furtner lost his money. Thompson is alleged to have been one of these men.

The arraignment before a local Magistrate was kept as quiet as possible. The evidence presented simply identified Thompson as "Walter Moore," wanted for grand larceny. The prisoner wanted to waive extradition. He was held in bond, however, for extradition papers and will be returned to New York tomorrow.

BOOKSELLERS CHEER FLAG.

Wave of Patriotism Sweeps Over Guests at Annual Dinner.

The fifteenth annual convention of the American Booksellers Association closed last night with a dinner at the Hotel Astor, which 700 members attended. The remarks of two of the speakers who talked about the war were followed with intense interest and the diners responded enthusiastically when patriotic airs were played by the orchestra.

John J. Wood, President of the association, was toastmaster, and he first introduced Professor Edwin J. Clapp of New York University. Professor Clapp said he had been told not to speak about the war, but was going to put such instructions aside.

"It looks like fate," he said. "There were no economic causes behind the war, but there was an intricate system of alliances between the countries, and when the conflagration started it spread all over Europe."

Another point that Professor Clapp made was that Germany could not be "starved out." That country, he said, had found the most ingenious ways to provide substitutes for the articles which were cut off. Dr. Hendrik Willem van Loon gave a stirring account of the siege of Antwerp and pictured the horrors of the battlefield.

These officers were elected yesterday afternoon: President, J. H. Wood; First Vice President, W. S. Lewis; Treasurer, Eugene L. Herr; Secretary, L. A. Keating.

VAN RIPER GETS NEW TRIAL.

Vanoscope Suit Which Resulted in Big Verdict to be Reheard.

Judge Hunt handed down late last evening in the Federal District Court a decision granting Louis C. Van Riper a new trial of the suit which was brought against him by William J. Robertson, and resulted recently in a verdict against Mr. Van Riper for $100,000.

Mr. Robertson was claiming from Mr. Van Riper compensation for an alleged breach of contract to sell the patent rights of the Vanoscope Company, of which Mr. Van Riper is President. The trial lasted for two weeks, and among the exhibits placed was an alleged prospectus of the Vanoscope Company. In this it was stated that the company had sold its patent rights in England for $670,000, and counsel for Mr. Van Riper maintained that this should not have been submitted to the jury and had resulted in the jurors conceiving an inflated idea of the value of the patent rights. Judge Hunt has upheld this contention.

Nebraska's Band at Concert.

The band of the United States battleship Nebraska will take part next Sunday afternoon in the concert given under the auspices of the city at Hunter College in aid of those left destitute by the loss of the liner Lusitania. Captain George W. Logan and the other officers of the ship will also attend. The singers who will appear are Miss Rose Bryant, Miss Marie Stoddard, and James Stanley, and Maurice Koffman will be violinist.

Who was Marie Dupont?

THOUSANDS of reader-detectives are on her trail! Roger Gavock, back to New York after twenty years' absence, accidentally jostles her on Fifth Avenue. She replies to his apology in French—their eyes meet—whereat she claims herself unable to utter another French word.

They part. Gavock is certain they have met before.

That evening!

Gavock relates the curious incident to Guy Amarinth, son of an old friend.

Not knowing her identity, the young man declares she conceals French associations because of fearful shame. Amarinth tells of the adorable girl he hopes to marry. He leaves the room. On his desk Gavock sees her picture.

It is Marie Dupont!

Gavock, stunned, accompanies them to the dance.

In the coming installment you ask yourself: Why should Marie Dupont's dance electrify even her closest friends? What devil-born recklessness makes her consent to run out and marry Amarinth during the intermission?

Do you connect it with the terror-stricken face of the orchestra leader? With the unaccountable consternation that swept the whole room? Untangle this mystery and value your thrills at . . . . . .

PLUNGES FROM SHIP TO REJOIN FRIENDS

Walsh Jumps Into the Sound When Strain of Parting Proves Too Strong.

BUT HE SWIMS ASHORE

And After a Night in Jail Can Haunt Once More His Beloved Gas Tanks.

When the Tennessee of the Bay State Line pulled out of her pier, 19 East River, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, bound for Boston, there wasn't a happier man on board than Michael Walsh, 29 years old, of 343 East Forty-seventh Street. Walsh, who is a teamster, is better known among the drivers and stevedores of the riverfront as "Paddy the Irish"—in fact so much better known that few of them had a very clear idea just what his other name was. It didn't matter anyway.

Walsh was just as happy as a teamster might be who was leaving New York behind him at the end of a busy season and was off for the Maine woods where the lumbering is good and a fine Summer job awaited him. He stayed happy all the way up the river until the coal and wood yards and the dear old gas tanks of the waterfront where he had lived and teamstered swung into view. At the sight of them Walsh's eyes dimmed and passengers on the Tennessee's hurricane deck saw him whip out a big red handkerchief and rub them hard.

Ther was a delegation of Walsh's waterfront friends down at the pier at the foot of Fifty-third Street, and it was easy to make out their faces as he watched them waving good-by. As Walsh waved back the other passengers could see that he was crying like a child.

Then suddenly the waving stopped, and they saw Walsh seize the rail, vault over it and plunge headlong into the river. A moment later a yell of delight came from the shore as Walsh's head bobbed up in the wake of the steamer and he began to swim. The tide was running strong and he was carried upstream at a great rate. So also was the Tennessee, whose Captain had stopped the engines at the first cry of "man overboard."

The boat had drifted up to Seventy-seventh Street by the time Walsh, swimming lustily, had got near enough to the Manhattan shore to be hauled out by two men on the pier at the foot of Fifty-seventh Street. There Policeman Coffey took charge of him and held him until the Tennessee's Captain returned, saw that the man wasn't drowned, and then with a scornful blast turned the ship about and resumed the trip to Boston.

Walsh's friends cheered him as he was marched dripping through the streets to the East Fifty-first Street Station, where, for want of a better reason, he was charged with attempted suicide and locked for the night. Lieut. Rayner said he thought Walsh ought to be thoroughly dry by morning.

OTTO F. FLEISCHMANN DIES.

His Brother Raoul Gives Blood in Vain to Save Suicide.

Otto F. Fleischman of 4 West Seventy-seventh Street, who shot himself on Wednesday in the Holland House, where he had registered as Louis J. Bernhardt, died yesterday afternoon in Bellevue Hospital. His brother, Raoul H. Fleischmann, gave more than a pint of his blood in order to prolong the wounded man's life, but the patient failed to rally after the blood transfusion.

When Mr. Fleischmann reached the hospital he was placed at once upon the operating table. The X-rays were used to locate the bullet, but Dr. John Douglas found the patient was too weak from loss of blood to allow the bullet to be removed. It was early yesterday morning that blood transfusion was decided upon.

With Mr. Fleischmann when he died were Charles R. and Raoul H. Fleischmann, his brothers, his sister and Dr. Douglas. Immediately after Mr. Fleischmann's death his relatives left in an automobile.

Mr. Fleischmann was 33 years old and unmarried. He was the President of the Fleischmann Vehicle Company, of 818 East Eightieth Street. We was a son of the late Louis Fleischmann, who founded the Fleischmann Bakery and for years maintained a bread line at Broadway and Eleventh Street.

COBB TO TAKE LONG REST.

Writer Defers Trip to War Zone Pending Convalescence.

Irvin S. Cobb, war correspondent of The Saturday Evening Post, will be unable to return to the battle front in June, as he had planned. His physicians say it will be several months before he will be sufficiently recovered from his illness to undertake the journey. While Mr. Cobb has improved steadily since an operation at the Polyclinic Hospital on May 1 for abdominal trouble, the shock and pain have sapped his strength. He is not able to sit up in bed.

Mr. Cobb asked yesterday that the published report that he had been near death in the past few days be denied. He is confident he is fast improving and expects to leave the Polyclinic within the next ten days. At Mr. Cobb's home in the Hendrick Hudson apartments, Riverside Drive and 110th Street, it was said last night that as soon as he could be moved he would be taken there for several weeks and thence to the country for convalescence. He is making plans for another trip to the war zone as soon as he recovers his strength. It is expected this will be not before August or September.

DRUG SELLERS TO PRISON.

Graupner Stored a Case Holding $20,000 Worth of Narcotics.

A large case, containing from $15,000 to $20,000 worth of drugs, among which were 60,000 heroin tablets and several thousand ounces of cocaine in powdered and crystal form, was produced yesterday in the Federal District Court before Judge A. N. Hand, when Edward W. Graupner, a druggist of 700 Second Avenue, pleaded guilty to selling smoking opium illegally to Chinamen. The case had been seized at the Manhattan Storage Warehouse, Lexington Avenue and Forty-second Street, Assistant District Attorney Harold A. Content said, where Graupner posed as Joseph A. Baron, a dealer in antiques. He stored the drugs as a lot of curios.

He was arrested on April 15 by Customs Inspector Collins and the drug squad of Lieutenant Scherb. Mr. Content believes that Graupner has been for years connected directly or indirectly with every important deal in prohibited drugs in this city, and he was arrested before on Feb. 24 in connection with this trade.

He was then taken before Magistrate Nolan and charged with a violation of the Public Health act on the strength of his possession of 85 bottles of morphine, 145 bottles of heroin, 16 large bottles of cocaine, 168 ounces of crude gum opium, 54 ounces of powdered opium, and 70 ounces of graanular opium. He pleaded guilty in Special Sessions and sentence was deferred on him there to admit of his arraignment in the Federal Court.

Mr. Content told Judge Hand that Graupner had sold one Chinaman as much opium as the ordinary physician would prescribe for a family in two and a half years, and the Judge then sentenced him to three years in Atlanta Penitentiary.

Abraham Lewis, alias Abraham Harris or Fat Abie, of 1,468 Fifth Avenue received a similar sentence after he had pleaded guilty to the possession of six bottles of heroin and six of cocaine, as well as an opium smoking layout. He had been arrested twice previously, but when he was before the District Court the last time sentence was suspended on account of the evidence he had given to the Government against Alexander de Maio, who was tried for the murder of Leo Hobson, who was slain in a Harlem hallway over a quarrel with the opium ring.

Hom Kee Fong, alias Lee Hong or Lee Gong, who was arrested by Customs Inspectors Lewis, Collins, and Kyte, also pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Hand to concealing smoking opium. He was sentenced to one year and one day in Atlanta Penitentiary.

FRANK AND SASS ARE HELD.

Accused of Hiding Diamonds Worth $40,000 to Avoid Creditors.

Max Frank and Max Sass of the bankrupt firm of Frank & Sass of 45 John Street were arraigned yesterday before Commissioner Houghton and held in $3,500 bail each on the charge of having caused the disappearance of about $40,000 worth of diamonds and other jewels from their assets.

The men went into bankruptcy on May 25 and their assets were said to be only $750. Assistant District Attorney McDonald, who made the complaint, said that when a number of creditors called on Frank & Sass the latter said they had $7,000 worth of diamonds in a safe, and that if the creditors did not accept their offer of settlement they would sell these gems and use the proceeds to fight prosecution. A detective was employed by the creditors, and is prepared to testify, it is alleged, that he followed Frank next day and saw him remove the diamonds from a safe deposit vault at 170 Broadway.

$25,000 FOR WILLARD.

Billy Gibson Offers Champion Ten-Round Bout with Coffey.

Billy Gibson, manager of Jim Coffey, the Roscommon Giant yesterday offered Champion Jess Willard $25,000 and an interest in the motion pictures if the latter will agree to box Coffey in New York City on July 4. Gibson says patrons of boxing agree that Coffey is entitled to a match with the present champion. In his challenge Gibson says:

"I have talked this matter over with Jack Curley, one of the Willard syndicate and he informs me that Willard is signed up with a Wild West Show. There seems to be no reason why Willard should not meet Jim Coffey here, say on July 4.

"I am prepared to offer the champion $25,0000 flat and part of the motion picture profits. No boxer has ever received this amount of money for a ten-round-no-decision contest in any part of this country before.

"I am ready to post a certified check and will guarantee to hold this great match in New York City. Jim Coffey is being challenged by almost every middleweight and light heavyweight and some welterweights.

"Coffey's one ambition is to bring the championship back to the Irish race, and it is my belief that the public all over the country believe the Roscommon Giant has an even chance with the present champion."

Matt Wells Here for Work.

Matt Wells, the former English lightweight champion, arrived here Wednesday on the Saxonia, looking for matches with the leading men of his weight in this country. Wells could get plenty of fighting in France and Belgium, but because of defective hearing he was refused by both the British army and navy. When he was not permitted to fight for his country the British boxer rendered aid to his country in another form: He gave boxing instructions to more than 10,000 naval militia recruits in Crystal Palace, London, and two-thirds of these men are now fighting in the Dardanelles.

The former English title-holder wants another match with Freddie Welsh, the world's lightweight champion, for the Lansdale belt, and if the match is made it will take place in London as soon as conditions will permit. He will box here for the present at 140 pounds, but will soon be down to what the British regard as the lightweight limit—135 pounds at 2 o'clock.

According to Wells, Lord Kitchener is ready to send 3,000,000 men across the Channel, trained to the minute. Englishmen look upon this month, he said, as the beginning of the war, though they realize that many thousands of their countrymen have already been sacrificed.

Amateur Boxers Exonerated.

SAN FRANCISCO, May. 13.—Arthur Kaufman of Brooklyn, N. Y., national amateur champion middleweight boxer; Matty Herbert, Arthur Nack, and H. Spangler of New York, and Arthur Sheridan of Boston, all boxers who appeared here last week at the Panama-Pacific Exposition amateur boxing championship tournament, were exonerated last night of charges of professionalism upon which they were summoned to appear before officials of the Pacific Amateur Association of the American Athletic Union. An unofficial charge had been made that the five men had made a demand for money for their appearance at a club boxing exhimition here. At the investigation it developed that the boxers had been requested to remain until Friday night to participate in a boxing tournament and that they had only asked for expense money for the extra time they would have to remain here. The boxers retain their amateur standing.

GOLF MEDALIST PUT OUT OF MATCH PLAY

Edward P. Rogers Wins Oakland Test Round, Then Beaten by H. K. Kerr.

Edward P. Rogers of Baltusrol won the medal in the qualifying round of the Oakland Golf Club's invitation tournament yesterday with a score of 76, then met with speedy elimination in the first round of match play at the hands of Hamilton K. Kerr of Greenwich. The margin was 5 up and 4 to play.

The club announced in its program that the qualification and first match rounds would be played on the first day, so as to clear the links for a thirty-six-hole final on Saturday. With an entry list of about 150, there were those who could not see how it could be done. Of course 150 entries do not mean that many starters, and there were close to a hundred ready to tee off. By the time 11 o'clock had rolled around eighty-eight had gone, and no more were permitted to tee up. In this manner room was made for the first round matches. Four sixteens were provided for, meaning that only sixty-four players could qualify.

Scores were generally high in view of the recent rains and the fact that the Oakland links showed the effects of care during the Winter. Only three out of the whole field were able to get less than 80. These were Rogers with 76, W. W. Hoffman of the National Links with 78, and Percy R. Pyne, 2d, of Princeton with 79. Pyne beat Hoffman in the match play by a 4 and 3 margin.

Philip V. G. Carter, the metropolitan junior champion, was drawn against Lieutenant W. K. Dunn, the champion of the home club, and the youngster was returned the winner by a 4 and 3 margin. Carter went around in 74, equaling the course record of 74 made last week by Francis Ouimet, the national amateur champion. Carter had 80 in the testing round. The summary:

First Sixteen—E. P. Rogers, Baltusrol, 76; W. W. Hoffman, National, 78; Percy R. Pyne, 2nd, Princeton, 79; Philip V. G. Carter, Nassau, 80; Maxwell R. Marston, Baltusrol, 80; Hamilton K. Kerr, Greenwich, 80; Roy D. Webb, Englewood, 82; Dr. A. T. Haight, Wykagyl, 82; Lieutenant W. K. Dunn, Oakland, 82; Frederick Snare, Havana, 82; Louis J. Gwyer, Siwanoy, 83; Henry J. Barr, New York, 97; F. F. Pruyn, Saratoga, 98; W. H. Smith, Oakland, 98.

First Sixteen—First round: Pyne beat Hoffman, 4 and 3; Carter beat Dunn, 4 and 3; Kerr beat Rogers, 5 and 4; Gwyer beat Snare, 1 up; Topping beat Case, 5 and 3; Maclaughlin beat Haight, 4 and 3; Webb beat Kerr, 3 and 2; Marston beat Brown, 6 and 5.

Second Sixteen—First round: Herreshoff beat Cassebeer, 3 and 1; Berner beat Twyefort, 1 up; Hyde beat Boyd, 4 and 3; White beat Rice, 6 and 5; Thorne beat Hart, 7 and 6; Parrish beat Holmes, 4 and 3; Balfe beat Carpenter, 2 and 1; Thorne beat Hicks, 2 up.

Third Sixteen—First round: Martin beat Pickhard, 2 and 1; Oates beat Collier, 1 up (19 holes); Allison beat O'Connell, 2 and 1; E. A. G. Wylie beat Daley, 3 and 1; Ridder beat Graham, 5 and 4; Carhart beat Gilkes, 4 and 3; Cowperthwaite beat Proal, 2 and 1; Lewis beat S. G. Wylie, 3 and 1.

Fourth Sixteen—First round: Higson beat Barr, 7 and 6; Wagstaff beat Griffin, 7 and 5; Smith beat Pruyn, 5 and 4; Campbell beat Kerwin, 1 up; Hyde beat Fuller, 4 and 3; Cooper beat Pearson, Jr., 1 up; Walker beat Moorehouse, 3 and 2; Scott beat Hearn, 1 up.

WOMEN REACH FINALS.

Englewood to Play Tuxedo for Metropolitan Team Title.

As the result of the semi-final round for the women's team championship of the metropolitan district yesterday, Englewood will play Tuxedo in the decisive test for the title next Tuesday. The course is a matter for future determination, but Mrs. Lawrence Swift, President of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, said last night that it was the desire of the officials to play the match on a links that would be entirely neutral.

Englewood earned the right to enter the final by defeating a quartet of the Nassau Country Club at Nassau, 6 points to 3. The home combination was without the services of Mrs. Howard F. Whitney, and her place was taken by Mrs. L. W. Noel.

Originally scheduled at Glen Ridge, a last-minute change sent the contest between Glen Ridge and Tuxedo to the links in the Ramapo Mountains, and the home players had no difficulty in defeating the visitors 9 points to 1. The summary:

TRIPLE TIE FOR MEDAL.

Ouimet, Guilford, and Chick Each Make a 79 at Brookline.

BROOKLINE, Mass., May 13.—A triple tie for medal honors resulted in the qualifying round of the annual open Amateur Tournament of the Country Club today. Francis Ouimet, national amateur champion, Jesse Guilford, former New Hampshire title holder, and W. C. Chick, one time intercollegiate champion, each returned cards of 79. The score and the pairings for match play tomorrow follow:

S. K. Sterne, Tatnok, (80,) vs. G. H. Lyall, Bellevue, (88;) H. P. Farrington, Woodland, (88,) vs. Francis Ouimet, Woodland, (79;) M. F. O'Connell, Alpine, (88,) vs. Jesse Guilford, Bellevue, (79;) W. P. Seelye, Brooklawn, (82,) vs. H. Pushee, Weston, (83;) T. M. Claflin, Country Club, (84,) vs. C. A. Bass, Portsmouth, (90;) C. N. Wilder, Country Club, (84.)

Advertisers on Dunwoodie Links.

The first tournament of the season of the Metropolitan Advertising Golf Association was held yesterday over the links of the Dunwoodie Country Club, and the variety was such that it kept the participants busy all day long.

Early in the day the best ball scores of four men were counted, one-sixteenth of the total handicap being allowed. The combination composed of Zachariah T. Miller, H. V. Gaines, S. J. Ross, and Louis A. Hamilton, with a card of 69—2—67, won the first prize, while the second award went to a quartet comprising F. B. Ryan, B. A. Skelton, R. B. Stuart, and J. S. McGuire, with a card of 76—5—71.

Later in the day four-ball foursomes were in order, and the winners proved to be C. D. Wilcox and E. B. Raines, with 77—3—74, second prize going to Z. T. Miller and H. V. Gaines, with 77—2—75. W. Eugene Conklyn and Gaines tied for the gross award, with 82 each, and on the third hole of the play-off Conklyn won the cup by making a 3.

There was a triple tie for the three best net individual prizes of the day, as follows: P. S. Hart, 94—22—72; Harry D. Cashman, 90—18—72; H. E. Porter, 102—30—72. On the play-off they finished in the order named. Colonel H. H. Treadwell offered a prize for those who have taken part in the tournaments at Pinehurst, and it was won by H. D. Cashman, with 90—18—72.

Investigate Clabby-Chip Bout.

The Jimmy Clabby-George Chip fiasco at the St. Nicholas Rink on Wednesday night will be subjected to the scrutiny of the State Athletic Commission. A special meeting will be held for the purpose, and it is believed there will be a number of complainants against the boxers. Charges of "fake" have been openly made against the men, and a speedy hearing of the commission has been demanded.

Walthour Still in the Game.

Bobby Walthour, the oldest bicycle rider in the game today, will start his twenty-second year as professional at the Sheepshead Bay course this season. Walthour has requested Manager Chapman to start him in the International Derby, the twenty-five-mile motor-paced event, to be run the opening night, May 22. The riders for the race will be chosen tomorrow, and as Walthour is a favorite with the fans and is ready to race, he will surely be picked as one of the starters.

REACH FINALS IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Miss Bjurstedt May Capture Singles and Doubles Metropolitan Title.

Heavy courts and a strong wind made fast playing difficult in the tennis tournament for the metropolitan championship in women's singles and doubles yesterday on the West Side Tennis Club courts at Forest Hills. Compared with the previous day of the tournament the play was somewhat slow and at times uncertain, but in spite of these disadvantages both of these events reached the final stages, and it is expected they will be completed, together with the mixed doubles, before nightfall.

The singles title round will be played by Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the national indoor champion, and Mrs. Barger-Wallach. The contest between Miss Bjurstedt and Mrs. Marshall McLean was the feature of the day's play. The champion was not in as good form as in her earlier matches, especially when she triumphed over Miss Anne Sheafe of the Longwood Cricket Club of Boston. She drove the ball repeatedly into the net and outside the court. Miss Bjurstedt won the first set with little apparent effort, and after obtaining a lead of 5—2 in the second set let up in her playing. By steady play Mrs. McLean play Mrs. McLean broke through her opponent's service and brought the sets even. The title holder settled down to business in the third set and won easily.

In the upper half of the singles semi-finals Mrs. Barger-Wallach overwhelmed Mrs. R. A. Pope at 6—1, 6—2. The contest was a disappointing one, as it was expected to be close. Mrs. Pope was unable to find her stroke and was erratic in her driving, while her opponent was not slow to take advantage of the weak spots in Mrs. Pope's play.

With Mrs. A. G. Miles as a partner Mrs. McLean made a much better showing in the second match of the doubles semi-finals. Miss Miriam Bladgen and Miss E. C. Lindley, who occupied the opposite side of the court, made a plucky fight to reach the final round, but in spite of their excellent combination play they fell below their previous standard and lost, 6—4, 7—5. It was the experience of Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Miles that carried them through, although the second set went to deuce for a decision. The winners will play Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Florence Ballin for the title.

Harold H. Hackett made his first appearance this season in competition. With Miss Sheafe as his partner he reached the semi-final round in the mixed doubles, defeating in succession Miss H. Punnett and F. Wilde and Miss Craie Cassel and E. S. Moore. On form the pair should oppose Miss Bjurstedt and Frederick C. Inman in the title round. E. H. Whitney was Miss Bjurstedt's original partner, but developed an abscess on his foot and withdrew from the tournament. Mr. Inman was substituted. Miss Bjurstedt and Inman won from Miss Gertrude Della Torre and J. S. Brown, 6—2, 7—5. The summary:

Metropolitan Championship—Women's singles, semi-final round: Mrs. Barger-Wallach defeated Mrs. R. A. Pope, 6-1, 6-2; Miss Molla Bjurstedt defeated Mrs. Marshall McLean, 6-1, 7-9, 6-2.

Metropolitan Championship—Women's doubles, semi-final round: Mrs. Marshall McLean and Mrs. A. G. Miles defeated Miss Miriam Bladgen and Miss E. C. Lindley, 6-4, 7-5.

Mixed Doubles—First round: Mr. and Mrs. Lyle E. Mahan defeated Mr. and Mrs. Robert LeRoy by default; Miss Currie and Mr. Schenzel defeated Miss Barbara Taylor and Norman Johnson, 7-5, 8-6; Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Frederick C. Inman defeated Miss Gertrude Della Torre and J. S. Brown, 6-2, 7-5; Miss Clare Cassel and E. S. Moore defeated Miss Theodore Cassebeer and E. W. Peaslee by default; Miss Anne Sheafe and Harold H. Hackett defeated Miss H. Punnett and F. Wilde, 6-0, 6-0.

Second round—Mr. and Mrs. Lyle E. Mahan defeated Mrs. E. E. Inuth and C. F. Roone by default; Miss Anne Sheafe and Harold H. Hackett defeated Miss Clare Cassel and E. S. Moore, 6-2, 7-5.

Kingsley Unbeaten at Tennis.

Kingsley School tennis team of Essex Falls, N. J., defeated Bloomfield High yesterday by the score of 4 to 1. The victors captured the doubles and three of the four sets of singles. This makes Kingsley's fourth successive victory. In the doubles, Field and Tremaine (Kingsley) defeated Feltner and Higgins (Bloomfield), 6—1, 6—0. The singles matches resulted as follows: Tremaine (Kingsley) defeated Seibert (Bloomfield,) 6—1, 6—0. Frost (Kingsley) defeated Ward (Bloomfield,) 7—5, 6—4. Demarest (Bloomfield) defeated Treudfit (Kingsley,) 6—2, 6—4.

DIONNE WINS HARD MATCH.

Former West Side Captain Defeats Baggs in Bronx Tennis Tourney.

G. A. L. Dionne, former Captain of the West Side Tennis Club, furnished the surprise yesterday at the Bronx men's singles tennis championship tournament on the Bedford Park Lawn Tennis Club courts when he defeated Frederick C. Baggs two out of three sets, at 6—2, 4—6, 8—6. The match was started on Tuesday afternoon, when each player secured a set, with the third 7-all. It was decided to throw out the unfinished set and play the third from the start. In view of the court work of Baggs, he was expected to capture the final set, but Dionne, who is the master of all the tricks of the tennis court, kept his opponent racing all over the court, and in the end won after deuce had been called several times.

King Smith and Wylie C. Grant engaged in one of the most interesting contests of the tournament. After forty-nine games had been played Smith was returned the winner, at 6—4, 14—16, 6—3.

Steinkampf and Hartmann surprised Tobey and Ward in the first round of the doubes, and after losing the first set, rallied and won the next two and the match, at 5—7, 6—3, 6—3. The summary:

Bronx Championship, Men's Singles.—Third Round—G. A. L. Dionne defeated F. C. Baggs, 6—3, 4—6, 8—6.

Fifth Round—Vanderbilt Ward defeated A. M. Lovibond, 6—4, 6—3; King Smith defeated Wylie C. Grant, 6—4, 14—16, 6—3.

Championship Doubles.—First Round—Steinkampf and Hartmann defeated Tobey and Ward, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3; Robinson and Robinson defeated R. L. Baggs and Lovibond by default.

Second Round—Oshman and Reittag defeated Fox and Mandlestann by default; Ostendorf and Dr. Rosenbaum defeated Behan and Blumenschein, 6—3, 6—4; Frederick C. Baggs and Voshell defeated Clarkson and Walker, 6—3, 6—3; Peasbee and Watrous defeated Raymond and Oliver by default; Grant and Phillips defeated Nolan and Brinkerhoff by default; Reimer and Steinacher defeated Robinson and Robinson, 6—1, 6—4; Grant and Phillips defeated Peaslee and Watrous, 6—4, 6—4; Ostendorf and Dr. Rosenbaum defeated Oshman and Reittag, 6—3, 6—3.

Princeton Tennis Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 13.—Princeton's tennis team defeated the University of Pittsburgh today, the Tigers taking all six matches. Captain Church found McElroy, the Pittsburgh Captain, who was expected to give Church a close match, unexpectedly easy, and won 6-3, 6-1. The best play of the afternoon was in the doubles between Church and Kidder and McElroy and Gaut. The Princeton pair won after three close sets, losing the first and only winning the second by the narrowest of margin. The summaries:

Singles—Church (Princeton) defeated McEnlroy (Pittsburgh), 6-3; 6-1; Kidder (Princeton) defeated Gaut (Pittsburgh), 6-0, 2-6, 6-4; Vandeventer (Princeton) defeated Ebe (Pittsburgh), 6-3, 8-6; Cooper (Princeton) defeated Haines (Pittsburgh), 6-3, 6-3.

Doubles—Church and Kidder (Princeton) defeated McElroy and Gaut (Pittsburgh), 7-9, 9-7, 6-3; Vandeventer and Cooper (Princeton) defeated Ebe and Haines (Pittsburgh), 10-8, 6-4.

Easy Victory for Holbrook.

The brilliant playing of W. B. May, Jr., runner-up in the recent interscholastic tennis tournament at Columbia Oval was largely responsible for the victory of Holbrook School over Hackley School yesterday at Tarrytown, N. Y. May defeated Mapes of Hackley, 6—0, 6—2, and with Nollman as a partner won from Parker and Osborn, 6—2, 6—0. These two victories gave Holbrook three points and enabled the Holbrook team to win the match 4 to 1. The summary:

Singles.—May, Holbrook, defeated Mapes, Hackley, 6—0, 6—2; Osborn, Hackley, defeated Nollman, Holbrook, 6—2, 3—6, 6—4; Seeley, Holbrook, defeated Parker, Hackley, 3—6, 6—1, 6—2.

Doubles.—May and Nollman, Holbrook, defeated Parker and Osborn, Hackley, 6—2, 6—0; Seeley and Simmonds, Holbrook, defeated Mapes and Haine, 3—6, 7—5, 6—2.

Stuyvesant Downs Commerce.

Stuyvesant High School, last year's champions in the Public Schools Athletic League tennis tournament, yesterday added another tennis victory to its list, at Notlek courts, Riverside Drive and 119th Street, defeating High School of Commerce 4 to 1 in the annual match. The contests were close, but somewhat drawn out, owing to the strong wind. The summary:

Singles.—Blumenthal, Stuyvesant, defeated Judson, Commerce, 7—5, 6—1; Barrett, Stuyvesant, defeated Weinstein, Commerce, 7—5, 7—5.

Doubles.—Gillespie and Jacobi, Sutyvesant, defeated Simpson and Klinkowstein, Commerce, 6—8, 6—2, 6—1.

Lacrosse Tie at Annapolis.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 13.—The Navy and Carlisle lacrosse teams played to a standstill here this afternoon, the final score being 1 to 1.

Harvard Wins Lacrosse Game.

GENEVA, N. Y., May 13.—Harvard defeated Hobart at lacrosse today, 8 to 2.

CORNELL CREWS OFF FOR PRINCETON

Courtney Will Have New Outfit in Race with Yale and Tigers.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 13.—The Cornell 'Varsity and freshmen crews left here tonight for Princeton to row against Yale and Princeton on Saturday in a regatta on Lake Carnegie. They were cheered by hundreds of students who formed a parade line on the campus and marched through the city to the station. Short speeches expressing the determination of the crew to uphold Cornell's rowing traditions were made by Commodore Elms, O'Brien and Welles, the three 'Varsity veterans remaining in the crew squad, but Coach Courtney did not attend. He did not accompany the crews to Princeton. The demonstration tonight was one of the most unusual in the annals of rowing at Cornell.

While the 'Varsity crew has been slow this Spring due to bad weather and a late start, it is believed that in the last week the men have improved and the chances for their success Saturday are much brighter than they were two weeks ago. The 'Varsity will probably be as good as the average Cornell eight when it rows Yale and Princeton.

The final shifts in the boat have produced a number of changes. Andrus, the stroke oar, is a relatively new man. He has only been in that position a few days. He stroked the junior eight at Poughkeepsie last year. With the exception of Welles and O'Brien the men have never rowed together in a 'Varsity crew before. The Cornell crew averages 174 pounds. The make-up of the two eights follows:

'Varsity—Bow, Terriberry; 2, Cushing; 3, Welles; 4, Collyer; 5, Moir; 6, Stahl; 7, O'Brien; stroke, Andrus; coxswain, McCandless. Substitutes—Elms, Worn.

Freshman—Bow, Collings; 2, Fuller; 3, Wykes; 4, Nelns; 5, Kirkland; 6, Coe; 7, Brower; stroke, Handwerger; coxswain, Collins.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 13.—Guy Nickalls and his Yale oarsmen arrived in Princeton this afternoon to start preparations for the triangular regatta between the Elis, Princeton, and Cornell on Saturday. Yale took an easy row on Lake Carnegie late in the afternoon, Nickalls refusing to let his men do any sprinting. It was almost impossible to get any idea of the Elis' ability from their work, but the eight rowed smoothly and with evidence of a good deal of power in the boat.

Princeton's work was also of the lightest kind. The Tigers, in fact, have had no hard rowing since Tuesday, when they returned from a vacation at Atlantic City. Dr. Spaeth is well satisfied with the condition of the men and is taking no chances at overtraining. In spite of the victory over Columbia and Pennsylvania, however, there is nothing like overconfidence in the Tiger camp. The general impression here is that the Cornell crew has been underrated and that they will come up to all the requirements of the Courtney standard in Saturday's race. Cornell will arrive early tomorrow morning and will go out on Lake Carnegie in both the morning and the afternoon. Yale also will have two rows, while Princeton's preparations will be confined to the usual afternoon practice.

The two eights will row as follows:

University—Coe, bow; Bennitt, 2; Low, 3; Sheldon, 4; Sturtevant, 5; Meyer, 6; Wiman, 7; Morse, stroke; McLane, coxswain; Gilfillan, substitute.

Freshmen—English, bow; James, 2; Rockefeller, 3; Lovejoy, 4; Converse, 5; Coleman, 6; Coombe, 7; Lawrence, stroke; Lashar, coxswain; Seward and Lathrop, substitutes.

Daly in Winning Form.

Maurice Daly, the veteran cue expert, closed his series of matches at 18.2 balk-line last night at his academy, Forty-ninth Street and Broadway, with a victory over William Gershell, former Class B champion, by the score of 200 to 104. Daly was in splendid form and made the high run of the game, 105. He averaged 18 2-11. Gershell's best individual efforts were 31 and 26, with an average of 9 5-11. The Spring handicap tournament at 18.2 will start on Monday with the following players: J. Ferd Poggenburg, Julius Klinger, W. Gershell, and Hal Coleman. Poggenburg will play 250 points to 200 for the other three players.

PLAN MOTOR BOAT RACES.

New Long Island Association Expects to Hold Gold Challenge Event.

Tentative plans have been made by the newly formed Long Island Motor Boat Association, which, if carried through, promise a season of unusual activity for the motor craft about New York. Representatives of the nine clubs of the new organization met yesterday at the Cornell University Club and discussed their plans. Nothing definite was decided upon, but the tentative arrangements were drawn up and committees appointed to see that they are consummated.

H. W. Lowerее, Secretary of the Long Island Association, will apply this week to the American Power Boat Association to have his organization recognized as a section of the controlling motor boat body, and this request is expected to be granted immediately. In the event that it is, the new association will have charge of the Gold Challenge Cup races, which will be held on Manhasset Bay, Long Island, from July 31 to Aug. 3. A large entry is expected for this series.

H. O. Stone of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, who acted as Chairman in place of Thomas B. Taylor yesterday, was authorized to nivestigate the possibilities of conducting a long ocean race, to supersede the annual Philadelphia or New York-to-Bermuda race, which has been abandoned this year. It is thought that a race can be contested from New York to Portland, Me., a considerably shorter trip than Bermuda, but holding out all the alluring prospects of the southern journey. It is about 400 miles from here to Portland via the route proposed, and about 600 to Bermuda.

Thomas Fleming Day was named a committee of one to arrange for a race from Boston to New York. He is to confer with a Hub organization, probably the Boston Yacht Club, regarding the arrangements to be made from that end. This race, if arranged, will take place a short time before the Gold Cup races.

The Long Island Association will also hold under its auspices the annual competitions of the National Engine Manufacturers' Association. These will take place off Port Washington, L. I., on Manhasset Bay.

A special meeting of the association will be held on May 24, when reports on various proposed races will be received and acted upon.

There are eight members of the Long Island Association, as follows: The New Rochelle Y. C., Port Washington Y. C., Knickerbocker Y. C., Stamford Y. C., Huguenot Y. C., New York A. C., Harlem Y. C., and Motor Boat Club of America. There are twenty-three clubs located in the territory between Hell Gate and New London, Conn., which are eligible for admission to the association. It is expected that a majority of them will join before another month. The association was formed only five weeks ago.

Big Day for Pawling Athletes.

The athletes of Pawling School overwhelmed the Columbia freshmen in their dual track meet, held on the former's grounds at Pawling, N. Y., yesterday afternoon, and won by the score of 68 points to 20. The program consisted of eleven events, and in nine of these the Pawling School captured first and second places. The Columbia freshmen won two events, the 880-yard run and the 120-yard high hurdles event, and finished second in two others, the 440-yard event and the twelve-pound shot put. The summary:

440-Yard Run—Won by De Cernea, Pawling; Zychlinski, Columbia, second.

880-Yard Run—Won by Huelsenbeck, Columbia; Lyle, Pawling, second.

One-Mile Run—Won by Putnam, Pawling; Cobb, Pawling, second.

220-Yard Low Hurdles—Won by Albright, Pawling; Garvan, Pawling, second.

High Jump—Won by Hutcheson, Pawling; Vanderbilt, Pawling, second.

Broad Jump—Won by Robeson, Pawling; Gargan, Pawling, second.

Twelve-Pound Shot Put—Won by De Cernea, Pawling; Brown, Columbia, second.

Pole Vault—Gargan, Pawling, and Nolte, Columbia, tied or first place with a vault of 10 feet.

Canoe Purchasers Disappointed.

An advertisement in a newspaper announcing that forty-seven canoes in first-class condition would be sold at a sacrifice at the Inwood Canoe Club caused a rush of prospective buyers to the club yesterday afternoon. Although the "ad" announced that callers would be received Sunday and that the club would be disbanded, the Secretary of the club knew absolutely nothing of the matter until he received a bill for $5. Turning the would-be purchasers away and explaining that it was a practical joke annoyed the Secretary, but when he received the bill he was infuriated. He said there was only one canoe for sale and that already had been carried bodily out of the club, but so far as disbanding the club he said there was no truth in it.

GIANTS, YANKEES, DODGERS AND BROOKFEDS VICTORS IN BASEBALL—COLUMBIA LOSES

GIANTS PUNCTURE AMES'S DELIVERY

Pol Perritt Registers His First Victory as Member of McGraw's Staff.

The Giants seem to have passed over the period of shakiness which has kept them in the cellar and have resumed something like a normal gait. They have now won two days in succession, which makes them appear more lifelike. Yesterday's carnival was won by a score of 4 to 3 at the expense of Leon Ames, a former resident of this village. Since he has resided in Cincinnati Ames has become a better pitcher than when he was with the Giants, but he received an unusually hard drubbing at the hands of his former associates yesterday.

The occasion was also noteworthy because it marked the beginning of Pol Perritt's successful pitching career. Pol has been laid up in a Philadelphia health garage because he lost several teeth in a collision over there with a ball player's head. His work yesterday was high-class and reminded the fans of his box work last season with the Cardinals. He held the "Reds" to six hits and he pitched himself out of a difficulty in the ninth, when the Reds threatened to rally on him and tie the score.

Heinie Groh took a great liking to Pol's pitching and unloaded a couple of smacking big two-base hits. Not since the palmy days when Handsome Harold McCormick used to rip off pinch hits by the half dozen has the Polo Grounds seen as good a pinch hitter as Count Von Kolnitz has shown himself to be within the last few days. He has appeared as a pinch hitter on three occasions, and twice he has banged out two-base hits and the other time he singled. Yesterday he started a rally in the ninth, and after Wagner had walked Von Kolnitz, batting for Herzog, drove him to third with a double to left. Von Kolnitz is a lawyer, but he doesn't work at it.

He has some wisdom, the Count has, because from the way things are going nowadays law and baseball are going along with the arms around each other's necks. Von Kolnitz is always on hand ready to slap on an injunction or a writ of habeas corpus when the occasion demands.

Manager Charley Herzog was back in the game at short, although his spiked left wrist is by no means all right. Both infields yesterday did some neat fielding which was both rapid and accurate.

The band played "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," much to the joy of the sailors who are still at large.

The Giants began to annex the game in the second inning, when Fletcher doubled to right field and went to third when Davey Robertson was tossed out at first. Brainerd was the author of a single to centre, which sent Fletcher home. Cincinnati tied the score in the fourth, when Groh doubled and scored on Twombly's single. In the fifth the Reds went out in front. Herzog singled and was safe at second when Perritt failed to make a force-out play on Mollwitz's roller. Then Tom Clarke hit into a double play.

Red Ames was safe on Fletcher's foozle and Herzog scored on the mishap. Perritt became alarmingly wild at this stage, for he hit Wee Tom Leach in the back and sent him to the carpet. Willing hands rushed to Wee Tom's assistance and he came up smiling. Then Perritt hit Heinie Groh in the back of the neck and he dropped as if he had been shot. He also was duly assisted to his base smiling. Killifer ended the inning when he skied to Murray.

The Giants grabbed the game for keeps in their half of the same inning. After Chief Meyers had singled, "Pink" Jack Murray pushed him home with a bounding double. Perritt struck out and Burns ambled. Larry Doyle succumbed at first and Hans Lobert cracked out a single to centre, which pushed Murray and Burns home.

Cincinnati caused a flurry in the ninth. Wagner got a pass and went around to third on Von Kolnitz's pinch two-bagger. As Perritt and Brainerd were retiring Mollwitz, Wagner scored. Clarke then pushed a roller to Lobert, who threw Von Kolnitz out at the plate.

Manager George Wiltse of Jersey City went to the Polo Grounds in disguise yesterday, and when nobody was looking he trapped Pitcher Art Fromme. Immediately the Giants' chances grew brighter. The score:

Pirates Show Wonderful Defense.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Harmon got wonderful support today, and Pittsburgh defeated Philadelphia, 3 to 1. Wagner, who accepted fourteen chances, and Johnston figured in three double plays. Carey made two wonderful running catches, and Viox and Gerber also handled drives which looked good for hits. The visitors scored all their runs in the second inning, on singles, two passes, and a double steal. Score:

HARVARD COACH QUITS.

Dr. Sexton Says Baseball Committee Interfered with His Work.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 13.—Harvard's baseball coach, Dr. Frank J. Sexton, formerly of Brown University, who has been in charge of the nines at Cambridge since 1911, resigned today and his resignation was accepted by the Harvard Advisory Baseball Committee. Dr. Sexton, in a statement tonight, says that he resigned because of the interference of the Baseball Committee with his work as coach, in as much as the committee demanded that he allow it to send some old Harvard players out to Cambridge to assist him in the development of his catchers and his outfield.

The Baseball Committee, which had a conference with Dr. Sexton last Thursday, states through Graduate Treasurer Fred W. Moore of the Harvard A. A. that it suggested that W. T. Reid, '01, and B. Wendell, '02, both former Captains here, assist Dr. Sexton and that Dr. Sexton agreed to the proposition. On Tuesday, however, Dr. Sexton wrote the committee stating that he would not accept the assistance offered, and tonight said he never did agree to accept it. The final break came at a meeting this afternoon.

No successor for Dr. Sexton has been selected, but it is probable that the committee will arrange with Percy D. Haughton, the football coach, to act as field coach for the nine for the balance of the year and to supervise the baseball work which will be in charge of the committee and such old players as may be available. Haughton played on the nine four years and was Captain in 1899.

In a recent letter to the Baseball Committee Dr. Sexton said he felt that the committee was violating the conditions of his contract, and in a short statement tonight he said he "could not retain his self-respect and esteem owing to the persistent interference of the committee and continue as coach of the university nine."

As coach at Harvard Dr. Sexton has won two of his four series against Yale, and prospects for this season are regarded as bright. The committee, however, has accepted his resignation because it felt that certain departments were weak, and that it was their province to improve them by having additional coaching done by old Harvard men.

YANKEES MAKE HITS COUNT IN CLEVELAND

Maisel, Peck, High, and Boone Bring Victory to the Donovanites.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 13.—Maisel, with a perfect day at bat that included a home run, and Roger Peckinpaugh, batting .500, helped Ray Caldwell to annex another victory, New York winning by the score of 6 to 1.

It is easy to see how Caldwell is a winning pitcher. The Indians touched him for nine hits, and he gave three bases on balls, yet Cleveland got only a lone run. Every time a hit would have done damage some Yankee got in the way of the ball, and every time New York needed a safety to help a run across the plate some Yankee came through with it.

It was rather chilly in the stands today, and only about 1,100 fans were on hand when Fritz Coumbe faced another German, Fritz Maisel, to see who was the better man. Maisel easily settled that question with a single, which started a fine day at the bat for the speedy little third baseman. This hit added with a single by Peck and an out, netted one run. The Indians got two singles with one out in their half of that inning, but Jackson spoiled things by hitting into a double play. After that Caldwell, aided by a perfect defense, had no trouble until the sixth inning, when Jackson's double, when Turner was an occupant of second, brought in the only run for the Indians.

Coumbe got along well after the first inning until the sixth, and then he and his support wabbled just enough to let in three runs. In that ill-fated round from a Cleveland standpoint High drew a pass, and was sacrificed to second. Then Cook hit to Coumbe, whose throw got away from Wamby, letting High hold the third base with impunity, and allowing Cook to get to second. Both scored on a single by Boone that went through Wamby's legs like a shot from a 42-centimeter gun. Hartzell, who had walked, got to third on the throw in. He scored on Nunamaker's long sacrifice fly to Jackson.

Another run came in the seventh, when Maisel walked, Coumbe figuring that thereby he could keep him from making a hit. But Peck sacrificed and High beat out a bunt to Wamby, whose low throw allowed Maisel to score.

Elmer Smith, slugger from Milan, Ohio, tried to bat for Coumbe in the eighth, and fanned, much to the joy of the Donovanites on the bench. That sent Harstadt to the mound, and he stayed long enough to see Maisel circle the bases for a homer in the ninth, counting the sixth and final tally for the Yanks.

The Indians aroused some real enthusiasm among the shivering fans in the ninth by two singles, but Egan hit to Peck, who started a double play, and then the players started for the shower baths. The score:

ONE HIT FOR COLUMBIA.

Bryant, Cornell Pitcher, Shuts Out New Yorkers, 2 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 13.—Cornell beat Columbia here this afternoon by the score of 2 to 0, errors of the New Yorkers having a good deal to do with their defeat. They could not hit Bryant, however, getting only one safe hit in the whole game. The teams battled on even terms until the fifth inning, when eKating singled. Sutterby sacrificed him to second, and a wild throw by Buncke gave Keating a chance to cross the plate. Cornell tallied again in the sixth inning. Gordon fanned, but Lane let the third strike go by him, and the throw by Smith to catch Gordon at first went wild, and the Cornell man reached second. Donovan sacrificed him to third, and then he scored on a wild pitch by Smith.

Columbia made a try in the ninth, when Watts made Columbia's only hit. A sharp double play, Donovan to Keating, cut off two men, and this ended Columbia's chances to tally. In the sixth inning Benson was called out on strikes though he was not standing in the box. The score:

Tigers Plod Along and Win.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 13.—Notre Dame went down before the Tigers today by a 6 to 5 score, the Tigers, however, requiring ten innings before they broke their losing streak. Chaplin, who pitched for the winners, got himself into difficulties at the every start, letting four runners cross the plate in the first inning on three passes, his error and a hit. He steadied down after that and held his opponents to a single run. Princeton overcame the big lead Notre Dame secured at the beginning after a long, uphill fight. Poor base running prevented the Tigers from sewing up the game several times, Princeton men throwing away a number of opportunities by stupid work on the paths. In the tenth inning with the score tied at 5 all, three singles and a sacrifice bunt sent Chaplin across the plate with the winning run. Scully's timely hitting was the outstanding feature of the day. The score:

N. Y. U. Vanquishes C. C. N. Y.

New York University baseball nine defeated City College yesterday on Ohio Field by the score of 10 to 2. The Violet players toyed with the visitors, and found Farrel easily when occasion demanded for hard drives. The City College men, on the contrary, found Genovese hard to sove, and their weak batting and poor fielding rendered the game rather slow. Nine errors by the City College players made scoring easy for the Violet nine, which only failed to score in two innings. Freitag, who heretofore had been held in reserve on the second string, proved himself the Violet star, with two runs and three hits out of four times at bat, while McNally's two-bagger and his two tallies placed him ust behind. Genovese, a second-string pitcher, ho has seen little service this season, fanned six of the City College men and allowed four hits. The score:

Plans for Army-Navy Game.

WEST POINT, May 13.—Distribution of tickets for the Army and Navy baseball game to be played here on Saturday, May 29, is about completed. The demand for seats this year far exceeds the supply available, despite the fact that extra grandstand seats will be erected. The Navy rooters have asked for twelve hundred seats, and although the brigade of midshipmen will not come here for the game, Navy folks from near by stations will occupy reserved sections in the stands. Both the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy are expected to attend the game, as will also many high dignitaries in both branches of the service. President Tener of the National League has been asked to assign two umpires to officiate at the game.

Eighteen Strikeouts for Slater.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 13.—Three singles after two men were out in the last half of the tenth inning today gave the Syracuse University baseball team a 3 to 2 victory over the University of Rochester. Slater, on the Orange mound, struck out eighteen batsmen. Score:

BROOKFEDS SHATTER CHICAGO'S PITCHERS

Fourteen Hits Produce Six Runs and Victory at Washington Park.

The Brookfeds closed up Washington Park yesterday in the last game before their invasion of the West by winning from Chicago 6 to 1, and making the series even. Tom Seaton was on the firing line for Brooklyn, and although he gave seven passes, he was at all times master of the situation, and with the exception of Zwilling's circuit drive in the first inning, he held the Whales scoreless. Zwilling, Chicago's centre fielder, was the second man up in the first inning and he rapped the ball high and far over the brick wall in left field against a house on the opposite side of the street from the ball park.

There was lots of trouble for Umpire Brennan, and not only did the players frequently protest his decision on strikes and balls but the fans were there with a big complaint too. In the fifth inning, Mann, who was on the first base line coaching, took exception to a strike that the impire had called on Beck, and was ordered to the bench. He traveled very slowly in that direction, and the umpire got impatient and ordered him from the park. Mann went but very, very slowly.

Brooklyn's first runs came in the third inning. Kauff singled and Evans was hit by the ball. Myers popped to Zeider, but Westerzil poled out a triple that scored Kauff and Evans. Wilson, the Whales's catcher, helped Magee's outfit to get two more in the fifth. After Benny Kauff, who hit the ball hard yesterday, had flied out to Wilson on a foul, Steve Evans smashed the ball to the fence for a double. Myers singled, sending Evans to third, and a moment later Hap stole second. Wilson, trying to catch Evans off third, threw to Zeider, but his aim was erratic, and the ball went out near the bleachers in left field. Of course Evans and Myers had put on full speed when that wild heave first started, and scored.

The Brookfeds scored two more in the sixth. Magee singled, stole second and went to third on Kauff's single. Steve Evans stung the sphere to centre, scoring Magee, and Kauff came romping in when Zwilling made a wild throw trying to get him. Evans not only had a perfect batting average yesterday, but he made a sensational catch of Zeider's drive in the eighth. The Whale third baseman gave the ball a mighty wallop and it took its course out toward Anderson but a few feet from the grass. Anderson started for the ball at top speed, and in picking it out of a blade of grass between left and centre, he pitched forward and performed several circus feats, coming up smiling with the ball tightly clenched in his glove. The score:

Packers Wallop Newfeds.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 13.—Newark received the worst beating of the season here today, when the Kansas City Packers trounced them, 12 to 1. Seventeen hits registered by the Packers, coupled with the eight misplays made by the Peps, gave the Kansas City team its big total. Newark used four pitchers. Nick Cullop let the home team down with three hits and held it hitless and runless until the eighth. Kenworthy and Gilmore divided the batting honors, while George Stovall took care of nineteen chances at first base. The score:

BASEBALL AT 10, 20, AND 30.

Novel Plan to Popularize Sport with Circuit of Parks.

Baseball at more popular prices than exist now with a circuit of parks in the big cities is the latest proposition to be advanced. Eva Tanguay, who is a baseball fan, is the originator of the scheme, and is willing to become a big stockholder in a company to present 10, 20 and 30-cent baseball. Miss Tanguay would conduct baseball along the same lines as play almost as good baseball as the major leagues at lower prices.

In advocating her ian Miss anguay says the baseball patrons would patronize good baseball at lower prices just the same as theatregoers throng the cheap vaudeville theatres. She asserts that the Federals made a big mistake in not adopting this scheme, and believes that good salaries could be paid to high-class players.

he scheme calls for two games a day, one starting at 2 o'clock and the other at 4. It is proposed to handle the people the same as at the vaudeville house, where they show twice in one afternoon. The parks, according to Miss Tanguay, should be built close to those of the big leagues, and the returns would be sufficient to pay big enough salaries to have plenty of good players.

Another big factor in the success of the plan would be night baseball, which Miss Tanguay says will be in vogue in a few years, and then even the big leagues will be giving matinee and night performances. The idea, to say the least, is original, and has many attractive features, and Miss Tanguay is so confident of its success that she is willing to invet heavily should he plan maerialize.

Manhattan Gets a Trouncing.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., May 13.—Seven hits, including four two-baggers, two bases on balls, and two errors, accounting for eleven runs, gave Seton Hall College a lead in thefirst inning which Manhattan College was unable to overcome. When the rival teams met on the diamond at Setonia Field here this afternoon Pitcher Farrell of the New York team seemed to have nothing at the start, but managed to hold the Setonians to six runs throughout the remainder of the seven-inning contest. Les. Whelan, on the mound for Seton Hall, allowed Manhattan five scattering singles. Two hits, coupled with an error, gave Manhattan its two tallies in the first inning. The score.

Leach Recovers His Bat.

After twenty-four hours of worry and anxiety Tommy Leach of the Cincinnati baseball club is once more happy and contented. The cause of his worry was the loss of his favorite bat. When the Giants-Cincinnati game at the Polo Grounds ended on Wednesday Leach left his bat behind. He notified the grounds men of his loss and Thomas Muhlvaer, an employe at the field, started on a hunt for the Leach run-getter. Last night Muhlvaer saw some boys playing on a lot at Ninety-ninth Street and First Avenue. A youth took uphis position at the plate and Muhlvaer recognized Leach's bat in the youngster's hands. The boy was taken to the 104th Street police station, where he admitted that he took the bat, believing Leach had discarded it. Lieutenant O'Connor phoned Leach about the recovery of the bat and the player soon had it in his possession. He refused to prosecute the boy.

Gandil Suspended by Johnson.

CHICAGO, May 13.—First Baseman "Chick" Gandil of the Washington Americans today received word from President Johnson of the American League that he had been suspended for three days as the result of his dispute with Umpire Chill yesterday. Gandil protested one of Chill's decisions too vigorously.

John Henry, catcher, was absent from the Washington line-up when Griffith's men faced the White Sox this afternoon. He spiked himself in rounding first base yesterday, and was in a hospital today with a deep gash in his left leg, just below the knee. He will be unable to play for a fortnight, it is believed.

ANOTHER VICTORY GOES TO DODGERS

The Dodgers blazed another trail in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon and the innocent Cubs found too late that it led to disaster. You didn't know that Robbie was a great little strategist? Well he is. For nine innings he led the Bresnahan visitors along like lambs, dangled victory temptingly in front of them and then snatched it away for all time by the score of 3 to 2. It was unkind of Robbie, but it was great for a boost in the Brooklyn stock. It's rising rapidly and they are getting so "uppish" across the bridge that they are beginning to recall the long ago when Brooklyn was the big city of the baseball map.

A little attention to the score will show you that the Cubs did a lot of hitting. They took eight safeties from Recruit Smith, but they judged the placing of those same hits very badly, so far as getting runs across was concerned. On the other hand the Dodgers contented themselves with six from Jim Vaughn's service, but they took careful note of when they were needed to do the most good.

All Spring Zach Wheat has been hitting the ball hard, but somehow the hits have seemed to come when there was no chance that a runner could profit by them. Yesterday Robbie whispered that it might be a good plan to change the order of things. As a result Zach really won the game. O'Mara and Daubert both "died" in the first inning and then up came Stengel, who is just beginning to get his batting eye. The first one that our friend Vaughn sent over appealed to Stengel immensely and he banged it right in the face. The ball shot down along the left field foul line and the Brooklynite paused for breath on second.

Then Wheat responded to the call. He knew he ought to bring Stengel home and that's just what he did. The ball shot from his bat and went skimming out to right field, kept climbing skyward, and was lost over the fence. That made two Brooklyn runs and the Cubs blinked in astonishment. They shouldn't have been surprised for the Dodgers are getting that early jump on the game now-a-days.

It was in this first inning that Good retired from the Cubs line-up. O'Mara sent a low fly to right and Good made a regular circus catch, doing a complete somersault. He injured his shoulder, and had to make way for Knisely, who changed places with Schulte in the outfield.

The second Brooklyn run came in the fifth inning. After Getz had fouled out Miller dropped one into short right that fell between Zimmerman and Schulte, both of whom made a try for it. Smith's rap to Saier gave Getz the second sack. O'Mara lined one at Zimmerman and the Cubs second baseman made a great try to spear it, but he couldn't get more than the tip of his fingers to it and Getz crossed the plate.

The Cubs had their best chance to get a big family of runs in the first inning. Good singled over second and was sacrificed by Fisher. Schulte then shot one past Daubert and a pass to Zimmerman filled the bases. This was where a hit would have been like a life-belt to a drowning man. The Cubs have always counted on Saier in a pinch but he failed, popping one to Cutshaw and Williams flied out to centre.

In the next inning Archer sent a smashing triple to centre which would have been good for a homer except for Myer's fast fielding. Phelan's single to right scored Archer. In the seventh Knisely popped one over O'Mara's head. The latter should have had it but the ball fell for a hit and gave two bases. O'Mara then fumbled Fisher's hit and Knisely went to third and scored on Schulte's sacrifice fly. The score:

SENIOR CHAMPS FOR N.Y.A.C.

Travers Island to be Scene of Title Events on June 19.

The senior track and field championships of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. were awarded to the New York Athletic Club at a meeting of the Senior Championship Committee at 21 Warren Street last night, and will be contested at Travers Island on June 19. This date was accepted only after a long discussion, and is still subject to change.

It developed at the meeting that it is not a certainty that tryouts will be held for the national championships, and by no means sure that the national title meet will be held in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition in August. Some of the members of the committee wanted to hold up the selection of the date for a week or two, in order to give the exposition authorities time to live up to the financial agreement they made when the Amateur Athletic Union awarded them the national track and field sports.

On May 20 the directors of the exposition will meet in San Francisco to discuss their financial problems, and should they fail to make the necessary appropriation for the athletic championships, it is more than likely that they will be brought East. At any rate, they cannot be held by the exposition unless they live up to their guarantees.

Another meeting of the Metropolitan Senior Championship Committee, of which Terence Farley of the Irish-American A. C. is Chairman, will be held some time after May 22, and by that time it will be known how much money, if any, the exposition authorities will advance. If it meets the approval of the Amateur Athletic Union, the Eastern tryouts will be held as planned, in Cambridge on May 29. If not, they will be abandoned.

BRAGG TO DRIVE PEUGEOT.

Amateur Autoist to Replace Galvin in Indianapolis Sweepstakes.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 13.—Caleb Bragg, said to be worth $12,000,000, has signed to pilot Frank Galvin's Peugeot in the next Indianapolis 500-mile race, Galvin being laid up as the result of injuries received when his car overturned in practice recently. Bragg is one of the most famous drivers in the game, having won the 1910 Grand Prize and numerous other contests.

Barney Oldfield has arrived with the German Bugatti he is to drive in that contest. Barney has had the car thoroughly overhauled in a factory at Cleveland, and says it is in shape to win.

Oldfield predicts a lurid record for his machine. Made in a French part of Germany, Alsace-Lorraine, by an Italian manufacturer, Ettore Bugatti, it is to be driven by an Irish-American.

With the news that they had sailed hardly off the wire, J. Porporato and Percy Graham, drivers of English Sunbeams, arrived here, and are now preparing for the contest.

Jean Chassagne, originally scheduled to cross the pond with Porporato, was detained at the last minute by an emergency of warfare, and may not be able to get away after all, though there is still some hope of his coming. If he does land it will hardly be in time for the elimination trials on the 20th, 21st, and 22d.

Officials for the race have been announced as follows: Dave Beecroft and F. A. Croselmire of New York, A. A. A. representatives; A. R. Pardington of Detroit, referee; F. E. Edwards, Director of Contests Chicago Motor Speedway, Chairman Technical Committee, and Tom Hay of Chicago, starter.

THE PRESIDENT'S NOTE.

To President WILSON's communication, addressed through the Secretary of State to the German Government, every American citizen would be willing to affix his signature in approval of its firm but temperate tone and the indisputable justice of its representations and demands. The note reviews the grave questions that have arisen between the two Governments, refers to the "growing concern, distress, and amazement" with which we have regarded the series of acts culminating in the destruction of the Lusitania, points to the principles of law and the humane usages, hitherto observed even by Germany itself, which have been violated, and calls upon the Imperial Government to disavow the wrongful acts and to take immediate steps to prevent a recurrence of those assaults upon our flag and upon the lives of our citizens. It may be said that the note leaves no point of the controversy untouched and touches nothing as to which it is not convincing and conclusive.

The President brings clearly into view Germany's way out. He is conciliatory to the point of clearly indicating the terms of a reply that will meet our demands. She may disavow the acts of her naval commanders, which he with the greatest candor assumes to have been committed without orders or approval, and she is asked to prevent effectually by the recurrence of such acts. It may be said that we have left to her a hard choice. Can it be hard for her to disclaim the intent to carry on maritime warfare barbarously, in disregard of the laws of nations and of humanity? Would not her admission that she had ordered the officers of her navy to make war savagely in defiance of the laws of GOD and man be an infinitely harder choice? Germany is admonished that submarines cannot be used against merchantmen "without an inevitable "violation of many sacred principles of "justice and humanity." Again the choice may seem hard. It lies between abandonment of a method of warfare in which she may feel that she has been signally successful and conformity to the dictates of justice and of humanity. Will the great German nation confess that it is resolved to carry on an unjust and inhuman war? The choice is hard only if Germany makes it so.

It is the great diplomatic achievement of the note that it puts upon Germany the choice, not only of what her reply shall be, but of what is to follow. "The Imperial German Gov-"ernment will not expect the Govern-"ment of the United States to omit "any word or any act necessary to the "performance of its sacred duty of "maintaining the rights of the United "States and its citizens and of safe-"guarding their free exercise and en-"joyment." These are grave words. They are spoken with a full sense of responsibility, they carry to the German Government the thought and purpose of 100,000,000 people united in the resolve to uphold and support the chief man among them by whose authority this utterance is transmitted to Berlin. All depends on Germany. If she makes the disavowals and gives the assurances the President demands we shall all rejoice that she stands by her own traditions and by "those rules of fair-"ness, reason, justice, and humanity "which all modern nations regard as "imperative." Should she deny us then we shall know that she repudiates reason, justice, and humanity.

Then, indeed, there will be no living with her until she is purged of her unendurable purposes. There could be peace on earth save only if she great traditions, to her sense of honor, and of justice, must triumph over any warlike inclination she may feel to pursue a course that can have but one ending.

THE PRESS AND THE PEOPLE.

It is now very clear that the effect of the sinking of the Lusitania upon public opinion in this country was to give it coherency and make it articulate as with one voice. Many divergent currents of sentiment seemed suddenly to unite. People whose thoughts on the meaning of the war and our ethical relations to it had differed even radically so long as the danger of our becoming related to it physically was very remote, all thought and felt alike last Saturday morning. The American press was united as it had not been on any other question of this generation. It was instantly and spontaneously agreed that the act of destroying the Lusitania with premeditated disregard for the lives of the passengers was utterly indefensible, and that the United States should require from Germany the utmost moral reparation not only for the lives of Americans lost but for having violated the laws of nations governing warfare.

Either at once or on second thought there was agreement only a little less general that the Administration should be trusted to formulate the minimum demands and to find the suitable words in which to convey to Germany an understanding of their significance.

Apparently these views were arrived at almost instinctively. They had no geographical color. The South, Southwest, West, and Northwest thought with the East. What is called "jingoism," an evil supposed to flourish in a great newspaper-reading democracy, was remarkably exceptional. Perhaps we had all of us read enough of war in the preceding eight months to know the cost and horror of it, and how much easier it is to lose the state of peace than to get it back again. That the salient views expressed in the editorial columns of the newspapers were also those of the people was proved later when the people began to send their letters. Only two large newspapers printed in English apologized for the deed. One was in St. Louis and one in Milwaukee, and both were really German papers. The whole American press expressed unbounded horror, and yet, as to the measures to be taken, it was deeply and almost unanimously resolved to be calm.

That was what could not have been predicted. Indeed, one conservative paper, incidentally to its discussion of the Gulflight, had said, in substance, "But if anything should hap-"pen to the Lusitania, then it might "be impossible to control sentiment." And when something did happen to the Lusitania, American sentiment was found to have reserves of restraint which many would not have believed to exist. Only those who totally misunderstand the national temperament, as the Germans have sometimes seemed to do, could mistake this restraint for moral shrinking.

AN INTERNATIONAL COURT.

Addressing the World Court Congress at Cleveland, Mr. TAFT said that the time for launching a movement for an international court to administer international law was "propitious." At first that seems a singular statement to make at a time when the world is witnessing the savage assault upon international law by the world's chief claimant of culture. Nevertheless Mr. TAFT is right in thinking such a time propitious for his purpose, because of the dreadful alternative in the substitution for international law of the unrestrained will of any nation now brought into view by current events. If any seer had depicted to Germany the events in which she is an actor the prophecy would have been deemed an insult. For Germany many another nation might be substituted if once general moral sanctions were withdrawn, and individual national needs and standards were assumed to justify whatever was done according to them.

What humanity is to the sympathies law is to the judgment. The tendency of world communications, the telegraph, cable, telephone, steam transit on land and sea, is to substitute the universal for the particular, the international for the national, the opinions of all men for the opinions of some men. The broader the basis the more stable, for the good outnumber the bad many times in all lands and at all times. It must be so, or the world would sink into universal conflict and misery. The good or the bad must prevail, between nations as between men, and it is necessary to believe that in the future as in the past the victory will go to the righteous, not always to the mighty. Progress may seem slow when judged by the measure of years, but it is sure when judged by the measure of generations, the true measure in national life. The suggestions at the World Court Congress appear more reasonable than ever before, because they appear so much more desirable than in times when the present conditions are not visualized. Surely it needs no argument to show the necessity of the establishment of rules and standards forbidding such an incredible deed as the destruction of the Lu- tachment from any quarrels but their own made them the world's best expositors of neutral rights, and excellent practitioners of neutral duties. But their leadership in the general field of international law is in danger. It is true that Washington has suggested a notable series of treaties for international procedure for the settlement of disputes. Many of those treaties have been signed by both parties, but the series was crippled where it was born. The Senate would not yield its constitutional right to pass upon each arbitration proceeding, apart from the general obligation. In other words, the Senate's insistence upon the Senate's view of the Senate's rights and functions disqualified the United States from being a leader in the cause so well advocated at Cleveland. It takes two nations to make a treaty, and the Senate has refused to let the United States be one. Mr. TAFT says there can be no practical progress until this obstacle is removed.

Another point of difference from other similar movements was the proposal to waive the use of force in the execution of a mandate of an international court. It has often been urged that an international court without international army and navy would be a futile institution. The World Court proposes to allow the judgment of the tribunal which it favors to commend itself by the force of reason and conscience, but it proposes to use force to give reason and conscience an opportunity to do their work. The proposal is that all signatories bind themselves to use force in defense of any member attacked by any other before the World Court has given judgment. For example, Belgium could have appealed to the World Court, if it had existed, for the protection of its neutrality, and the forces supporting the World Court would have defended Belgium if attacked. Germany is surprised at the uproar over such a little matter as the neutrality of Belgium. The existence of the World Court would have prevented such surprise. Germany would have known the end from the beginning, if it had imagined the application of the rules of humanity and conscience instead of the rules of German ideas of justification through necessity. Who envies Germany's moral or material position? What nation would not rather take its chance before a judge and jury of its peers than take the sword like Germany to settle questions which cannot be settled by the sword? Then, looking at the sacrifice of Belgium, and the burdens to be borne through generations by England and France, what nations would not gladly be spared such bitter experiences? At Washington the question to be asked is whether some traditions might not well be revised to make the United States the leader once more in a movement so worthy of American ideals.

SUBMARINES AND OUR NAVY.

A short time ago the published statistics of the navies of the world, as nearly authentic as such statistics generally are, credited Great Britain with the possession of 96 submarines, France with 93, and Germany with 39; we know, however, that Germany has been building boats of this character, and of an improved type, with great rapidity. Rumor says that she will soon have 200 ready to continue the destruction of vessels in the waters around Great Britain and a fleet of 15 for use in the Baltic. Undoubtedly, Great Britain and France have also been building new submarines. At the beginning of this year the United States Navy had 58 such vessels, and the statement of Secretary DANIELS, in his letter to Mr. GARFIELD, published April 26, that "some of our subma-"rines are not as perfect as they "should be," is probably true of many of the foreign submarines built before the outbreak of the war.

Our present building program includes 38 submarines of the latest type, including three large seagoing boats. We also have nine dreadnoughts on the stocks, but our navy does not possess a single battleship cruiser, while the supply of scout cruisers is inadequate. To make the navy serviceable for the defense of the country, with its 30,000 miles of coasts, we need many more submarines, all as "perfect as they should be," and a sufficiently large number of fast-going warships. The so-called destroyer, too, has given ample proof of its usefulness, as it is the only kind of boat that can harass and destroy the submarine. There are no finer warships afloat than our new superdreadnoughts, with their destructive batteries of fourteen-inch guns and the rapid-firing five-inch guns, but one or two skillfully handled submarines can send a battleship, unguarded by swift destroyers, to the bottom of the sea very quickly. The dreadnought which costs $10,000,000 to build is powerless against the torpedo, and our navy will not be in a fit condition until it is prepared to prevent submarine attacks and possesses a larger number of submarines of its own.

The widespread movement in favor of strengthening the national defenses is chiefly concerned at present with the betterment of the navy, which is perfectly natural, though the needs of the army must not be neglected. An immediate bond issue of $500,000,000 is urged by the Navy League, which includes in its membership men of large experience who are accustomed But in an hour of great excitement a little exaggeration is to be expected. The navy will be increased in size, we may be sure, and with no needless delay. The Navy League has sounded a popular note.

The rush of recruits to the navy within the last week has been unprecedented. Although we have not men enough to man all the ships properly, the navy lacks comparatively few to complete its statutory strength, but Congress must vote to increase the number before many more recruits can be accepted. If the program of the Navy League should be accepted, many more officers would be required, as well as men enough to man twenty-five dreadnoughts, besides the twelve we shall have in 1916. The program also comprehends the building of $250,000,000 worth of fast cruisers, submarines, hospital ships, seagoing colliers, and aeroplanes. It is, in fact, a program which must stir the imagination of all citizens of a country which has been governed for many years with the idea that it would always be at peace with all the rest of the world. That peace may continue without interruption, and that the United States, by its influence, may be able to restore the peace of the world, is the sincere desire of every true American, but recent history has convinced the people that we must be prepared to defend ourselves if we are to maintain our place among the world powers.

THE GOVERNOR'S BUSY DAYS.

The Governor continues to do excellent work, and to make it harder for himself to do his very best. He is cutting into the second million of unnecessary appropriations by the Legislature, and he has not yet heard what the persuasive Mr. MCANENY has to say. There is much time still left for the Governor to do his really heavy work, and yet he despairs of making it possible for himself to veto the direct tax. He is credited, or rather debited, with saying that the State really needs as much leeway as he has left by his vetoes, and that the direct tax will be necessary for surplus.

Taxation for surplus this year is a proposal of which the Governor would do well to be wary. It is a curious thing to assert on the day that his Attorney General has approved the issue by the State of $6,000,000 of short term notes for payroll purposes. If that can be done this year it may be done next year, and the direct tax next year would be less of a burden than this year. The ground of the Attorney General's decision is a mixture of both law and politics, and is better law than politics. He makes short work of the contention that the State could not issue its promissory notes in anticipation of taxes. The limit on such indebtedness is the State's revenues, not its property. The distinction is between a promise to pay on pledge of specific income, in this case excise revenues, and the issue of bonds against property, that is, a mortgage. The latter falls within the constitutional limitation of increase of debt without a referendum. The latter falls within the discretion of administrative officers, within the limits of the taxes levied by the Legislature. Unfortunately the Attorney General proceeds to add, in his political rather than professional capacity, that the constitutional limitation did not > contemplate a situation where a previous administration, by failing to levy necessary taxes or produce the necessary revenues, had left the Government without funds in its treasury to carry on its ordinary activities and pay general expenses.

That may be so, and then, again, it may be that enough money was appropriated and was used otherwise than intended. Or it may be that the deficiency is not as large as is thought even now, when it has shrunk considerably from the earlier assertions. The State may be borrowing as liberally as the Governor is willing to have it tax itself. The politician seeking popularity through increase of taxes is on dangerous ground. It can be done by the issue of bonds up to a point where the interest becomes burdensome. Taxes become burdensome the day they are laid. Long before they are collected they become a lien upon a property and a debit rather than an asset before the people. The Governor's blue pencil is a trustier friend than the pen with which he signs tax bills. And he would better run his politics for himself. His Attorney General is not his constitutional adviser on politics.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Explicable, But Not Excusable. While it is easy enough to understand what mobs in London and other English cities have been doing for the last few days, the need of taking energetic measures to stop proceedings at once so reprehensible and so useless from every other standpoint than that of the criminal classes, of looters, has been obvious from the beginning of these disturbances.

As "atrocities," of course, the attacks on petty German tradesmen and their shops do not amount to much—not to much, at any rate, in comparison with recent happenings in Belgium as detailed by the Bryce Commission—but they constitute, nevertheless, a truly miserable piece of business, lacking, as they do, even the sorry excuse of "military necessity." As a matter of fact, instead of accomplishing any military purpose, the rioting "gave comfort and assistance to the enemy," and the rioters is sure to be expanded, when it is described in Germany, into something very much like wholesale torture and pillage of presumably unoffending aliens. Whatever the victims of the mobs were before, they are now men and women with a grievance—martyrs, in short, with a right to appeal to the world for sympathy, and fairly sure of getting it. The only gleam of consolation in the episode as a whole for the British and their friends lies in the fact that not even a suspicion of official incitement or countenance for the assaulting and looting that have taken place can be raised in any reasonable minds, and that the weakened police forces of London and elsewhere, though for a while overwhelmed by the number of the rioters, now have them in hand and will see to it that they get the punishment they so thoroughly deserve.

Truly a Tale Unadorned. In drawing up its report on the conduct of the German troops in Belgium, the Bryce Commission evidently made an earnest attempt, as evidently successful, to exclude everything that could be described even by the most adverse and incredulous critics—by the Germans themselves, that is—as the product of personal emotions or condemned as aiming at the sensational. And characterization of the acts disclosed is as nearly to altogether absent as, humanly speaking, it could be from such a document. The report is "lawyerlike," but its authors write as if they were addressing a board of Judges, not a jury.

This was, of course, in several and very important respects, desirable, and the appeal as made is to the judgment, not to the passions. But another result of it is that the report has little more literary merit than does a catalogue or index. Its merits have been gained at the cost of becoming cold and dry, and such "hard reading," as the saying is, that not many people are likely to go through it from beginning to end.

The absence of detail, of the picturesque in the sense of vividness—the adequately explained, but nevertheless regrettable, failure to give the names of the victims and of their persecutors—the persistent sticking to unqualified fact—all this is fatal to the maintenance of "interest" and therefore militates against the attainment of the very ends for which the report must have been prepared and published. Both the Belgian and the French Commissions that have gone over much the same ground managed to avoid these faults and these dangers. While hardly less convincing, they were more interesting.

Yet on the English Commission there are several men of high literary competence, and we all know that Viscount BRYCE himself can write, when he tries, with eloquence and fervor, and do it, too, without a trace of that sentimentality of which the British are so afraid. It is, however, almost as unsafe to impugn the discretion of these men as it would be to impeach their veracity or to doubt their intention to be quite fair in their treatment of the great quantity of evidence collected by them. They were set to answer the question, "Were there German atrocities in Belgium?" and they have answered it. They have made further dispute impossible.

Lifeboats Are Not for Them. Young as is the art or profession of wireless telegraphy, for at least one division of its practitioners there has already grown up from experience, or crystallized out of it, a traditional or conventional standard of conduct that brings to bear on them a compulsion to be heroic, even to the sacrifice of their lives, whenever opportunity for it is provided.

The men who take and send etherial messages on ships are they upon whom this stern and honorable compulsion is laid. In times of danger they are expected, and by precedents now numerous are required, to forget all considerations of personal safety, and to do till the very last, and beyond, what they can to save others. As in the case of Captains, they are permitted to quit their posts only when their ships are gone down, and usually it is from the water that they may decently be rescued if at all.

The many names of these martyrs to duty that a few years have supplied for the monument unveiled in Battery Park this week show that the ocean-going wireless operators have accepted the tradition of their class or rank, just as the Captains have done, and that the requirement to be heroic is not resented or ignored. Unlike the historic—or fabulous—grenadiers, they do not want to live forever, or at any rate, if they do, they can forget the desire on fit occasion.

It is a fine way of looking at one's work, and they are "good deaths" that are thus encountered.

An Engine, Not a Gun.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am afraid that Dr. Junge has been letting his enthusiasm run away with his imagination, otherwise the article by him, "A New Gun that Shelled Dunkirk," in THE SUNDAY TIMES would never have been penned. The illustration given is not of a gun, as stated, but of a single-cylinder experimental Junkens marine oil engine of the Ochelhauser-Diesel type. From this motor wonderful results were expected by engineers all over the world, as it was thought to be an improvement on the Diesel engine, and the Hamburg-American Company actually placed an order for a cargo ship to be so equipped.

But several features of the design were overlooked by Professor Junkers, and other engineers, with the result that unexpected engine troubles arose when the engine was on test, and the two 1,300 horse-power Junkers engines for the Hamburg-American ship Priemus were refused on the test-bed and steam machinery installed instead, so this refutes Dr. Junge's statement that the Junkers oil engine has replaced the Diesel motor.

In the Petroleum Steamship Company's tanker Arthur von Gwiner, a Junkers oil engine was installed a little over a year ago, and the ship was constantly under repair, owing to the unsatisfactory working of her engines. T. ORCHARD LISLE, Power Boat Editor.

British Ship Subsidies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am quite sure that you always wish to be accurate in your editorial statements. Therefore I call your attention to the misleading deduction that you draw, in your editorial of May 4, from the statement made by Mr. Booth, Chairman of the Cunard Line, "that if Great Britain paid for its mail at the United States rate the Cunard Line would receive $250,000 more annually than under its British agreement." While Mr. Booth's statement is literally true, as far as it applies to mail pay, he omitted the most important part of the "British agreement," which is that his company received from the British Government the loan of about $13,000,000 at a rate of interest of only 2¾ per cent. per annum, and an annual subsidy of

PICTURES OF SUFFERING.

They Occur in a Nurse's Appeal for an X-Ray Machine.

New York, May 13, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My wife has received the following letter from a friend living just outside Tours. Will you please publish it with a statement to the effect that subscriptions will be received by J. P. Morgan & Co. and cabled direct to the hospital for the purchase of the machine?

* * * I have no doubt you are actively interested, as all American women seem so generously to be, in sending us help for our poor wounded, and sadly do we need it. I am working in a large hospital at Marmontiers. Do you remember the convent at the foot of dear old Rougemont that we motored out to see when you were here? Well, it is now a hospital attached to the Societe de Secours aux Blesses, (Croix Rouge Francaise.) We have 250 beds for badly wounded and several annexes for convalescents. My role is the operating room, and a sad job it is, I can assure you, to see all those young lives ruined and wrecked and maimed, even when we can save the life, which, thank goodness, we have been able to do in 97 per cent. out of over a thousand men that have gone through our hands—a very good record considering the dreadful cases we have had and the extreme weakness and exhaustion in which the men arrive from the front. I am writing now to ask you if you cannot help us in our work. I, unfortunately, cannot do much, except what my hands can do, and I often deplore not being able to do more when I see so near me the urgent need of immediate action. I know you all in America are doing such a lot, giving so generously to the great general fund, but that goes to buy necessary material which is sent to Paris and distributed among thousands of hospitals. I wrote there and asked for help and they sent me a fine box of chloroform, but out of 100 pounds of absorbent cotton asked for I got sixty pounds and no lint. They can't do everything and give to everybody, but that is not my request.

What we cryingly need is an X-Ray plant. As you know, we are several miles from Tours and our poor, weary men have to be sent in old ambulances and shaken over the cobbles all that way and back to be X-rayed. We have had some pitiful cases. One where a lad of 19 arrived almost dying. He suffered martyrdom; his screams could be heard down by the river; the continual hemorrhages made us think the kidney was touched, but we could not operate on sheer speculation. He was much too weak to stand the jolting trip to Tours, so far days he suffered while we pumped sea water into him by the quart daily to get his strength up to stand the trip. His youth came to his rescue and made him bear the strain that would have killed an older man. The kidney was literally torn to pieces; we had to remove it entirely. It was a hand-to-hand fight with death for days, but we pulled him through, and he is now in the convelescent house as cheery as can be and as fat and pink as could be wished. But he went through days and days of suffering that could have been avoided, had we been able to X-Ray at once. There were other cases, not so fortunate, where the poor beggars could not be moved and had to return to their Maker, when we might perhaps have been able to save them. In Paris they tell me they cannot give money or the plant, as it is too expensive.

I thought that perhaps, for old Rougemont days, you might be willing to make a small collection among your own people and friends for this particular hospital and help us in our fight against death. The plant will cost between 6,000f. and 7,000f.—I know it seems a lot of money, but the cause is more than worthy. I had several small amounts sent me for Christmas and at other times to help and I have provided quite a few men in that way with artificial legs, instead of the wooden stump that the Government gives, and which would have prevented them from continuing their callings or trades. A laborer, for instance, could not till the soil with a stump that sank into the plowed earth at each step, whereas the clubfoot that he now has will allow him to work, if not as rapidly, at least as well as before, besides being more comfortable to walk with. I am sorry to hear that so much of the news you get in America comes through Berlin.

Signed, ————

Delibes in Vienna.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of the 9th inst., Mr. J. G. Fourman writes: "It would be interesting to know what fate had been meted out to works of Tschaikowsky, Rimsky-Korsakow, and Rachmaninoff in Berlin and Vienna."

An extract from the Neue Freie Presse, Vienna, of Jan. 8, 1915, shows that the previous evening Delibes's "Lakme" was given by the k. k. Hofopernthéater, and Gounod's "Margarete" in the second Vienna opera house, the Volksoper. In a Vienna newspaper of Dec. 28, 1914, appear advertisements of several French and English ladies offering their services for teaching languages. They frankly acknowledge their birth and origin. There are several thousands of French and English women and men employed in teaching languages and music or as nurses and tutors in Austria-Hungary. They attend to their usual occupation without being mistreated or looked upon as spies or undesirable citizens. They don't lose their positions. Cables from England show quite a different state of things.

A Centenarian.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

No reference has been made in THE TIMES among the obituaries of centenarians to the recent death of Mrs. Mary D. Stackpole, supposed to be the oldest resident of New England. Mrs. Stackpole was born in Tuftonboro, N. H., on Nov. 14, 1809, and lived in that town until about 1883, when she moved to Wolfboro, a neighboring town. She died on May 4, aged 105 years. Mrs. Stackpole was remarkably active up to the very last, taking an automobile ride not long before her death. After she had passed the century mark she crocheted a large white cotton table cover with a knitted border, which the writer now has. Her eyesight was excellent to the last and all her faculties were remarkably acute. ALICE LAKEY.

Pounds, Not Dollars.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In my letter to you of Saturday last, which appeared in THE TIMES of Sunday, I wrote that "the Baltic, on which I sailed on Feb. 18, carried a cargo of war munitions and material, amounting to the enormous sum of £2,500,000, and the profit to the ship on the freight alone totaled the large sum of £40,000." These amounts were printed by you as 2,500,000 "dollars" and 40,000 "dollars" respectively, instead of "sterling."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The deliberate step taken by Germany in destroying noncombatant men, women, and children upon the Lusitania in a policy of "reprisal" for England's extension of her blockading range is the culmination of a long series of ruthless breakings of international law and a clear commentary on the character of the early "reprisals" in Belgium and France. Official Germany has shown herself to be as savage as she is efficient. There is no hope for security or happiness in the world until she is reduced to order, and no possibility of the reinstatement of the German people as a civilized nation until they have thrown off the Hohenzollerns, who have educated them to such deeds.

Government by warfare has terribly failed. Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness are going to be possible for mankind only through a court of nations, with decrees enforced by an international police. We owe it to civilization, as well as to our own future safety, to prepare to take part in this world service, and our duties begin at once. I have urged from early September on that we should declare war on the cynical breaker of both the spirit and the letter of The Hague treaties, signed by her and us. If we had done this early, a trained army would today be ready to go.

As it is, we should do what we can, and as quickly as we can. Our navy could at once render a great service in patroling and convoying. The presence of this in European waters and of a part of our small regular army on the western battle line would be a considerable immediate help, while the moral effect would be tremendous. Italy and the Balkan States would probably join us. But, in any case, Germany would know that she was doomed to failure. We should have to raise and train an army. But it is altogether probable that Germany would sue for peace before that army was ready to leave our shores. If not, we should go through to the end.

Union Seminary Students Protest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the midst of the endless columns in the daily press expressing opinions on the various aspects of the war, most of them either implicitly or explicitly in approval of the militaristic philosophy out of which the whole monstrous conflict has sprung, there is room for a vigorous protest against the entire situation.

Among a number of the students of the Union Theological Seminary the vain efforts to justify this or that act of the belligerents on the basis of "international law," and the absurd attempts to distinguish between more and less "humane" warfare, have aroused deep wonder that Christians can expend their time on such problems and their thought on fabricating such excuses for the acts of any of the combatants, when the Gospel of Christ says clearly, "No war at all." They hold the firm conviction that it is essentially unchristian to take any attitude toward the whole conflict other than uncompromising, thoroughgoing opposition to it. The death of some 1,500 innocents in civilian clothes is not very much more horrible than the killing and maiming and moral slaughter of millions of innocents who may happen to be in uniform. All the gruesome and rankly immoral details of the tremendous conflict arouse only horror and the bitterest opposition to war as such, and to all the forces that go to cause it.

Rebuking R. H. Davis.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Without wishing to seem to approve of the German naval policy nor to pass judgment on the President's inaction, the final purpose of which I know no more about than Mr. Davis, it does seem to me that perhaps a few of the statements of this "Singer of no hate hymns" call for an answer.

"In the past," writes Mr. Davis, "it has been the duty of our Government to protect her citizens. Since Mr. Wilson came into office that duty has been neglected." How about the time that Mr. Davis was arrested in Germany, or was it Belgium? If I remember rightly, this Government's aid was called for and, if Mr. Davis's articles are to be taken literally, it was most effective in getting Mr. Davis out of the very jaws of death.

In regard to the statement that we have been admitting foreigners to citizenship who came here either to escape military duty or to make money—this is undoubtedly true, but instead of saying that this has been the case for "many years," Mr. Davis might have gone further, he might have said that since the foundation of the Government this has been the case. But Mr. Davis forgets that it has been these very people who in times of need have never flinched in their devotion to their adopted country—on Morningside Drive there is a statue of one, on Riverside Drive of another—I am only giving Germans as examples, because I suspect that it is against them particularly that Mr. Davis's diatribe against these "foreigners," who are now "Americans," is directed.

A Day for Memorial Services.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Shocked as all the world is by this awful tragedy of the sinking of the Lusitania, surely we must all feel a thrill of the greatest admiration for those brave men and that Belgian woman who, with the most sublime courage facing immediate death, risked their lives in helping to save the helpless little children, doomed to be the innocent victims of this premeditated outrage, which was to prove to the world the great power and strength of Germany. Let us pause and set a day aside to acknowledge these heroes and this heroine, who have done more to show the world there is something greater than the mere killing of men. Might does not make right, and we are sorry for this German nation, which we Americans wanted to respect, and whose children when they come to our shores as immigrants were given all the advantages which our great country has held out to the children of every nation. We are glad that many of our citizens of German origin do not countenance, but deplore, this act—an act which, after all is said, was one which only the most cowardly would be guilty of.

A Pro-German's Americanism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an intense pro-German, I would ask for space to indorse Herman Ridder's sentiments on loyalty to America. Whatever else we do or say or think or how we may differ, loyalty to this country must never fail. Breaking up into sections is the one evil from which God deliver us. It is said we are not a military nation, and not prepared to defend ourselves, &c., but if we want to forfeit completely the respect and the fear of strong

The press is gone mad for the moment, but I would ask if we were at war ourselves fighting ten nations and races, who were after our heart's blood, and daily shiploads of cartridges were brought to our coast in the enemy's vessels, would not every American father and mother, whose boys were on the firing line, insist that our submarines sink those ships, no matter how many neutrals, men and women, were aboard of them? How can any parent whose boys might be called any day to face the horrors of real war, (and I am one of those,) look at this any other way?

I think it would be found that those who are the loudest in wanting the Government to act with haste and even drag this country into war would be the very last to shoulder a gun. H. C. STRACK.

Shall We Break the Cross?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Whether we follow Christ or the brotherhood of man, let us not be wrought to such a heat of blood and inflammation of the mind that we are unable to think. "American patriotism," "national honor," "spitting on the flag," "piracy," "murder," "inaction and timidity," are soul-stirring and passion-rousing words. It is too well known for proof that we have been supplying arms and munitions of war to the Allies to our own commercial advantage.

Germany will do everything possible to prevent this. She says, "To hell with international law and precedents. War is war, and we will take every advantage we can. We meet new conditions. Modern warfare has changed. Whether it is a technical blockade or not, we will not let arms get to England."

Before we are possessed with passion and are bit with the present madness of modern civilization we must consider whether or not apparent piracy be not the horrible need and stress of war.

I am neither pro-German nor pro-Allies, but purely American. If it be unmanly to pause and not to raise a cry of insult unavenged before we consider the causes and the facts, I confess.

No hope for true thoughts or reasoned actions will exist if we plunge into a Berserker fury that will break the cross in two and strangle our ideals. Remember the ideal of our forefathers, the ideal of America—freedom. Free from Europe. Keep away! Keep away! FRED D. WELLS, Uninsulted.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

American people all know that there is a way in which they can remain perfectly safe, and Germany will be very glad to let us be unmolested. It is to do just as I and many hundreds of thousands of others are doing who have not money enough to place our fool selves and countrymen in jeopardy—stay here quietly at home, minding our own business.

Nine-tenths of the people in this country have not enough money to get themselves into trouble, and yet the other tenth are continuously meddling (the upper crust, who are supposed to have the most sense) and causing situations wherein they expect the other nine-tenths to rise up in their pride and defend the honor of the nation, as if that foolish one-tenth represents the nation! The majority of us are, as a matter of fact, so busy hiking for a living that we do not know we are insulted until we grab a newspaper and while hanging on a strap or swallowing a cup of coffee read in a scare head that we are going to war!

Benjamin Franklin's Apprehension.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is remarkable that Benjamin Franklin should have been able to prophesy a break with the Germans. On the 9th of May, 1753, he wrote to his friend, Peter Collinson, in England, as follows: "I am perfectly of your mind that measures of great temper are necessary with the Germans, and am not without apprehensions that, through their indiscretions, or ours, or both, great disorders may one day arise among us." He had not said "between us," but "among us," which is quite significant.

An Irishman Lauds Germany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Germany was justified in sinking the Lusitania, and if the conditions were reversed there is no doubt an American submarine commander would have acted in a like manner. Self-preservation is the first law of nature, and any ship carrying the means of destruction of German lives and property is liable to a similar fate. Whether it be legal or illegal, all the means possible must be pursued by the armed forces of Germany to protect the German people. It is my sincere wish that, if we Americans ever find ourselves in the same position as Germany is, with black, yellow, and white men attacking, our naval or military forces will not bow to legal niceties to our detriment.

The Great Betrayal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some day, when immediate need for practical help in Europe is past, we should erect a monument in Washington, the nation's capital, to those Americans who sacrificed their lives in the Lusitania; sacrificed by their very inability to conceive of such a crime being possible, which is proof of their own high-mindedness, else would they have considered the possibility of the act. Nothing should be spared to make it the most beautiful memorial, a reminder for the ages to come, that, simultaneously with this, the greatest crime in history, was exhibited an instinctive confidence in the fundamental humanity of man. As it turned out, they forfeited their lives in the pledge they gave of their unquestioning belief.

Das Ewige Weibliche.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To the author of "Ashamed," by H. B. Seibert, published in THE TIMES, Wednesday morning, May 12, 1915:

That anyone would write such a despicable poem as you wrote, and that THE TIMES would publish anything so unjust, is utterly beyond my comprehension. How dare you call the sinking of the Lusitania "murder"? If the conditions had been to the contrary, the Lusitania Germany's ship, and bound for Germany, let us say, with ammunition aboard for Germany, don't think for a single instant that England or France or Russia would not have sent one of their assassins of the sea to destroy it.

You say you loved and were proud of the Fatherland. Your love is indeed shallow. If you are one of the sons of Germany, then Germany has a Judas in her ranks. If my country, America, has such sons as you, I should want them shot before sunrise.

MUSEUM'S TEXTILE ROOM IS CHARMING

Opens Anew Today, with Rare Tapestries, After Removal of Morgan Porcelains.

FINE OLD ANTIQUES ALSO

Artists and Designers Are Encouraged to Study the Collections —Ancient Roman Glass.

The big gallery, D 10, of the Metropolitan Art Museum, which was first opened to house the Morgan collection of porcelains twelve years ago, opens anew today as a textile room, and it was never more beautiful or attractive. Since the taking away of the Morgan porcelains the walls have been recovered in pale tan shades, and are now hung with tapestries whose predominating color is soft old blue, and this gives a charm to the room aside from the beauty of the tapestries seen in detail, and this is great.

Beautiful ecclesiastical vestments in rich materials and wonderful embroideries fill the centre of the room, with here and there a strong note of vivid red, making a study in color tones that is altogether delightful. The cases containing the textiles are not in too close juxtaposition, and the entire effect of a beautiful room may be obtained from all points. From its charm as a room, the Morgan porcelains will never be missed; it is better as it is, and the textiles and the tapestries are all quite as well worth study in their own lines. The tapestries have never been brought together before, and they show to advantage in this great 100-foot long room, which is, with the exception of the main galleries of the Musehm, the largest in the building.

On the right wall, on entering the room, are the two magnificent early Gothic tapestries loaned by George Blumenthal, fifteenth century Burgundian—"Gothic verdure tapestries with personages," as they are technically described. The first has much of the deep blue in its predominating tone, with figures on horseback, showing costumes which there are no pictures of the times representing. The second, with rich red notes, has the old inscriptions which no one has yet been able to read.

On the south wall is a series of six Renaissance tapestries, Dutch and Flemish, new to Museum visitors. They were selected by the late Stanford White for Mrs. Charles P. Barney and placed in a room which he designed for her to house them, which burned recently, leaving the tapestries, fortunately, but little damaged except by smoke. They give the history of Diana.

Cupid and Psyche Set.

On the north wall is the Cupid and Pysche set, five tapestries of typical French Renaissance design, which formerly belonged to the Duchess de Dino and are now owned by Joseph Sampson Stevens. On the east wall are the Mortlake tapestries, the large one, Vulcan appealing to Jupiter, belonging to Mrs. A. von Zeidlitz, and the other two lent by the A. W. Hoyt estate.

The Museum has never before been able to present the tapestries that it has previously had on exhibition to such advantage, and the collection together is a revelation of beauty. Around the sides of the room are fine old antiques, some of the furniture belonging to the Bolles collection, presentd to the Museum by Mrs. Russell Sage, and for which there has not been hitherto space for exhibition. One curious old piece is a "livery cupboard" of the period of Charles II.

Since the war requests have come to the Museum from many designers and artists for material from which to work, and those making the demands have been greatly surprised to learn that to fill such needs is one of the chief ambitions of the Museum and that its arrangements for such students are most complete. Its record of the work done in this line the last year, a statement of which it made public yesterday, is complete.

"We hear of people saying that they wish such help could be obtained at the Museum and our greatest desire is to let the public know that our collections are for their use, and that we have made every arrangement for their comfort and convenience," said Henry W. Kent, Secretary of the Museum, yesterday. "We have small study rooms and larger class rooms, and we have now issued a pamphlet telling of the extensiveness of our textile collection, and we are sending this to manufacturers, designers, and art students to give them an idea of the advantages we can offer them in that line."

The pamphlet, a supplement to the monthly Bulletin of the Museum, is illustrated, showing textiles of different periods and nationalities. It tells of the scope of the Museum's collection, which is remarkably broad, and its arrangement. It tells of the costumes included, French and American, Russian Court and peasant, gives a bibliography of books that are in the Museum library, to be consulted, and even pictures of its class and study rooms.

Decorators Take Designs.

Many of the best-known workers in the arts relating to house furnishing and decorating, with others, have made designs and copies from the museum collections during the last year, and the variety of the different lines is interesting. Interior decorators have taken designs from the Louis XVI. room in the Hoentschel collection, copies have been made of Queen Anne furniture, and reproductions of stained glass windows from watercolor sketches have been made for a private house. Ornamentation from an old-time spinet and harpsichord was copied for a piano that was made to order, a decorator took designs from the Boscoreal room in the Museum for a Pompeiian room he was decorating, and another artist made use of a panel in Fragonard style for other house decoration. Over doors and over mantels have been studied by one architect, and another has made a study of tapestries for use in his work. A large New York firm took designs of some famous old rugs for new ones it was having made, and even a Persian rug man, studying the construction of rugs here, made sketches of some of the Museum's treasures.

A maker of pottery studied colors and glazes for use in his work, a sculptor copied the Tanagra figurines, and a marble and mosaic worker took plaster-line studies of a Louis XVI. mantel to reproduce in marble. A mural decorator sketched a flower panel in the Hoentschel collection ,and an Assyrian teacher made sketches for tiles. A woman interested in handwork reproduced an embroidered table cover, an organ manufacturer had sketches of organ action made, and drawings of monumental subjects, for use on automobile hearses, rounded out the number of uses to which a museum collection can be put. The Museum even came in touch with moving pictures, and photographs of the Antwerp Cathedral were made for use by a film company. This is aside from the varied work done by students in the Museum.

Collection of Ancient Glass.

In the recent accession room of the Museum is to be seen this month an exceptionally beautiful collection of ancient Roman glass, a bequest from Mrs. Mary Anna Palmer Draper. There are 124 pieces, showing wonderful iridescence, and it is in an exceptional state of preservation. The color is remarkable for its brilliancy and variety. The glass dates from the last century B. C. to the fifth century A. D., and was most of it found in Syria. Other objects in the bequest of Mrs. Draper include four eighteenth century Flemish tapestries, miniatures, and textiles.

Small objects which will interest a wide circle of the Museum's visitors, and which are to be seen in the recent accessions room, are a seventeenth century jester's bauble, Flemish, two of the eighteenth century, French, all with their dangling bells; two quaint old whips and a bailiff's and a sheriff's truncheon. They are the gift of Mrs. Frederick F. Thompson.

WOMEN WIN RIBBONS.

Mrs. Allen Potts, After a Fall, Takes the Blue at Capital Horse Show.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13. — Fifteen events scheduled for yesterday and deferred by rain were given this afternoon at the Capital City Horse Show, which will come to a brilliant close tomorrow afternoon. Few officials were present today, but the largest resident contingent the meeting has yet known filled the grand stand and boxes.

The Fifth Cavalry Band gave a concert before the opening of the show, and also played between events. Mrs. Allen Potts, who has taken many ribbons, had her first fall of the meeting, but promptly regained her saddle, uninjured. In the next event, jumpers not over 3 years, Mrs. Potts took the blue ribbon and first cash prize with Acme. Three horses from E. L. Redman's Middleburg Stable took the remaining prizes in this class.

Mrs. William F. Hitt won another blue, and $50 for Judge Moore, driving his phaeton pair, Vida Frye and Burgomaster. Judge Moore took the red with another pair, with Miss Ella Ives of New Bedford, Mass., and John L. Bushnell of Springfield, Ohio, being other prize winners.

Mrs. C. H. Chipchase, of New York, took a silver cup and a blue ribbon riding Sceptre, Mrs. Allen Potts being a close second with Day Star.

The Peter Voorhees de Fraw Memorial Cup for local hunters, was taken by Edward B. McLean's Ravello. Mrs. Helen Bu chanan, riding Katy-did, took $30 and the red ribbon. There were 32 entries in this class in which E. B. McLean took a yellow ribbon with Sir Braxton.

The Four-in-hands, and ponies in harness were among the events of particular interest. Judge Moore took first prize with his four-in-hand, the Pabst Stock Farm being second. Master Lloyd Moore, the four-year-old son of Mrs. A. C. P. Wickfeld, took the blue in the pony class, driving himself. The red went to Miss Anna Hamlin, daughter of the President of the Federal Reserve oBard.

In additinon to the officers of the show the large attendance included ex-Ambassador to France and Mrs. Henry White, the Minister from Denmark, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Wainwright and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Barker, who were the guests of Col. and Mrs. Thompson; Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Colonel and Mrs. Symons, General Nelson Miles, Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyke Wendell, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs. Edward McCauley and Lieutenant and rMs. Herbert Howard.

VANDERBILT RENTS ESTATE.

Leases Colgate Hoyt's Eastover, on Centre Island, for Summer.

Cornelius Vanderbilt has leased Colgate Hoyt's estate, Eastover, on Centre Island, L. I., for the Summer, through Clifford van Schurman. This is one of the finest estates on Long Island, and the rental is said to be $20,000 for the season.

The estate consists of 185 acres, with a mile of water front on Long Island Sound, and it also faces on the harbor. It has a deer park, swimming pool, and a herd of registered imported cattle. The land is adjacent to the Seawanhaka Yacht Club, and adjoins the estate of Ormond G. Smith, on which a new million-dollar residence has just been completed.

Several weeks ago it was reported that Mr. Vanderbilt had rented the estate of Mrs. Cyril Dugmore at Great Neck, L. I., which Benjamin N. Duke has now leased for the Summer.

NEWPORT HOMES MADE READY

FARRAR SINGS AS GODDESS OF LIBERTY

AUDIENCE JOINS IN SONG

Incident Before the Last Act of "Carmen" Sung at Benefit for Sewing Girls of Paris.

The special performance of "Carmen" given last night at the Metropolitan Opera House for the benefit of the sewing girls of Paris became a patriotic demonstration for Americans for a short time a little before midnight.

As the footlights were turned on for the last act W. Bourke Cockran came before the curtain and made a short speech thanking the audience and the artists for their efforts in behalf of the charity. Then he sent a bubb of excitement over the ouditorium by announcing that to make the occasion notable Geraldine Farrar would sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

In a moment the curtains were parted. Miss Farrar was revealed standing on a broad pedestal dressed as the Goddess of Liberty, a red and white striped cap on her head, the national shield over her left arm, and in her right an American flag resting with the butt of its staff on the ground. Beneath her on the base of the pedestal knelt Misses Braslau and Sparkes of the company, dressed in the white uniforms of trained nurses with red crosses on their arms.

Behind the group stretched an enormous drop curtain of dull blue that covered the rear of the stage, and as beams of calcium lights played on the singers from the wings a picturesque effect was created that sent gasps of excitement through the audience. It was taking the demonstration too seriously, however, to allow of applause at this time. All over the house the people rose to their feet involuntarily.

Miss Farrar sang the first stanza alone to the accompaniment of the orchestra. Her voice rang out on the high note near the end till it filled the whole auditorium, and raised the flag, and the brass crashed on the final cadence, and then a storm of applause broke out. The curtain was raised and lowered four or five times, but the audience would not be satisfied.

The singer gave a sign for silence, and then said, "Please all sing it with me!"

For the second time the orchestra started. All through the house the audience took the tune up, and those who had so often been sung to had their chance to raise their own voices in the Metropolitan Opera House. Among those who frequent it are singers who are no longer on the active list. Down front, near the stage, on the south side of the building, there was one of these, and as the high note which Miss Farrar had held previously hurled out came, a ringing tenor voice rose over all the others singing it. It held true to the pitch, and all eyes turned in the direction of the singer. Evidently for a moment he had imagined himself back on the stage. To see him nod at the applause that followed was the last touch needed to complete the picture.

The crowd was as much carried away by its own enthusiasm as he was by his, and applauded vigorously. But there were no more chances. Soon the conductor appeared in the pit and the opera was resumed.

The cast that was heard was for the most part the same that has previously appeared in the opera this season. In addition to Miss Farrar, there was Mme. Alda as Micaela, Mr. Martinelli as Don José, and Mr. Amato as the Toreador. Andrea de Segurola sang Zuniga in place of Leon Rothier, and the others were Misses Sparkes and Braslau and Messrs. Leonhardt, Reiss, and Defrere. Mr. Polacco conducted.

Among those who heard the performance were Camille Saint-Saens, the French composer, who was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, with M. Hoverlaque, Inspector General of Education for France. The Maharajah Jagat Jit Singh Bahadur and the Maharanee were in another box. In the audience were some of the officers of the Atlantic Fleet in dress uniform. After the first act M. Saint-Saens went behind the scenes to meet Miss Farrar.

THE DREAD OF CATARACT.

Needless, Say Specialists, for It Is an Eye Disease That Responds to Treatment.

The public has a horror of the word "cataract." It is a synonym of irremediable blindness. This is bad for two reasons, according to eye doctors. In the first place, the patient and his friends are inclined to regard every eye trouble as cataract. Every spot on the eye, every decrease in vision, causes the fear, "I'm going blind from cataract." Frequently, the patients go to the oculist so wrought up that even his favorable opinion fails to relieve them. In this state they fall easy prey to quacks.

Sometimes there is an actual improvement in the ocular state, as a result of which the remedy to cure cataract is heralded far and wide. On the other hand, they may serve to keep the patient from securing proper treatment until the condition, which at first was comparatively harmless, may have progressed beyond the possibility of cure. In the second place, even if the patient has a cataract, the outlook is by no means hopeless. It must be explained to him that the nature of the disease is such that there will be a progressive loss of sight until a certain stage is reached, after which it will be possible by a delicate but not especially dangerous operation to restore the sight.

In only a very small percentage of cases does the eye become blind. In the great majority of cases, a high degree of useful sight is obtained, and in some a condition approaching normal vision results. In fact, cataract is one of the most favorable of eye diseases which cause loss of sight, and a patient whose failing sight cannot be remedied by glasses, should hail this diagnosis with relief instead of horror, according to specialists in diseases of the eye.

FROHMAN BEARERS CHOSEN.

Authors, Actors, and Managers for Services in Temple Emanu-El.

The arrangements for the funeral services of Charles Frohman were completed yesterday upon the receipt of a cable by Alf Hayman from William Lestocq, Mr. Frohman's London manager, and Haddon Chambers, stating that the body was being taken to Liverpool. It will be placed on the American liner New York tomorrow and is due to reach here a week from Sunday.

The honorary pall bearers have been chosen by the family through Daniel Frohman from the authors, actors, and managers most closely associated with Mr. Frohman. The pall bearers by groups will be: Authors—Augustus Thomas, Edward Sheldon, George Ade, Henry Arthur Jones, Paul M. Potter, John W. Alexander, Richard Harding Davis, and Porter Emerson Brown. Actors—William Gillette, E. H. Sothern, Otis Skinner, Henry Miller, William Faversham, William Collier, Francis Wilson, and John Barrymore. Managers—A. L. Erlanger, David Belasco, C. B. Dillingham, William Harris, Alf Hayman, Marc Klaw, Charles J. Rich, John D. Williams, Samuel F. Nixon, and Harry J. Powers.

Application for admission cards to the public services should be made in writing to A. B. Lyon, Empire Theatre Building. Each card will admit only one person, and none will be admitted without a card. The public services will be held at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning, May 25, in the Temple Emanu-El, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman officiating. The services at the home of Daniel Frohman, 145 West Seventy-ninth Street, where the body will be taken immediately upon the arrival of the ship, will be private. It is the earnest wish of the family that no flowers be sent, Mr. Frohman having expressed his disapproval of such expressions of grief many times. On the day of the services all of the Frohman enterprises will be suspended.

A statement concerning the future policy of the institution established by Mr. Frohman will be made tomorrow by Alf Hayman and Daniel Frohman.

Rev. Dr. W. A. Alexander.

The Rev. Dr. W. A. Alexander, for twenty years pastor of the Siloam Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, died in St. John's Hospital on Wednesday after two operations. He was born in Fayetteville, N. C., in 1853, and was graduated from the theological department of the Biddle University, at Charlotte, N. C., in 1883. He received the degree of D. D. from Wilberforce University, Ohio. Dr. Alexander was elected Moderator of the Brooklyn Presbytery and was elected twice by that body to represent it at the general assembly. He is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

FRIARS' CLUB PLANS FILED.

New Building Will Have Five Stories and Cost $130,000.

The building will occupy a frontage of 61 feet, and will replace the three old houses at 106, 108, and 110 West Forty-eighth Street, near Sixth Avenue. It will be five stories. On the first floor will the billiard and pool rooms and a grill room. The second floor will be entirely taken up by the grand dining hall, with a raised platform for a stage in one end. The third floor will be devoted to the library, offices, and cardrooms, and the floors above to thirty-six sleeping rooms. On the roof there will be a large inclosed gymnasium and two handball courts. The cost of the new clubhouse is placed at $130,000.

Wilhelm Otto Lutz.

Wilhelm Otto Lutz, Deputy Surveyor of the Port of New York and head of the United States Customs Guard, which he organized, died on Wednesday at his home, 1438 Clinton Avenue, Woodhaven, L. I. Born in Pforzheim, Germany, forty-eight years ago, Mr. Lutz ran away from home when he was 13 years old and enlisted in the United States Army. He went to Porto Rico as chief sergeant of the Fourth Regiment of the United States Cavalry and after the Spanish-American war he was made a United States Deputy Marshal. Later he became the Chief of Police of Porto Rico and his excellent services there attracted the attention of President Roosevelt, who ordered him to New York, where he organized the United States Customs Guard. He is survived by his widow and son.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The company that will be seen in the farce, "She's In Again," in the Gaiety Theatre,—beginning Monday night, will go to Poughkeepsie today for preliminary performances there. Some 300 Vassar undergraduates will attend tomorrow's performance as a compliment to Lillian Galer, a former student of the college.

Dudley Field Malone has purchased 350 tickets for tonight's performance of "The Midnight Frolic," on the New Amsterdam roof, for the use of officers of the fleet and visiting Vice Presidents of South American republics. Several features will be added by Flo Ziegfeld for the occasion.

The Toyo troupe of acrobats and jugglers, Will Oakland, Burt Daniels, and Lester Conrad have been added to the list of entertainers who will contribute to the program to be given next Friday afternoon for the benefit of the Green Room Club.

Gertrude Hoffmann and the company appearing with her in the Palace Theatre will board M. S. Bentham's yacht Psyche after tonight's performance for a cruise around the fleet. The Palace Orchestra will go along to serenade the sailors.

Arrangements have been made by the New Brighton Theatre with the B. R. T. for the addition of special trains for the convenience of New Brighton patrons before and after performances.

Robert Fraser has been engaged by Selwyn & Co. for the role of Jerry Belden in "The Show Shop" next season.

The United States Court of Appeals affirmed yesterday the uidgment of the ower court in dismissing the copyright action brought by Miss Bachman against David Belasco. The plaintiff contended that Mr. Belasco's play, "The Case of Becky," was an infringement of her play, "Etelle." Judges Lacombe, Coxe, and Ward held that there was not sufficient similarity between the two plays to suggest plagiarism, although they both dealt with the same theme.

Although Sarah Bernhardt's engagement at the New Amsterdam is four months distant, many telegrams and letters for seats and boxes the opening night have already been received. One of the requests received yesterday was from Geraldine Farrar.

J. C. Williamson, Limited, will soon produce "Potash & Perlmutter" in Australia, with the following American cast: Paul Burns, Sam Liebert, Margaret Vinton, Nancy Winter, Lizzie Wilson, and Sam Howard. This company has also acquired, through Sanger & Jordan, the Australian rights to "Inside the Lines."

HOW BRITISH MONEY WAS LOST IN SOUTH

STATESMEN LOST $100,000

Recent Talk About Possible Repudiation of War Debts Makes Old Article of Interest.

In connection with recent suggestions regarding the possibility of Germany or some of the other warring nations repudiating their national debts after the struggle is over, a statement of the investments by leading British statesmen and publicists of the 60's in the bonds of the Southern Confederacy and their consequent hopes for the success of the South in the civil war, reprinted in the April 28 issue of Greenwich Village, Guido Bruno's magazine, is of special interest. The article was originally published in Donahoe's Magazine in 1867. W. E. Gladstone, according to this statement, had invested $100,000 in Confederate bonds, and the owners and publishers of the leading London papers are also on the lists.

"The recent efforts of English capitalists," says the article—recent, of course, in 1867—"to create a boom in Confederate bonds has led to additional revelations concerning the assistance given by English capitalists in the Southern States in the war of secession. The manner in which these English bondholders hope to realize at least a portion of the millions sterling which they advanced in order to dismember the United States is to induce the Southern States to petition the United States Government to transfer to the bondholders the unappropriated balance of the Alabama award, and of the larger amount of money received from cotton seizures in the South during the war. It is thought by them that ten millions of dollars are lying idle in the Treasury at Washington. This would be thirteen or fourteen million dollars, or about one-third of the amount they would be satisfied with as a settlement. The amount of the Confederate debt is said to be four hundred million dollars. It is mostly held in Europe. How much of this the syndicate will be able to gather in remains to be seen. At any rate, the syndicate, if successful, will reap a vast reward for their outlay.

Scheme Was Forlorn Hope.

"It is needless to say that such a scheme will never be successful and that it will only be resorted to as a forlorn hope on the part of those English capitalists who foolishly parted with their pounds sterling in order to gratify their prejudices against this Republic, and with the hope that the success of the Southern Confederacy would be the death knell to a united republic on this continent.

"In this instance, however, John Bull reckoned without his host, and now that his hatred of democracy has cost him millions of pounds, we hope he will be made even more miserable by the reflection that not a single six pence will ever find its way back into an Englishman's pocket.

"Mr. Ivan C. Michels, a Russian gentleman well informed on the transactions between the late Confederacy and European powers, furnishes a list of names of some of the holders of the Confederate cotton loan bonds.

"Mr. Michels says that these were the actual losses, moneys paid by each individual, but the amount of Confederate bonds they received in return amounted to several million dollars. He obtained the information through his London correspondent. Mr. Michels thinks the zeal of the London Times is best understood and explained by the contributions of Messrs. M. B. Sampson and John Thadeus Delane, editors of the newspaper, as one parted with £15,000 of his wealth and the other contributed to the lost cause to the extent of £10,000.

List of Prominent Bondholders.

Southern Ox Gored John Bull.

"The foregoing figures exhibit the startling fact that the twenty-nine individuals who thus opened their purses for the perfidious purpose of pulling down the Stars and Stripes of this great Republic lost no less a sum than $4,400,000 by their insane investment. We have heard of many "wild cat" schemes, but assuredly John Bull was badly gored by the Southern ox when he undertook to support the Southern cause in order to help destroy this Republic.

"Much interest is manifested in this matter as to what sentiment is held by the Southern people themselves regarding this new movement to place the English-bought Southern bonds in such a position as to, at least partially, recoup the English investors therein.

Judge Lochrane of Georgia when asked recently his opinion upon this momentous question, was very candid in giving his opinion, which we annex:

"The idea of the States paying the Confederate War debt, which, like slavery, was abolished by the fall of the Confederacy, is absurd, and to discuss it would be giving dignity to absurd nonsense, except that the movement seems to have respectable names connected with it.

"It may be that distinguished attorneys have given abstract opinions as to the present validity of the debt, but such attorneys could not earn their bread in Georgia." He adds: "But to add to all this trash the threat that the bonds issued by the Confederacy shall be paid by the Southern States, or else English capital will be withheld from Southern enterprises, and thus stop the progress of Southern prosperity until the full value of these bits of paper, hardly worth a penn a bushel, shall be made good to my Lord Penzance and his syndicate—such a proposition is ridiculous in its presumption. The assumption that the South with her present credit and property is dependent upon English capital to develop her resources, is an effort of English arrogance excusable only for its ignorance. But if the South had to pay the Confederate war debt, in whole or in part, to obtain English capital for its enterprises, then—to be as emphatic as possible, I would say as to my opinion that we can tell these gentlemen to go to the devil with their money, their therats and their attempted blackmail."

HAYWOOD COMES OUT AGAINST SOCIALISM

Tells Industrial Commission It Is Wholly Incapable of Bettering the Labor World.

'MOTHER' JONES HEARD, TOO

Gives Story of Her Life and Says She Lives Wherever Workers Are Fighting Robbers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—"Mother" Jones related her autobiography today to the Industrial Commission and made one of the most entertaining witnesses that could have been brought before that body. Not a question interrupted her and she proceeded in her quaint way without being tied down to geography or continuity of events. At times her narrative became tragic and again and again was pricked out with witty and sharp comment that started a round of laughter. She will conclude tomorrow and will receive an opportunity to define what remedy she would advance for the social unrest of the laboring people.

W. D. Haywood of the I. W. W. finished his statement to the commission today, denouncing Socialism as wholly incapable of bettering the labor world.

"We have an example of it," he said, "in Germany. The Social Democratic party is discredited in the eyes of the working people. They have gone in for war and the I. W. W. is opposed to war."

The witness then quoted John D. Rockefeller as saying "Common labor is an inanimate machine." When doubt was suggested of this having been said by Mr. Rockefeller, Haywood retorted:

"Ask him when he comes before you next week what is his viewpoint."

Mrs. Harriman asked Haywood: "If you do not believe in war, why do you believe in violence in labor disputes?"

"Nothing more violent could be done to a capitalist," replied Haywood, "than to drain his pocketbook. I believe in that kind of violence."

Dr. Frank J. Goodnow, President of Johns Hopkins University, presented a paper in which he defended the use of militia in strike situations and held that resistance on the part of laboring men was improper. For the acts of the militia in the usurpation of constitutional rights, he urged that there was redress in the courts.

Commissioner Weinstock continued his examination of Haywood and developed that when the "general strike to which the I. W. W. looks forward as a means of revolutionizing society, had taken place, there would be no government, state and national."

"The workers of the country," Haywood said, "would be organized into industries instead of cities and states. As a citizen of industry every worker, man, woman and child, would have voice in fixing the conditions under which he would work. At present labor has practically no voice in the affairs of the country."

"But you cannot change the whole world over night," said Commissioner Weinstock: "what are you going to do in the meantime?"

"It may not come for one hundred years," replied Haywood. "Meantime we will keep plugging along with this class struggle, hoping for the great change tomorrow, but working for it, even if it takes a century."

Questioned by Commissioner O'Connell, Haywood said that unemployment was one of the most pressing causes of industrial unrest, and suggested that the Government extend its reclamation, river and harbor improvement and other public works in order to afford opportunity for employment.

When "Mother" Jones was called, Chairman Walsh asked for her residence, and she replied:

"I reside wherever there is a good fight against wrong. I live wherever the workers are fighting the robbers."

Beginning with the Pennsylvania Railroad strike at Pittsburgh in 1877, "Mother" Jones told of her efforts to help "the boys" in their various "fights." She told of leading an "army" about from mine to mine in the Pennsylvania coal strike of 1900, "pulling out" the men at work.

The witness told of being carried out of Colorado by militiamen and of hurrying back on the heels of the escort that took her to the State line. She described the horrors of industrial war and at times tears streamed from her eyes as she told of the treatment of men, women, and children.

FERRY TO THE PALISADES.

Will Run Across the Hudson River from Dyckman Street.

A new ferry across the Hudson is to be set up between Dyckman Street, Manhattan, and the property owned by the improvement company of the Palisade Park Commission on the New Jersey shore. It will be run by the Dyckman and Englewood Ferry Company and the fare is intended to be 5 cents.

The proposal came yesterday before the Sinking Fund Commission through a letter written by George W. Perkins, Chairman of the New York Palisades Park Commission. In this it was stated that the ferry company would build slips on the property owned by C. K. G. Billings in Manhattan and on the New Jersey shore without expense to the city, and it was said that now that Summer was coming many persons crossed the river at this point in small boats in order to reach Palisade Park in spite of the danger.

Dock Commissioner Smith offered a resolution granting a franchise to the company for two years at $1 a year, with the privilege of a ten-year renewal at a price to be fixed by arbitration. The resolution was passed with the understanding that the city could revoke the franchise on ninety days' notice.

WANT BUSES IN BROADWAY.

Merchants Seek Service Now Planned for Seventh Avenue.

The Broadway Association is endeavoring to get the Committee on Franchises of the Board of Estimate to modify the routes it has laid out for motor buses, so as to make the line which is planned for Seventh Avenue from Times Square to Fourteenth Street run down Broadway from Times Square to one of the streets of the lower thirties, by which it might approach the Pennsylvania Station and Seventh Avenue.

The association is backed in this request by many of the business men of the neighborhood of Herald and Greeley Squares, including Jefferson De Mont Thompson, W. S. Gilson of the Hotel Martinique, John David, M. D. Brill, R. F. Spencer, Treasurer of the United States Rubber Company; M. F. Huberth, Dr. Paul H. Zagat, and H. R. Mallow of the Hotel Wallick.

Jesse I. Straus of R. H. Macy & Co. has written to the Franchise Committee to point out that as soon as the new Interborough subway is completed, Seventh Avenue will have the same transit facilities as Broadway, whereas it has nothing compared with Broadway to attract traffic to it. So he considers that the route selected should be through a thoroughfare which has been already developed by office and loft buildings and stores.

JENKINS ESTATE MUST PAY.

Creditors of the Williamsburg Trust Company to Get $110,000.

Justice Manning, in the Equity Term of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, gave judgment yesterday for $110,000 to the Williamsburg Trust Company in its suit against the estate of the late John G. Jenkins, whose financial dealings were alleged to have been responsible, in a measure, for the failure of that institution in 1907. The money was alleged to have been obtained from the company by Jenkins in 1906-07, on notes.

Jenkins made a trust deed by which he placed his real estate holdings in the hands of his sons and son-in-law. Justice Manning ordered this trust deed set aside and the Jenkins estate to pay the $110,000 to the trust company.

The money will be paid to creditors of the company, which is in process of voluntary liquidation.

$500,000 EASTMAN GIFT.

Will Erect Home for Rochester Chamber of Commerce.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 13.—George Eastman has purchased the Arcner property at St. Paul and Mortimer Streets, one block from Main Street East, and will erect thereon a building that will cost not less than $500,000. He has offered to give the building to the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, with the one condition that the chamber equip and furnish the structure at an expense of $100,000.

The Chamber of Commerce has accepted the offer and proposes to raise the $100,000 without delay. The building will be only a few stories in height, but it will be one of the handsomest in Western New York.

In the past few years Mr. Eastman has given about $3,000,000 to various public institutions in this city.

FRENCH LOSS OF TRADE.

PARIS, May 13.—The value of imports of France during the first quarter of 1915 was less by 842,000,000 francs ($168,400,000) than in the corresponding quarter of 1914. Exports diminished 1,294,000,000 francs ($258,800,000). Virtually the whole of the reduction was in raw materials.

The figures for April show that imports of manufactured goods increased to the amount of 101,000,000 francs ($20,200,000) over April of last year. There was an increase of 5,000,000 francs ($1,000,000) in foodstuffs. April exportations were lower by 322,000,000 francs ($64,400,000). Nearly all of the increase in manufactured articles came from the United States.

TO SPEND $3,500,000 ON COLUMBIA SITE

Many New Buildings Contemplated in General Improvement Scheme.

TO DECORATE AVERY HALL

Completion of University Hall Will Place It Second Only to the Library in Impressiveness.

Additional buildings and other architectural improvements to cost more than $3,500,000 are contemplated at Columbia, according to a pamphlet recently issued by the university showing the lines along which it is planned to develop the present campus equipment. Although there are now sixteen finished and one half-completed building in the Columbia group, erected at a cost of $8,000,000, exclusive of equipment, a total of twenty-five is desired to complete the university unit. This does not take into account the future of Barnard and Teachers Colleges for which special provision must be made.

When Columbia moved from its old home at Forty-ninth Street and Madison Avenue, the land lying between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue from 116th Street to 120th Street was considered sufficient to meet the university needs. On this the trustees planned a group of sixteen buildings with the Low Library as the central figure. All but four of the original sixteen halls have been built. The purchase of South Field, between 114th and 116th Streets and more recently half of the block extending from Amsterdam to Morningside Drive, between 116th and 117th Streets, has vastly enlarged the university layout. On the latter property stands the President's house, while there are already three dormitories and two lecture halls on South Field with sites selected for three more buildings.

Although it is likely that South Field will remain the students' athletic field for many year sto come, the pamphlet shows that it is destined eventually to be built up with groups of buildings forming quadrangles on the east and west sides.

To Complete University Hall.

The completion of University Hall is regarded as the most pressing need in the way of additional equipment. Part of the building which was destroyed by fire last Fall is now being replaced at a cost of $150,000, but the total cost of completing the hall will be $1,200,000. When finished it will rank second only to the library in impressiveness. It will contain an auditorium capable of seating 3,500 to 4,000 persons, and in which the commencement exercises, public lectures and concerts and oratories now given by the University chorus in Carnegie Hall, will be held. In addition it will contain an Alumni Memorial Hall, the offices of the Comptroller, Bureau, Registrar, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, and other administrative departments of the university, and club rooms for students.

"This building," says the pamphlet, "will be the largest on the campus, its total dimensions being 259 feet by 176 feet, and it will have a height of four stories above the 150-foot level, so that the cornice will be on the line of the adjoining buildings. A very beautiful portico will form the principal featuure of the south façade, facing the library, and the design of the building as a whole, while conforming to the general treatment of the university buildings, will express its dignity and importance by somewhat richer detail."

A combination dormitory and students' dining hall is planned for the corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 114th Street, balancing with Hamilton Hall, which occupies the corresponding corner at 116th Street. This hall will cost $550,000, and will have accommodations on the upper floors for 300 resident students.

Two lecture halls, each costing $550,000, are contemplated, one for the corner west of the library, wher the Faculty Club now stands, and the other for the site now occupied by old East Hall, completing a quadrangle east of the library with Kent Hall, the Philosophy Building and St. Paul's Chapel.

The construction o ftwo aditional residence halls on the Broadway side of South Field, at a total cost of approximately $600,000, will partially enclose the quadrangle of which Furnald Hall and the School of Journalism form the north end.

To Decorate Avery Hall.

In order to enhance the artistic features of the campus, it is proposed to decorate the facade of Avery Hall, where the School of Architecture is housed, with casts of the most perfect specimens obtainable of Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, and Tuscan orders, and with other arhitectural details from classic buildings. This will be part of the decorative treatment of Avery Quadrangle, for which it is proposed to spend $11,800. A fountain and balustrade, with masses of rhododendrons for a background, will complete the decorative features.

It is also proposed to replace the old wooden fence along the 116th Street side of South Field with a granite balustrade similar to that now bordering the approach to the library. For this $10,523 is needed. The approaches to Earl Hall from Broadway and to St. Paul's Chapel from Amsterdam Avenue are to be similarly improved at a cost of $15,000.

The pamphlet also describes four granite posts or pylons which are to mark the approach to the university at Broadway and at Amsterdam Avenue. There will be two such pylons at each corner, the four being surmounted by statues symbolizing Arts, Law, Science, and Letters. Designs have been approved by the Municipal Art Commission and permission to erect the pylons has been granted by the Board of Aldermen. The total cost is estimated at $36,000.

Additional statues for the library and a number of memorial windows for Kent Hall, St. Paul's Chapel, Livingston Hall, the Philosophy Building, and Avery Library are also called forr.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

In Town.

NATHAN RUBENSTEIN, of 954 Prospect Avenue, formerly a builder, now a plumber, has filed a petition in bankruptcy as a poor person unable to pay the fees. Liabilities are $606,475, of which $189,300 appears to be duplicated, as they are on both bond and mortgage, and no assets.

ELIAS W. SAMUELS and JACOB W. SAMUELS, salesmen, of 606 West 135th Street, have filed separate petitions in bankruptcy to get rid of judgments obtained against each of them for $5,538 for rent. They were formerly partners in Harry Samuels & Bros., wholesale flowers and feathers, at 704 Broadway, against whom a petition was filed on April 26, 1913.

JULIAN W. ROCHLITZ, of 108 West Forty-third Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $9,014 and no assets.

WILLIAM H. TURNER, of 126 West 103d Street, room clerk at the Hotel Claridge, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $1,460 and no assets.

LOUIS C. BERGMAN, of 304 West 127th Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $1,826 for lumber and assets $315 in accounts.

GERMANY TO PAY FOR GOODS SEIZED

Notice of This from the Foreign Office Transmitted by Ambassador Gerard.

HOW TO PUT IN CLAIMS

So Far Provision Made Only for Property Taken in Occupied Territory for Military Use.

American Ambassador Gerard has sent from Berlin a note from the German Foreign Office telling of the formation of an Imperial Indemnity Commission whose business it is to look into and settle claims for neutrally owned property sequestered in enemy territory occupied by German forces. This commission consists of three jurists and two merchants. They will fix a suitable indemnity for confiscated goods when taken for the military authorities. The offices of the commission are at Mauerstrasse 53, Berlin, W. As need arises the commission will also visit Belgium and Northern France. Interested parties are requested to communicate with the President of the commission, Dr. Hiekmann.

There are a number of claims by Americans which will come before the commission. Mr. Gerard says that discussion is still proceeding concerning the extension of the powers of the commission to adjudicate regarding similar merchandise confiscated in Germany itself. As yet, however, nothing is definitely arranged on this point and these matters are still within the jurisdiction of the War Office.

In sending this information, the Ambassador gives these further details:

"Hereafter private individuals will not necessarily be obliged to present their claims to the German Government through the intermediary of the embassy, but will be permitted, should they so desire, to approach this commission direct, either in person or in writing. The embassy may, of course, continue to transmit such claims on behalf of private individuals through the mediation of the Foreign Office.

"The competency of the commission does not at present extend to the granting of permissions for exportation, although this power may eventually be given. For the present, it is only after permission for exportation has definitely been refused and the goods taken for military purposes that the jurisdiction of the commission begins. I am given to understand that American-owned goods of the character described, the exportation of which to the United States is desired, must either be permitted to leave or indemnity therefor be paid. The duties of the commission are twofold: First, to investigate the exact rights of ownership in the goods and, secondly, to fix the amount of compensation.

"I gather that the American claims presented up to the present time through the embassy are much less in number than those on file from other nations. Considerable delay and labor are involved withdrawing such outstanding claims from those Government departments, whether in Germany or in Belgium, which have been investigating them up to the present time. Heretofore practically no decisions have been made in such matters, but the entire question will now be considered as a whole and the various claims passed upon in accordance with stated and uniform principles.

"Details and rules of procedure before the commission have been drawn up and will shortly be published. In general it may be said that procedure before the commission may be, but is not necessarily, by representation through legal counsel. Claimants, if employing third parties to represent them before the commission, must use for this purpose barristers-at-law, and cannot have other private individuals or merchants as representatives. Appeal from the decisions of the commission may be made to a higher court of law. A time limit will be set within which claims may be presented to the commission."

By way of explanation of the tardiness in handling the subject, the German Foreign Office has this to say:

"An early settlement of the matter has encountered difficulties arising from the frequent inability of the owners of the goods to prove themselves such without further steps. This is mainly due to the fact that even before the occupation of Belgium, particularly of Antwerp, considerable quantities of the goods there stored had been in part confiscated or requisitioned by the Belgium Government, in part carried away from Belgium or destroyed on the spot by the Belgian and English troops. In consequence the establishment of the identity of the individual goods with the merchandise listed on the commercial documents has been made much more difficult."

Prices Better at Wool Sales.

LONDON, May 13.—The offerings at the wool auction sales today amounted to 6,000 bales, which were quickly sold, principally to the home trade. The only wools now 5 per cent. below the last auctions are heavy merinos and a few wasty crossbreds.

Few Shipments of Colors.

Dyestuff handlers in this city are receiving practically no colors on steamers now arriving from Rotterdam. The Oosterdyck, from Rotterdam, arrived yesterday with a cargo of general merchandise, but brought little in the way of colors. The ship's manifest showed that 130 packages of common colors were consigned to E. & F. Waldo, while Muller, Schall & Co. received 24 casks of antimony salts. Bear Brothers were manifested for 20 packages of chrome colors. The steamer Noordam, in Wednesday, brought a few consignments of chemicals, but nothing of any account in the strictly color line.

New Lines in Corsets.

The salesmen connected with the corset houses will soon be out on their Fall trips with new sample lines. A gradual change has come about in corset styles, and the new designs lean more toward following the natural lines of the figure than has been the case. The skirt of the corset is made shorter, with a straight back and front, and the bust is medium. More boning is used than formerly to enable the corset to perform its function of support more properly than it has. The principal feature of the new styles, however, is the curve which is permitted over the hips, doing away with the "hipless" figure that was fashionable for so long a time.

Silk Trade Feels Dye Scarcity.

The dyestuff scarcity in the silk trade is getting beyond the point where it was merely a talking point for the salesmen. The manufacturers in some cases find it impossible to get dye suitable for turning out the navy blue taffetas that are now so popular. If the proper ingredients are not obtainable in this case the manufacturer is up against it for the reason that substitutes give a very unsatisfactory result. Buyers are examining such goods very carefully these days, on the lookout for examples of substitution. Generally, where something besides the proper dye has been used the fabric will "crock." The crystals of coloring matter do not penetrate the fabric but, instead, gather on the surface, where they rub off, giving the goods under handling of any sort a "patchy" appearance.

Chances Good for Merger.

There is very good chance that the committees acting for the two associations in the coat and suit trade will effect some sort of arrangement whereby the two organizations will be merged into one. Meetings have been held, and another such conference will take place today. At first the idea was taken up merely with the object of providing for an amalgamation that would enable the two associations to work together on certain matters while retaining their identity. The prospect is now, however, that the two bodies will be united. The only thing standing in the way is understood to be the terms under which the members of the United Association are to be taken into the Protective Association. The guiding spirits in the plan recognize that the benefits to be derived are many, chief of which would be the opportunity to deal with labor problems as one body.

Raw Silk Markets.

In the local raw silk market there is a good daily demand at firm prices. Stocks in importers' hands are not well assorted, and the mills are finding difficulty in filling their needs, especially in the coarse sizes. Advices from Italy, received by H. L. Gwalter & Co., report the Milan market active, but stocks are depleted. Yokohama reports a moderate demand. The week's sales there have been 3,500 bales, with shipments of 1,000 bales to Europe and 3,600 to America. Stocks have been reduced to 10,000 bales. The Canton market is firm under a good demand from Europe and this country. Reelers are reluctant sellers, and it is difficult to obtain firm offers. Shanghai prices are firm and unchanged, but business has become complicated because direct communication with the city has been interrupted. Cables have to pass through Hongkong in plain language, subject to the restrictions of British censorship. Tsatlee sorts and tussah silks remain quiet.

Not Profitable to Grow Timid.

With the slack period at hand, the coat and suit trade is manifesting once more signs of uneasiness over the orders they have given the mills for next Fall. Some cancellations are being received by the mills as a result of this timidity, and it would appear as if the situation that occurred last Fall is about to repeat itself. At that time the cutters-up got scared for no reason at all and canceled right and left. Finally, when business started up with them, they were forced to buy back the very goods they canceled at big advances. With the dyestuff situation growing more serious as time goes on, piece goods salesmen are advising their customers to keep what they have ordered or they may find themselves unable to secure certain fabrics at any price.

Gray Goods Market.

The gray goods market continued to remain firm yesterday. Considerable activity was reported in heavy goods. There was also fair bidding on wide print cloth for forward delivery. The mills showed little inclination to sell on contract. There was quite a little inquiry for goods from interior points. Efforts on the part of buyers to use concessions named by second hands as a bear argument were of little avail. Printers and converters appear to be fairly well covered for the current month, and a good deal of forward business seems to be contingent on what cotton is going to do. Some slight concessions were obtainable for small lots, but the market as a whole remains firm. Leading commission houses yesterday quoted spot goods as follows:

39 -inch,	68-72s	4⅞c	38½-inch,	60-48s	3⅛c
38½-inch,	64-64s	4¼c	27 -inch,	64-60s	3¼c

They Waited Too Long.

From advices received from out of town by jobbers and manufacturers' agents here it would seem that many retailers in various sections of the country put off buying early Summer goods too long. These storekeepers, who apparently wanted to wait and actually experience Summer weather before placing their orders, appear now to be reaping the results of their lack of foresight. This applies to ready-made goods as well as to piece goods. Many of the demands for stocks now being made cannot be filled as quickly as the merchants had expected. In some instances jobbers find their own stocks of the merchandise wanted are limited. Quite a few local firms of jobbers have been under the necessity of sending word to prospective buyers that their orders will be filled as soon as possible. To many in the district, the anxiety of retailers to get goods reflects a shortage of stocks indicating a healthy trade condition. It is taken for granted that merchants are not handicapped by surplus stocks.

Linen Imports Hard to Get.

The course of the linen import business these days is not one to be envied. Since the war began, importers in this line have had one trouble after another thrust upon them. These have included extraordinary advances in prices, heavily increased freight and insurance rates, Custom House friction, and other ills too numerous to mention. It remained for the Lusitania disaster to put the finishing touches to a situation already overcharged. Cable advices received here tell of the higher prices now being asked at Belfast and Dundee. Certain lines of linen sheetings which were recently closed out, cost local firms in the Belfast market 18½d., while now manufacturers offer to supply new goods at 27d., or what amounts to an advance of 50 per cent. In addition, since the torpedoing of the Cunard liner, marine insurance and freight rates have increased, while the shifting prices, almost from day to day, bring conflicts with the customs officials as to the amount of duties to be paid. Everything points to a mark-up in price lists, while prices on some lines have been practically withdrawn. The situation remains one of great uncertainty.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Decisions on Lithographed Paper and Metals Among Them.

Charles D. Stone & Co. were sustained yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in protests against the Collector's assessment under the Tariff act of 1909 of merchandise reported by the Appraiser to be signs composed of surface coated paper printed by other than the lithographic process. Duty was levied accordingly at 5 cents a pound and 30 per cent. ad valorem. The goods were claimed properly dutiable at 6 cents a pound under the provision for articles lithographically printed exceeding twenty-one-thousandths of one inch in thickness.

The uncontradicated testimony of the Government Examiner who passed the articles was that the medallion in the centre of each of the articles is lithographically printed and over the thickness claimed by the importers. Judge Fischer held that the goods were specifically provided for under the provision claimed, the Collector being reversed.

J. F. Lavigne imported under the Act of 1909 half-pound and flat steel wire upon which duty was taken at 45 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of metal. The claim was for a tax of 35 per cent ad valorem under Paragraph 135 according to gauge. The record failed to have any evidence as to the gauge of the wire in question. In overruling the contention, Judge Fischer pointed out that the first proviso to Paragph 135 does not establish 35 per cent. as a primary rate, but does establish it as a minimum rate.

William Larzelere & Co., Philadelphia, lost in protests against the Collector's levy of duty under the old tariff at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem on galvanized iron strips. The importers insisted that the merchandise was properly dutiable at six-tenths of one cent per pound as shapes of rolled or hampered iron.

It was decided that lavallieres and long neck chains, composed of silver or white metal, studded with imitation precious stones or pearls imported by O. G. Hempstead & Son, Philadelphia, are commercially known as jewelry carrying duty at 60 per cent. under the Act of 1909. The Collector was reversed in taking 85 per cent. under the adornment provision. The same firm failed, however, to get classification as jewelry on hatpins, fobs and so-called coat chains. As to these, the Collector was affirmed in taking 85 per cent. duty.

Arguimbau & Ramee were sustained in the claim that hermetically sealed tins containing red peppers imported under the Tariff act of 1897 are free of duty as the usual coverings of such merchandise.

FIRE PROTECTION MEETING.

National Association Elects Charles E. Meek President.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the National Fire Protective Association came to a close at the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon with an election of officers for the ensuing year. Charles E. Meek of New York, who was elected President, pointed out in his speech of acceptance the great amount of work which confronts the association. In the United States last year, he said, the losses from fire exceeded losses from commercial failures by one-third. He urged a more diligent application of fire regulations throughout the country.

The officers elected were: Charles E. Meek of New York, President; Louis Widerhold, Jr., of Philadelphia, First Vice President; D. Everett Waid of New York, Second Vice President, and Franklin H. Wentworth of Boston, Secretary and Treasurer.

The Executive Committee will consist of F. J. P. Stewart of New York, Chairman; H. W. Foster of Philadelphia, E. B. Hatch of Chicago, H. O. Lacount of Boston, A. M. Schoen of Atlanta and Nathan R. Strong of New York.

$1,000,000 LOAN TO BOLIVIA.

Advance Obtained from City Bank to Meet War Difficulties.

The National City Bank has negotiated a loan of $1,000,000 to the Bolivian Government, one-half of which is to run for one year and the rest for two years. The loan is expected to be of material assistance to the borrower in tiding over difficulties incidental to the European War.

Six years ago J. P. Morgan & Co. negotiated a loan for $2,500,000 on 6 per cent. bonds bearing a 2 per cent. amortization. These bonds were purchased at 90, but were bought back by the Bank of the Bolivian Nation before the bankers had distributed them. The National City has also had direct dealings with Bolivia before in connection with the financing of the Bolivian Railway.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Recede Further on Suspense Over Outcome of Our Note to Germany.

With the knowledge that the note of the United States had been started on its way to Berlin the stock market yesterday wavered between the hope that Germany would accede to our demands and fear that they would be rejected in whole or in part. Toward the end of the day the effect of the uncertainty which must last until it becomes known what Germany's reply will be, caused a general decline in the market which left very few stocks which did not show net losses for the day. This downward movement was a natural enough consequence of the doubts which were felt concerning the German reply.

In some important banking quarters the view was expressed that Germany could not do otherwise than meet our demands. In some others equally definite opinion was held that Germany would not yield. Still others took a most hopeful view of the situation and expressed the belief that in some way out of the situation which now exists between Germany and ourselves would come an opening for discussion which would limit the scope of the present warfare if it did not actually supply an opening for peace negotiations. That point of view, however, was more optimistic than most people in the financial district felt able to accept.

The action of the market was for the most part regarded as entirely natural under the circumstances. Both the reaction in prices and the sharp reduction in the volume of trading were welcomed as befitting the situation with which the country is dealing. There is confidence in the existing economic situation in this country and in the business outlook, but there is also recognition of the seriousness of the question which dominates all other questions at this time. While from one point of view the decline was a natural result of suspense over the outcome of our representations to Germany, from another point of view the fall in prices was the penalty which the market paid for the light-hearted advance of Tuesday.

Yesterday's weekly statement of the Bank of England suggested one reason why even the recent heavy decline in the proportion of the Bank's reserve did not lead to the establishment of the British credit in New York about which there has been so much talk. The Bank reported yesterday the very extraordinary gain in gold of over $36,000,000 for the week. Its ability thus to add to its gold supply, bringing up its proportion of reserve nearly 3 per cent. in the course of a week, suggests the resources which even in these days the Bank of England can command to strengthen its reserve position. It was naturally assumed that this gold came from the Bank of France, which was lately reported to have made a shipment of somewhat more than the amount of the gold gain reported by the English Bank. It is to be presumed that this gold was sent to England, in keeping with the understanding reached at the time of the conference between the British, French, and Russian Finance Ministers in Paris and as an outcome of the credits which the London market had previously extended to France.

In this shifting of gold is seen the effect of some of the extraordinary financial operations which have been incidents of this unparalleled war. In some of those transactions we have played a part. Should the war last and much greater pressure be put upon the reserve resources of the countries of Europe we will no doubt be urged to take even larger part in international financing. Already we are in an unusually strong position to deal with any such demands, and should they later become more urgent we will no doubt have been further strengthened in the interval by the influx of gold, which is a natural sequel to the abnormal overbalancing of our imports by the exports of goods purchased here to fill Europe's war-time needs. The fact is that our financial position in a variety of ways has been strengthened against any eventuality. That is something which may reasonably be regarded as lessening the concern with which the financial community faces the outcome of the situation in which we now find ourselves.

LONDON MARKET DULL.

Money and Discount Rates Easier on Bank Return.

LONDON, May 13.—Money and discount rates were easier on the better bank return today.

The stock market was again listless and price movements were narrow. Standard and gilt-edged securities were steady, but speculative issues were dull. New issues were not wanted, and the underwriters were left with 88 per cent. of the £5,000,000 Argentine issue and 77 per cent. of the East Indian Railway loan on their hands. The former was quoted at 1½ per cent. discount.

American securities opened steady. Only a small amount of business was done, and prices dropped in the afternoon. The closing was dull.

British Bank Statement.

LONDON, May 13.—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes:

Total reserve, increased	£7,267,000
Circulation, increased	58,000
Bullion, increased	7,324,615
Other securities, decreased	3,080,000
Other deposits, increased	10,486,000
Public deposits, decreased	6,301,000
Notes reserve, increased	7,845,000
Government securities	Unchanged

The proportion of the Bank's reserve to liability this week is 21.06 per cent.; last week it was 18.14 per cent.

Rate of discount, 5 per cent.

Travis to Reinstate Rosenthal.

Eugene M. Travis, State Controller, said yesterday that he would comply with the decision of Justice Weeks by reinstating Julius Rosenthal as legal examiner and investigator of the Stock Transfer Tax Bureau. Rosenthal will be paid $3,600 a year, and according to the Controller, will have nothing to do but sign the payroll and draw his salary. Mr. Travis held that the position of examiner put an unnecessary burden upon the State, and suggested that the place be abolished. Rosenthal claimed that he was removed because he was a Democrat. He was a civil service employe.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Waiting Market.

Yesterday's market gave plenty of evidence that the public had decided to let the session go by without doing much in stocks. The feeling that it would be well not to take a position until more light had been thrown on our relations with Germany was more intensified in the Street than on other days since the Lusitania was sunk. It was said on the Exchange that professional traders supplied nearly all the business of the afternoon and much of that of the morning. Since the first two hours established the tone of the day as weak, it could be argued that a great deal of the selling that occurred was by holders of long stock who desired to have their funds free until fuller news came from Washington. Trading reached stages of dullness at times which had not been equalled in many weeks. It was truly a waiting market.

Steel's Closing Upturn.

Steel's close appeared to show that someone decided at the last minute to buy even though he had to pay a price. A quotation of 52½ came over the tape shortly before the gong sounded. Then came a long string of prices for other issues, and commission house audiences decided that Steel was going to leave off at this figure. But just as the day's end was announced on the board 300 shares sold at 52⅞ and then 100 at 53. These prices came over the ticker several minutes after 3 o'clock, and many followers of the stock had by that time gone away believing that the final price was 52½.

The Argentine Loan Abroad.

The offering of $25,000,000 of new Argentine bonds in London met with a very different reception from that accorded the other half of the loan here. It was announced yesterday that of this country's share $24,000,000 already had been sold, with indications that the small balance remaining would be subscribed for the late mails. The books have been closed in London on the British half of the loan with only 12 per cent. subscribed for, and the cable which brought this information added that the lists were closed to prevent withdrawal of the bids received. The balance will have to be taken by the underwriting syndicate.

Why it Failed.

New York bankers who brought out the American half of the Argentine loan were disappointed at the lack of success met by the British offering, but said they were not surprised for two reasons. In the first place, it was pointed out, a considerable amount of the maturities which it is proposed to pay off out of the proceeds of the new issue are held in Germany, or by German investors, and the English public has been in no frame of mind to subscribe money that might go out of the country since the Lusitania's sinking. In the second place, the English investor has learned that when a loan is not particularly attractive he can usually make money by standing aloof to let the syndicate members get the bonds. They handle underwriting differently in London, where it is customary to pay the underwriters a commission for standing back of a new issue. A British syndicate does not work together, as in this country, but is usually wound up almost immediately after a bond offering, and the members promptly sell their securities, sacrificing frequently their commission in order to get out even on unpopular issues. The public has learned to expect this when no eagerness is shown for a syndicate issue. In this country it is customary to hold a syndicate together for two or three months and to support the market for the new bonds brought out, if necessary. Then, when the agreement is terminated there usually remains such a small amount of bonds on hand that the managers do not need to fear a break in prices when the members' shares is distributed.

New National Banks.

During April there were twelve applications for permission to convert State or private banks to national banks and fifteen applications for permission to organize new banks. In that month thirteen new national banks were authorized to begin business with a combined capital of $1,120,000. There are now in existence 7,612 national banks.

Rock Island Troubles.

If a certain little clause in the indenture of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway $163,000,000 first and refunding mortgage 4 per cent. bond issue of 1904 could be wiped out over night, then the Rock Island would be in a fair way to get out of the receivers' hands on the morrow, according to persons closely allied with Rock Island affairs. This obnoxious little clause prohibits the placing of any prior or secondary lien on the property of the railway company. That is, the Rock Island system, despite all its troubles, cannot pledge any of its property for another mortgage without the consent of each and every holder of the first and refunding mortgage bonds. This is a most unusual clause to be contained in a railroad mortgage, for it works not only to the disadvantage of the railway but also to the disadvantage of the holders of the first and refunding mortgage. This is the clause which made trouble in 1812 when the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway was badly in need of money. There was only one way of circumventing the clause. Money was raised by issuing $20,000,000 debenture bonds, for which no mortgage was necessary.

A Possible Solution.

In the present crisis in the affairs of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway a new mortgage issue would help a great deal, it is contended. There has been some talk, consequently, of getting the holders of the first and refunding 4s to consent to a surrender of the clause in the indenture. A holder of a big lot of these bonds said yesterday he would willingly consent to a cancellation of the clause, and he said he saw no reason why every holder should not consent. No movement to get a general consent for cancellation has yet been started. "It seems incredible that such a clause should have been written into the indenture," said one banker yesterday. "I'll tell you how it happened. When the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway was organized in 1908 by the Reid-Moore interests the Directors wanted a big mortgage issue. They decided on $163,000,000, which, at that time, looked like an ocean of money. It was firmly believed at that time that the railway could draw and live on an issue of that size for ages to come. No future mortgage issue would ever be needed, it was thought. The bonds issued are due in 1934. Some one placed the clause in the indenture, and it looked harmless, but it has greatly embarrassed the management."

Profitable Experience IN Buying Bonds

should be used as a guide in making other investments. With this idea in mind we are recommending a bond secured by First Mortgage on a combination of Utilities in a substantial and growing community. The attractive price at which this bond can be bought makes it in our opinion a most desirable investment, not only now, but for the future as well.

COTTON TRADERS HAVE NERVOUS DAY

Market Opens with Moderate Decline and Then Seesaws Through the Session.

CLOSE SHOWS SMALL GAIN

Sentiment Is Bearish on the International Situation and Fine Weather in the South.

Although the cotton operators realize fully the gravity of the international complications now faced by this country and their effect upon the trade, yesterday's market revealed a degree of steadiness that was strangely at variance with the expression of opinion. There is no doubt that local sentiment is very bearish. It usually is so after such drastic declines as have occurred recently.

In view of the firm tone which characterized the forecast of President Wilson's note to Germany and the general belief that its terms would not be met in a conciliatory spirit, it was felt that cotton yesterday gave a good account of itself.

The market opened at a decline of two or three points and later sold off about ten points with October touching 9.70 and December 9.90. Around these levels, however, a good demand was quickly apparent and there was a moderate recovery. Along in the afternoon local shorts became uneasy and prices advanced about twenty points above the low level, although the reaction in the last half hour gave a close about unchanged to four points net higher.

Sentiment is bearish, and the news also is of a bearish cast, if one considers the anxiety over the international situation. The weather is more settled in the South and practically no precipitation was reported from Texas. Light scattered showers occurred in parts of the Carolinas and Georgia.

F. M. Cordill, one of the best known travelling crop experts, in reporting conditions in East Texas on a trip from Dallas to Shreveport, La., said that the start as a whole was very favorable. Stands were very good with little replanting, excepting in the low flat lands. He added that East Texas had considerable cotton already chopped out and some already cultivated. Outside of the grain belt, where the decrease in acreage was quite marked, the reduction in cotton acreage would be slight, he said.

Southern cotton men appear to be the most pronounced bears on the price of the staple at this time. One wire received yesterday from a prominent Southern shipper predicted a prolonged decline on account of the lack of export demand and the fine crop outlook.

The census report on supply and distribution, giving the consumption of American mills during April, will be published at 10 o'clock this morning. The trade is inclined to look for rather bullish figures, as it is believed the April consumption by American mills will be considerably in excess of the figures for the same month last year.

Dry goods reports make a favorable showing. Cotton manufacturers are said to have more contracts on their books than for some time past. The strike of weavers at Fall River was called off on Wednesday by a vote of the strikers, and they returned to work yesterday with full operations resumed in all seven mills.

Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged, Galveston ten points decline. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, unchanged 9.85 for middling upland. The range of contract prices was as follows: (Closed steady.)

NEW INCOME TAX RULING.

Regulation to Govern Deductions for Uncollected Debts.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—W. H. Osborn, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of Byron R. Newton, Acting Secretary of the Treasury, today issued a regulation limiting the power of income tax payers to deduct uncollected items of their income from the taxable total. The regulation is as follows:

"Debts on account of unpaid wages, salaries, rents, or items of a similar character which, if collected, would be properly included in gross income in returns of annual net income, will not constitute an allowable deduction from gross income as bad debts in ascertaining taxable net income unless the amount representing such debts has been entered on the books of the taxpayer and included as income in his income tax return for the year in which the deduction is claimed, and has also been charged off, as required by law, it being specifically provided that only such debts due to the taxpayer, actually ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the year, may be deducted as bad debts. An entry of the item on the books and its inclusion in gross income must, therefore, precede the charging off such item, and its deduction as a bad debt.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

F. J. Walters, A. W. Vradenbergh, and W. J. Kilkelly have been elected members of the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York.

Bedell & Co. are negotiating with the United Gas and Electric Company of New Jersey to purchase the latter's holdings of common stock of the Hartford City Gas Light Company.

A history of the Standard Bank of South Africa, Limited, is being issued by the local agency of the bank.

The Guaranty Trust Company will receive until 10 A. M. on May 28 offers for the sale to itself of 6 per cent. sinking fund bonds of the Autosales Gum and Chocolate Company at prices not exceeding 107½ and accrued interest, to exhaust the same of $50,141.

Holders of temporary certificates of first refunding and extensions mortgage bonds of the Wabash Railroad, upon presentation today or later at the Equitable Trust Company, are entitled to receive definitive certificates of deposit. Holders of the temporary certificates of the Wabash 4½ per cent. gold notes, which were due May 1, 1913, are entitled to receive definitive certificates on presentation at the United States Mortgage and Trust Company.

General Thomas A. Hubbard was yesterday made a Director of the Southern Pacific Company to succeed Hugh Neill, Secretary, who resigned.

The Cotton Exchange seat of C. Mayhoff has been sold to L. Munds for $12,600, a drop of $400 from the previous sale.

NOTHING FOR ROADS IN RATE LAW CHANGE

Interstate Commission Denies Plea for Advance Under Cummins Amendment.

MAY GET PAY FOR NEW RISK

Move of Southern Carriers to Raise Tariff on Some Commodities Also Disapproved.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Interstate Commerce Commission decided today that railroads could not automatically increase their freight rates 10 per cent. under the plea that on June 3 the so-called Cummins amendment to the rate law, prohibiting any limitation of the liability of a carrier to a shipper, would become effective.

The carriers' contention that they were entitled to an increase because of this amendment was based on the ground that their tariffs provide one rate when the usual bill of lading is used, and a 10 per cent. higher rate when a shipper rejects that bill and insists upon one with unlimited liability.

"Applying correct rules of interpretation," says the commission's report, "the Cummins amendment does not automatically bring into effect the increased rates. There is nothing in the expressed terms of this act or in the history of this legislation that shows any intent or purpose on the part of Congress to affect in any degree the existing rates charged by carriers for transportation of property.

"The lawful rates on file at this time, therefore, are the rates providing for the limited liability. The Cummins amendment, by making contracts limiting liability for loss caused by the carriers unlawful, does not destroy these rates, but they remain in effect and are lawfully applicable.

The commission declares that experience may prove that the railroads should be allowed increases on commodities where risks are increased, and that it has been shown there is need for a revision of bills of lading, &c.

"If, in a proper manner and a proper proceeding," says the report, "it shall be made to appear that with regard to any commodity or commodities, the existing rates do not afford the carriers proper compensation for the services they perform and the risk imposed upon them, it could hardly be denied that the rates on such commodities might properly be increased in a sufficient amount to properly compensate the carriers for their added risk and liability. Where rates are lawfully based upon declared values the difference in rates should be no more than that which fairly and reasonably represents the added insurance. It does not appear that this amendment to the act affords justification for any increase in rates on commodities in general."

Needed changes in bills of lading, livestock contracts, and certain parts of the carriers' classifications and rate schedules, the report says, cannot be made with the usual thirty days' notice, and permission is given to the roads to make such changes effective June 2, on not less than three days' notice.

The report makes it clear that the Commission does not approve the plan of Southern roads to increase rates on certain commodities, amounting to possibly 70 per cent. of their total traffic, by changing a rule in their classifications. It says there is no propriety in attaching "unreasonable rates" to one commodity for the purpose of compensating for additional risk in the transportation of another.

The Cummins amendment, the report says, applies to the transportation of baggage, and to express companies, but adds that questions relating to express companies will be disposed of later.

It points out that all the questions discussed in the report are subject to judicial interpretation, and that the commission's views might be somewhat changed "in the light of more complete information supported by competent evidence."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

All other factors in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange were overshadowed by the international situation which has arisen between the United States and Germany. Nervousness was pronounced in the trading. Early in the day prices broke sharply. This was followed by a partial recovery, with renewed weakness in the late afternoon. Just before the close there was a sudden rally led by United States Steel and Reading, and in which other prominent stocks sympathized.

WHAT IS NEW HAVEN WORTH?

Is there any justification for the present price of New York, New Haven & Hartford stock? What is the intrinsic worth of this stock, and what will be its position after the disintegration plans have been completed?

These are some of the questions that Mr. Moody answers in a special analysis of the property which we have just issued. Mr. Moody has been absolutely right in his analysis of the New Haven road for the past seven years.

A few copies of this special study are available for those who make the first inquiries.

THE MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY

To Holders of Extended Three Year Six Per Cent. Secured Gold Notes due June 1, 1915:

Attention is called to the Company's circular dated April 10, 1915, requesting holders to extend the above notes for one year upon the collateral by which they are now secured, and stating that a cash commission of one-half of one per cent. upon the face value of the notes would be paid the noteholders upon the extension becoming operative.

The advantages of the proposed extension both to the property and to the noteholders seem too obvious to call for further argument. The Board of Directors regard the collateral by which the notes are secured as adequate, but under existing conditions it is not feasible to place a new loan secured by that collateral. Accordingly an extension of the present notes is the only means of affording the recently elected Board of Directors an opportunity to prepare and submit to the security holders a comprehensive financial plan which will adequately provide for the present and future needs of the Missouri Pacific System.

Noteholders are urged to join in said extension by promptly depositing their notes with Union Trust Company of New York, or other depositaries designated by it and named below, which will issue therefor transferable certificates of deposit.

NEW YORK, May 14, 1915.

By order of the Board of Directors.

B. F. BUSH,
Chairman and President.

United States Reduction and Refining Co.

First Mortgage Six Per Cent. Thirty-Year Gold Bonds

The United States Reduction and Refining Company having made certain defaults under the terms and conditions of its First Mortgage dated July 1, 1901, securing the above mentioned bonds, and a Receiver having been appointed on April 22, 1915, in a suit brought by The New York Trust Company, as successor trustee, in the District Court of the United States in the District of Colorado, for the protection of the interests of the bondholders, and it appearing that the interest due July 1, 1915, on said bonds will not be paid, the undersigned at the request of the owners of a large amount of the bonds have agreed to act as a Committee to represent the interests of the bondholders. It is of the utmost importance to enable the Committee to deal promptly and effectively with the situation that bondholders act in concert for their mutual protection, and that they deposit their bonds with the Committee without delay.

The New York Trust Company, 26 Broad Street, New York City, New York, has been appointed the Depositary of the Committee to receive deposits of bonds and to issue Certificates of Deposit therefor.

The Deposit Agreement has been prepared, under the terms and provisions of which the Committee will receive deposits of bonds, with July, 1915, and subsequent coupons attached. Copies of this Agreement may be obtained from the Depositary, or from the Secretary of the Committee.

Dated New York, May 5, 1915.

Buy Submarine Co. Stocks

We will discuss with individuals how the shares of the Electric Boat Co., the builders of submarines, should be benefited by the present situation.

Public interest is to-day centered in the accomplishment of submarine craft.

An investment in these shares should prove profitable.

FILE ROCK ISLAND SUIT.

Minority Stockholders Ask for Accounting from Receivers.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Minority stockholders of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway seek to become parties to the receivership proceedings, recently begun by attorneys for the American Steel Foundries Company, according to a petition filed in the United States District Court today by Attorney Jacob Newman, representing Nathan L. Amster and other minority stockholders.

Attorney Newman said the minority stockholders desired to know how the affairs of the railroad company were being conducted under the receivership. Federal Judge Carpenter set the hearing of arguments on the petition for May 26.

Ray Copper Dividend.

President Sherwood Aldrich of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company announced yesterday that dividends would be resumed June 30 if nothing occurred to change the present intention of the Directors. In the quarter ended March 31 the output of copper was 14,463,213 pounds, as compared with 9,363,113 pounds in the preceding quarter. Operating profits were $777,759 and the surplus available for dividends amounted to $741,539, earnings being based on a price of 14.3 cents a pound for metal sold.

DECLARES SCRIP DIVIDEND.

Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. Pays Up for Two Quarters.

The Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company has declared a dividend of 4 per cent. on its preferred stock in scrip, which will bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. and mature May 31, 1916. The dividend is payable to shareholders of record May 31.

The company deferred the payment of the dividends of 2 per cent. each in the last two quarters, and the scrip declaration was to make them up. An option to redeem the scrip on Jan. 1, 1916, at par and accrued interest is reserved by the company after due notice to the holders.

A resolution passed by the Directors stated that the scrip dividend was made possible by the fact that earnings of the company for the year ended May 31 would be largely in excess of the amount sufficient to justify the payment of the full 8 per cent. for the year. Earnings for a time after the war broke out, the resolution said, were uncertain because of slow collections. While greatly improved, collections are said to be still below normal.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE

Morris and Essex Railroad Company

The undersigned, representing a large amount of stock of The Morris and Essex Railroad Company, have been constituted and are acting as a Committee under an agreement dated April 26, 1915, for the purpose of protecting the interests and enforcing the rights of the stockholders of that company under the lease of its railroad and property to The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company, dated December 10, 1868.

The Committee is of the opinion and has been advised that the additional dividend of one per cent. per annum provided for in the lease should not only have been paid by the D., L. & W. R. R. Co. to the stockholders of The Morris and Essex R. R. Co. for some years past, but should also be properly payable in the future, and has caused legal proceedings to be instituted against the D., L. & W. R. R. Co. to enforce the rights of The Morris and Essex stockholders.

For further particulars stockholders are referred to the Committee's circular letter of April 26, 1915.

The present officers and directors of The Morris and Essex R. R. Co. are substantially the same as those of the D., L. & W. R. R. Co., and their interest is adverse to that of the Morris and Essex stockholders. The Committee therefore deems it of the utmost importance that at the next annual meeting of the stockholders of the Morris and Essex R. R. Co. to be held on JUNE 30, 1915, independent directors of that company be elected.

The deposit agreement under which the Committee is acting provides for the deposit of stock and proxies. A substantial amount of stock and proxies has already been received. In view of the proximity of the annual meeting all stockholders are therefore requested, without delay, to deposit their stock and furnish the Committee with proxies to vote at the next annual meeting of stockholders.

Stock may be deposited and proxies filed with the Depositary, METROPOLITAN TRUST COMPANY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, No. 49 Wall Street, New York City, or with any of the following as agents of the Depositary:

Connecticut Trust and Safe Deposit Company, Hartford, Conn.
Bridgeport Trust Company, Bridgeport, Conn.

Trust & Deposit Company of Onondaga, Syracuse, N. Y.
Bankers Trust Company, Buffalo, N. Y.
National Newark Banking Company, Newark, N. J.
National Iron Bank, Morristown, N. J.

Transferable certificates of deposit will be issued in respect of all stock deposited, and application will be made in due course for the listing of the certificates of deposit on the New York Stock Exchange.

Copies of the Deposit Agreement and of the Committee's circular letter of April 26, 1915, and forms of proxy may be obtained from the Depositary and its agents and also from the members of the Committee and from its Secretary and Counsel.

Your Account Is Invited

To the Holders of Convertible Sinking Fund Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds, due January 1, 1931, of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company.

The Trust Indenture dated March 30, 1906, under which the above bonds were issued, contains the following restrictive covenant against the issue of additional stock, viz.:

"The Electric Company will not issue any additional stock entitled to preference or priority over its 'assenting stock' (now common stock), nor distribute any capital stock by way of stock dividends, nor issue any capital stock at a price more than ten per cent. below the market price of the stock of the same class at the time the new stock is offered for subscription or sale."

While the Company has ample capital for its present volume of business and any increase in business now contemplated, it desires to place itself in a position to sell stock at not less than par in case additional capital should at any time be required to provide for the growth of the business.

The Company therefore offers to bondholders the opportunity to participate in a Plan which provides for the retirement of the existing bonds upon terms which, if said Plan be consummated, will result in each bondholder receiving either:

(a) An equal amount of new bonds differing from the existing bonds in the omission of said restrictive covenant and in that instead of being convertible into common stock of the Company at the rate of $500 par value of stock for each $1,000 bond as at present, they shall be convertible into such stock at the rate of $1,000 par value of stock for each $1,000 bond on or before June 30, 1916, and thereafter at any time prior to maturity at the rate of $910 par value of stock for each $1,000 bond, or

(b) Cash for the deposited bonds at 105% and accrued interest, or

(c) Part cash and part new bonds at said rates;

Or, in case said plan be not consummated:

(d) The return of deposited bonds without expense to the Depositor.

In the meantime, if any interest is payable upon the existing bonds or the new bonds, it will be paid to the holders of the Certificates of Deposit upon presentation thereof to the Depositary.

The new bonds will not be redeemable prior to January 1, 1917. On and after that date they will be redeemable upon the same terms and conditions as the existing bonds, and in respect of any bonds called for redemption the privilege of conversion into common stock may be exercised up to thirty days prior to the redemption date.

The new bonds will first be offered to stockholders for pro rata subscription at 105 and accrued interest, the proceeds of bonds sold upon such offering to be applied toward the redemption or purchase of exisitng bonds at said price of 105 and accrued interest.

Said plan is embodied in an agreement executed by the Company under which the Guaranty Trust Company of New York is appointed Depositary and Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. are appointed Managers.

Bondholders desiring to participate in said Plan should deposit their bonds (in negotiable form with all unmatured coupons annexed) with the Depositary, which will issue transferable Certificates of Deposit therefor.

Application will be made for the listing of said Certificates of Deposit upon the New York Stock Exchange.

The Plan will become operative only when so declared by the Managers, Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in their discretion.

Copies of the Plan and Agreement, to which reference is made for the full details of the Plan, may be obtained from the Company or from the Depositary.

After June 15, 1915, bonds will be received by the Depositary only upon such terms as may be imposed by the Company with the approval of the Managers.

The proposed privilege of conversion into common stock at the reduced price, instead of at 200%, can be secured only by the deposit of a sufficient number of bonds to justify the Managers in declaring the plan operative.

By order of the Board of Directors,
GUY E. TRIPP,
Chairman.

GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK,
Depositary,
No. 140 Broadway, New York City.

We have agreed to act as Managers under the Plan and Agreement referred to in the foregoing notice and recommend the deposit of bonds thereunder.

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA CHEMICAL CO.
RICHMOND, VA., May 13, 1915.

WHEREAS, it has been the custom for twenty years to pay to the Preferred Stockholders their annual dividend of 8% in four quarterly instalments of 2% each; and

WHEREAS, financial conditions following the European War were such that the Company's collections were greatly interfered with, wherefore the Board of Directors deemed it advisable, in order to conserve their cash, to defer the payment of two quarterly dividends; and

WHEREAS, the earnings of the Company for the year ending May 31st, 1915, will be largely in excess of the amount sufficient to justify the payment of the full dividend of 8%, but collections, while greatly improved, are still below normal;

Be it

RESOLVED, that a dividend of 4% be declared payable to Preferred Stockholders of record on May 31st, 1915, said 4% dividend to be payable in scrip maturing May 31st, 1916, bearing 6% interest from June 1st, 1915, with an option to the Company to redeem said scrip on January 1st, 1916, at par and accrued interest. Intention to exercise said redemption to be given by written notice mailed to each scripholder as recorded on the books of the Company and by advertisement in three daily newspapers in New York and two in Richmond, Va., at least thirty days before January 1st, 1916.

S. W. TRAVERS, Treasurer.

FINANCIAL.

New Orleans, April 28th, 1915.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by constitutional amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon, on the 28th day of May, 1915, for the purchase of $500,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans; authorized by and to be issued under and subject to the act aforementioned, and the constitutional here, denominations and maturities of the amendment ratifying same, and of the authorized issue of $2,000,000, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue as given and prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being Ordinance No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 2340 Commission Council Series, approved April 20th, 1915, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Three hundred and fifty of said bonds are of the denomination of $1000 and three hundred of the denomination of $500, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, evidenced by coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, respectively of each year.

Said bonds are the second issuance out of the total amount authorized by said act and constitutional amendment, and are of the numbers, amounts and maturities, as follows, to-wit:

Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($350,000) of said bonds shall be of the denomination of $1000 each, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) of the denomination of $500 each, and of the numbers, amounts and maturities as follows, to-wit:

Fifty (50) bonds, Nos. 6451 to 6500, inclusive, of the denomination of $1000, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1953;

One hundred (100) bonds, Nos. 5901 to 6000, inclusive, of the denomination of $500, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1953;

One hundred (100) bonds, Nos. 5701 to 5800, inclusive, of the denomination of $500, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1951.

Said bonds are subject to call by the City of New Orleans on the first day of July, 1939, or on any interest day thereafter, at par and accrued interest on thirty (30) days notice of its intention to so redeem, published in the official newspaper of the City of New Orleans.

They are, by the aforesaid act and constitutional amendment, exempt from all State, Parish and Municipal taxes, and may be legally invested for the estates of minors and of interdicts, and are receivable by State, Parish and Municipal officers, where, by law, deposits of bonds are allowed or required to be made.

The payment of the principal and interest of said bonds is made a preferential charge upon the net revenues of the Public Belt Railroad of the City of New Orleans, and are and will be issued under and subject to the aforementioned statutes and ordinances, all of which are hereby referred to and made part of this advertisement for greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $500,000 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall likewise be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $500,000, in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to W. B. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Utilities, the Public Belt Railroad Commission, or to the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

A. G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

VANDERLIP PICTURES A UNITED AMERICAS

AT MERCHANTS' LUNCHEON

Acting Mayor McAneny Welcomes Representatives from the South—Argentina Responds.

A foundation upon which a United Americas may be built was the subject of Frank A. Vanderlip's address at the luncheon meeting of the Members' Council of the Merchants' Association at the Hotel Astor yesterday. A welcome was extended to the Central and South American delegates to the Foreign Trade Financial Congress soon to be held in Washington.

The greetings of the City of New York were extended by Acting Mayor George McAneny, and other cordialities were expressed by Collector Malone, William A. Marble, President of the Merchants' Association, and Samuel Hale Pearson, Director of the Bank of Argentina. More than a thousand members and their guests were present.

The other half of the world at war, where loss of moral values and reversion to alarming standards was far worse than the vast destruction of wealth, was contrasted by the President of the National City Bank with this hemisphere, where the representatives of all the nations, great and small, were gathered to develop and cement international understandings and friendships. Mr. Vanderlip was introduced by William C. Breed, Chairman of the Members' Council, as "one of the most public-spirited men in our city."

Mr. Hale was applauded enthusiastically when he asked, "Why shouldn't all our trade be in America and between Americas? Why should we go to the European Continent? If in South America we speak a different language, it makes no difference. It is exactly the same race; we have exactly the same laws, and we want to imitate the United States in every way possible. So let us hope that the commerce will be increased daily between North and South America."

In Contrast to Europe.

"There is an aspect to this gathering which is extraordinarily significant," said Mr. Vanderlip. "It is impossible that one could be otherwise than profoundly impressed with that fact. Here we are in the presence of the financial and commercial representatives of half the world. The merchants of the greatest metropolis of this hemisphere have come together to welcome all these distinguished delegates who are soon to assemble at the capital, and who are to take part in a conference, the object of which is to promote closer, friendlier relationships between all the independent sovereign States of the two Americas.

"Under ordinary conditions in the world's affairs such a gathering would be notworthy, but ordinary conditions do not exist in the world's affairs. Instead we are facing the most extraordinary conditions that have prevailed in modern times. The especially significant aspect of this occasion seems to me, therefore, to lie in the fact that while half the civilized world is in the death grip of the most gigantic combat in all history, these representative men are coming together for sympathetic, friendly, sober conference, the object of which is closer national relationships. They are coming together that there may be a better understanding between their countries; they are coming together with the hope that better understanding will lead to a reciprocal interest in the commercial affairs of these countries which shall be of mutual advantage in the life of their peoples.

"But while we were discussing such phases, would not every one of us know that there are deep and fundamental forces working in the world today that may make playthings of our little plan? Are not all precedents being shattered; is it not every day being made more certain that we may never, or, at least, not readily, return to the conditions of civilization and international life that we have heretofore known? Is it not becoming terribly evident that we have to deal with great primal influences, affecting national life, and that the working of these influences, novel and incalculable to most of us, and distant though they may seem, is of fundamental importance to every nation and every citizen of this hemisphere?

The Spirit of This Nation.

"Nothing can so fully develop and cement international understandings and friendships as a true appreciation of national ideals. Our guests are offered a rare, indeed, a unique, opportunity at the present time for reaching a true understanding of the spirit of the people of the United States.

"I want to say to you representatives of the other nations of this hemisphere that you have come to us at a time that offers you an opportunity to obtain an almost flashlight revelation of our national character. The soul and conscience of the nation are being laid bare. You may in these days learn more of our true national character than you could ever have had an opportunity to learn before. You will be able to judge with what strength and uprightness, with what forebearance and conservativeness, we stand in defense of our principles and our national honor. You will be able to learn what sort of fiber we have for such responsibilities and duties as are ours for guarding the peace of this hemisphere."

The population, wealth and trade of a nation did not measure its true greatness, said Mr. Vanderlip, who held that it was measured by vision in seeing the principals of right and justice, by the breadth of its appreciation of the great verities of humanity, by its strength in protecting civilization and by the sacrifices it was willing to make in guarding its honor and defending what was right. He added:

"We are a different people; but if we demonstrate that we recognize clearly what should be the course of action and the principles of honor to which a nation solemnly and deeply pledged to peace ought to adhere, we will be laying a foundation upon which firmly to build a united Americas.

The National Character.

"If our national course in the trying circumstances in which we find ourselves placed reveals to you and to your peoples that our national ideals are in accordance with your national ideals; if our action is such that you are convinced that we are a nation without dangerous ambitions; if you find that as a people we see clear-eyed what is right and just and honorable in international relations and have calmly apprehended what our course should be, and then find that we have the firmness of purpose and the courage for sacrifice, if necessary, to demand effectively that, in return, any other nation with which we maintain relations shall follow a course that is also right and just and honorable, I believe you will then have had such a revelation of our national character that there will follow true and permanent national friendships. If this revelation of character is such as I believe it will be, it will give to you an understanding of our ideals and an appreciation of our moral fiber that will bring a unity of sentiment in these two continents more important to civilization than all the trade relationships that we may ever hope to build."

Acting Mayor McAneny said it was a fortunate thing for the city that the mission of the South and Central American representatives brought them here. New York City would benefit from the immediate results of their work, which he described as a matter of great importance to the nation itself.

"These successive demonstrations of interest on their part in what we are doing," said Mr. McAneny, "these successive opportunities for that great demonstration of interest that is kindling in the United States in the trade to the south, all tend to bring us closer together; and surely, through every tradition of history, through everything that binds men upon any common principle, we ought to stand in the very closest of relationships."

A Better Understanding.

Dudley Field Malone pointed out the necessity for fast freight and passenger steamships plying between North and South America, to obviate the necessity of travelers and freight going first to Europe before reaching their points of destination in either of the two American continents.

"We all know that in years not very far past," said Collector Malone, "there was a very profound suspicion in the minds of the most sincere statesmen and leaders of thought and business in Latin America of the purposes and of the integrity of this Republic as a Government. I believe that the speech of the President at Mobile and the A B C conference have been an earnest of the fact that America wants not one foot of ground that doesn't belong to her, but is engaged in mutual co-operation for trade and commerce and the firm establishment of the friendship of all the peoples in this hemisphere."

The visit of the Central and South American representativs was regarded by Mr. Marble as marking the beginning of a new era of closer commercial relations between the two continents. That business relations were not closer in the past, Mr. Marble admitted, was due largely to the faults of the "self-satisfied Yankee." The business men of the United States formerly insisted on selling the merchants to the south merchandise put up in the manner required by home markets.

"If you wanted our cotton goods, we insisted that you must buy them put in sixty-yard lengths," said Mr. Marble. "If you wanted our brass tacks put up five gross in a package we were glad to sell them to you, but if you wanted them put up in one gross, we were not willing to do it. 'This is the way our goods are put up,' is practically what we have said to you, 'and if you don't like them, don't buy them.'

"But I want to assure you, gentlemen, that we have had a change of heart, and the time has now arrived when we are ready to meet your views not only as to the character of the merchandise, but absolutely on the manner in which the same shall be prepared for your market."

Mr. Pearson said:

Response from Argentina.

"Gentlemen, it is a great honor for me to speak to you in behalf of South and Central America. Our hearts have always been united. You might say that all of our republics have copied the Constitution of the United States and all of us have had Washington as our great man.

"It is a coincidence that I should come from the furthest point of South America, the Argentine Republic, and here I am in the furthest point north of the hemisphere—I mean as a republic. We have been wishing to extend our commercial lines as far as possible. My Government, the same as other South American Governments many years ago, named commissions and offered subsidies to have a direct line of fast commercial and passenger steamers to South America. Unfortunately, this has not occurred but let us hope that at this time, when we are all going to meet in Washington in a few days, it is one of the ideas and one of the lines of our program to do everything we can to convince the United States Government to do this.

"I can only thank every American because I cannot express individually to everyone the feeling of gratitude that all our South and Central Americas have for the hospitality and the courtesy which we have received from the moment we landed in this port."

The guests of honor were the following delegates from Central and South America to the Foreign Trade Financial Congress in Washington: Samuel Hale Pearson and Ricardo Aldao, Argentina; Adolfo Ballivián, Bolivia; Luis Izquierdo and Augusto Villanueva, Chile; Roberto Ancizar, Colombia; Enrique Jiminez, Dominican Republic; Enrique Gallardo, Dr. J. Cueva Garcia, V. Gonzales, and S. S. Wither, Ecuador; Ramon Arias-Feraud, Panama; William Wallace White, Paraguay; Isaac Alzamora and Eduardo Higginson, Peru; Alfonso Quinones, José Suay, and Roberto Aguilar, Salvador; Pedro R. Rincones, Venezuela; and these Consuls-General: Manuel Molina, Argentina; Ricardo Sanchez, Chile; Francisco Escobar, Colombia; Ramon Benoechea, Guatemala; R. Camillo Diaz, Honduras; J. C. Diaz, Nicaragua; Manuel Quintero, Panama; Mario L. Gil, Uruguay; J. Carnacho, Dominican Republic, and Gregorio Arbizu, Salvador.

EXTEND HEALTH EDUCATION

Maryland Committee Reports an Active Year of Work.

The organization of the Council on Health and Public Instruction of the American Medical Association, at the St. Louis meeting in 1910, was a definite recognition of the obligation on the part of the organized medical profession to educate the public, and to make its special and technical knowledge available as far as possible for the guidance of the people. Like all other activities of the American Medical Association this work can reach its highest development only through the co-ordinating and co-operation work of the State associations.

For this reason, each State Asosciation was asked to establish a State Committee on Health and Public Instruction if it had not already done so, or to delegate this work to one of its existing committees. Many States are now taking up this work. Probably in no State has it been developed to any higher point than in Maryland, in which the work of the Committee on Public Instruction was early inaugurated and has been carried on vigorously and enthusiastically.

In a recent issue of the Bulletin of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland appears an editorial review of the work of this committee for 1914. After stating that without question this work is one o fthe most important and valuable facvtors of the State association activities, attention is called to the health week held in Baltimore, with its accompanying public health exhibit, and to the smaller meetings and exhibitions held throughout the State, as well as to the large number of lectures and public talks on health topics given by members of the faculty in different towns and cities.

A noticeable feature is the number of members taking part in this work, thirty-five speakers being furnished from the members of the State Society. The subjects were generally popular questions of hygiene. The addresses were given throughout the entire year in churches, school houses, colleges, and town halls, and before labor organizations, women's clubs, local business men's organizations and similar bodies. One hundred and eighty such addresses were given in the year.

DETROIT CARMEN ON STRIKE

DETROIT, Mich., May 13.—After conferences between city officials, the Detroit United Railway and its striking employes lasting all day, the opposing afctions were still unable to agree upon a plan which would end the street car strike that went into effect here this morning. Although the discharge of a motorman for alleged carelessness in his work was the direct cause of the strike, it was understood that other differences arose during the day. The officials refused to make public, however, the nature of those differences.

During the day the railway officials refused to meet the strikers. Only a few interurban cars were seen on the streets of Detroit during the day. No city cars were operated.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

The wheat market was very nervous, and while price changes were numerous and at times the market showed comparative firmness, the tendency of values was downward, and at the close of the day the market showed net losses of 2 to 2⅝c. In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.63 and No. 2 hard, $1.64½, cost, insurance, and freight, track; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.59¾, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.62¾, cost, insurance and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The corn market was again easy, closing ⅜@1⅛c net lower. Reports from Argentina said that the weather there had turned clear and cold, and that the movement to the ports was larger. Crop conditions in the West were also very satisfactory, and there seemed to be little in the situation to encourage buying, as stocks here are still liberal and the cash and export demand was very indifferent, although late in the day there were rumors that exporters had taken about twenty loads. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 86c, prompt shipment.

OATS.

The oats market was comparatively steady during the greater part of the day, owing to a better export demand, which resulted in sales of about 400,000 bushels, but toward the close values eased off in sympathy with wheat and corn, and final prices were ⅛@⅝c net lower. The local cash market was steady, standard quoted at 60c; No. 2 white, 60½c; No. 3 white, 59½c; No. 4 white, 58¼@59½c; fancy clipped white, 60½@62c; ordinary clipped white, 59½@61c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was only moderately active and price changes were comparatively small. The hog markets were generally firmer but this was offset by the late weakness in grain and prices closed near the lowest point of the day. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 17,000, estimated for Friday, 15,000; Kansas City received 6,000, and Omaha 8,800.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 4,911 packages. Under quite strong pressure to sell prices receded further, and nearly all grades of creamery are about 1c lower. At the decline business is very moderate, and it looks as if some goods will be carried over in spite of the strong pressure to sell. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 27¼c; higher scoring, 28@28½c; firsts, 26½@27c; seconds, 23@26c; thirds, 22@24c; old, common to prime, 22@26c; State dairy, finest, 27@27½c; good to prime, 25½@26½c; common to fair, 22@25c; renovated, extras, 23@23½c; firsts, 22@22½c; lower grades, 20@21c; imitation creamery, firsts, 21½@22c; ladles, current make, firsts, 21@21½c; seconds, 20@20½c; lower grades, 18½@19½c; packing stock, current make, No. 2, 19@19½c; lower grades, 18@18½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 28,150 cases. Arrivals are running lighter, but a larger proportion of the supply is coming on the open market and the offerings are large. Qualities are extremely irregular, and the market shows an irregular tone. The highest grades are fairly steady, but there is a smaller proportion of such, and more of the supply is selling at the lower quotations. The medium and lower grades are weak under pressure to sell, and values are showing a wide range. Dirties and checks must be exceptionally fine to reach top quotations; most sales of dirties range from 17c downward, and checks 16c downward. Nearby whites overplentiful, and there is a liberal accumulation, consisting chiefly of average good and lower grades, which are pressing for sale at a range of 21½@22½c; only very fancy stock commands higher prices. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 22½@23c; storage packed, extra firsts, 21¾@22c; storage packed, firsts, 20¾@21½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 21½@22c; regular packed firsts, 20@21c; seconds, 18@19½c; thirds and poorer, 16@17½c; storage packed, dirties, No. 1, 17@18c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1, 17@17½c; No. 2 and poorer, 14½@16½c; checks, good to choice, dry, 15½@16½c; culls and inferior, 10@15c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 23@23½c; ordinary to good, 21½@22½c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 21@22½c; Western, gathered whites, 21@22c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 22@23c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 20@21½c; duck eggs, State and nearby, Indian Runner, 25@27c; Baltimore, per dozen, 22@24c; Western, 18@21c; Tennessee and other Southern, 16@20c.

CANNOT GET ARMS IN SOUTH AMERICA

Minister McGoodwin, from Venezuela, Explains Lack of Revolutions.

OUR TRADE INCREASING

Since War Started, 97 Per Cent. is Controlled by Americans—Natives Have Lost Distrust.

Preston McGoodwin, the United States Minister to Venezuela, who arrived yesterday morning on the steamship Caracas of the Red D Line, spoke very optimistically of the opportunities for American trade with Venezuela.

"The European war is having the effect on South American countries," he said, "of tending to maintain peace, instead of the periodical revolutions. American ammunition manufacturers are getting such high prices for their goods which have been shipped to the war in Europe that they have refused the orders sent in from the Latin Republics, so that neither the governmental forces or the would-be insurgents have weapons to fight with."

In speaking about trade conditions in Venezuela, Mr. McGoodwin said:

"The United States is handling more than $29,000,000 annually of imports and exports now. All the Venezuelan raw products, coffee, cocoa, and hides are shipped to this country. All the manufactured goods and finished products she uses are brought from this country, and Venezuela is absolutely dependent on the United States. Venezuela formerly gave about 60 per cent. of her trad eto this country. Since the war about 97 per cent. is controlled by Americans. Before the war started there were thirteen lines of steamers trading to Venezuelan ports; now the American Red D Line is the only one, except for the irregular service of the French Campagnie Transatlantique.

"The South American trade can be much further developed by American merchants than it is now. Two representatives of the National City Bank of this city are now in Caracas studying trade conditions. Their arrival in South America marks a new era in our trade. Hitherto Americans have gone down there and tried to compete with the Germans and other European nations which have made a study on the ground of the needs of South American peoples, and we were usually worsted in the competition. Now we are beginning to study what they need, and that means that within a few years we will have more than our share of their business.

"Juan Vicente Gomez, the newly-elected President of Venezuela, is outspoken in his friendship for this country. The natives also have completely lost their distrust of Americans which they inherited from the Castro Administration. They are adopting American business methods, and I believe in a short time the modern American ways of doing business will be established all over South America.

"Venezuela has a record of fifty-two revolutions, forty-seven of which were successful, but now the country has settled down and is awaiting American trade."

Mr. McGoodwin was accompanied by his wife and 8-year-old son and will return to his post after a short vacation.

SOCIALISTS OPPOSE WAR.

National Committee Adopts Comprehensive Non-Military Program.

CHICAGO, May 13.—The National Committee of the Socialist Party today decided that the National Convention of next year should be held in this city. Morris Hilquit of New York was chosen Chairman of the committee, and Walter Lanfersiek of Kentucky Secretary. It was decided to make nominations by referendum, leaving the resolutions and other matters to the convention.

A number of resolutions and proclamations were considered. They call attention to the alleged "insidious propaganda of American militarism," advocate the repudiation of war debts, workmen generally not to fight or assist in the manufacture of munitions of war, and pledge Socialists to work for a prescribed peace program at the end of the war.

The program did not go through without opposition. Victor Berger of Wisconsin and George R. Lunn, former Mayor of Schenectady, N. Y., insisted that the right to fight for national existence must be recognized.

"There are things worse than war," shouted Mr. Berger. "Slavery is one of them. I would take up a gun and fight against slavery, and I would fight against the invasion of my home. You can't resist an invasion with resolutions, any more than you can destroy capitalism by resolutions."

BLIND WOMAN LEFT ESTATE OF $500,000

BEQUESTS TO SERVANTS

Bulk of Property, Including Proceeds of Sale of 229 Broadway, Goes to Nephews and Nieces.

The will, with two codicils annexed, of Miss Adelaide Hamilton, granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton, was filed for probate yesterday and disposes of an estate in excess of $500,000. There are bequests aggregating $10,000 to charitable, religious, and educational institutions, $8,000 to employes, and the rest to relatives.

The codicils mainly make additional bequests to employés who, it is recited, have been particularly devoted to the testator in her affliction of total blindness. There is a codicil provision that a bust of Alexander Hamilton, by Ceracchi, go to the testator's nephew, Schuyler Hamilton for life, and at his death to the children of his first wife. Another bust of Hamilton, by Crawford, goes to another nephew of the testator, William P. Hamilton.

The public bequests include $1,000 to Columbia University, to be devoted to the placing in Hamilton Hall of either a bust or a portrait of Alexander Hamilton. Grace Church receives $1,000 and the ownership of the testator's pew in that edifice. St. Luke's Hospital and the Cathedral of St. John the Divine each receives $3,000. There are bequests of $1,000 each to Bishop Hobart Hare, to be devoted to the Church of All Angels at Spearfish, S. D., and to Frances Morris Ward, to be devoted to the Double Temple Society.

The servants named and the amounts bequeathed to them are: Mary Forsythe, maid, $1,500; Bartholomew Hart, coachman, $1,000; Margaret Mullany, laundress, $1,000; William Kelly, former butler, $1,250; Annie Morgan, maid, $1,250; James Doyle, butler, $1,250, and Annie McMahon, $500. There is a direction that if there are any other servants they are to receive $100 each if they have been in the employ of the testator for one year or more.

The proceeds of the sale of the Hamilton Building, 229 Broadway, are divided into three shares of $80,000 each, which are to go, respectively, to William P. Hamilton, of Sterling, N. Y.; Marie H. Swan of Flushing, L. I., and Helen Marie Rhinelander, children of William G. Hamilton, a brother of the testator. They also get one-fifth of the residuary estate each. The remaining two-fifths of the residue goes in equal shares to the Rev. Alexander Hamilton of Woodbury, Conn., a nephew, and Marie Louise H. McDavid of Greenville, S. C., a great-niece, who receive additionally $2,000 each.

There are bequests of $10,000 each to Schuyler Van Cortlandt Hamilton, Gertrude Ray Hamilton, Violet Loring Hamilton, and Alexandra Schuyler Hamilton, who are children of Schuyler Hamilton, a nephew of the testator. There are several other gifts of a minor character.

H. W. POOR'S WILL FILED.

Publisher of Railroad Manual Leaves Estate to His Wife.

Henry W. Poor, who was President of Poor's Manual of Railroads, the publishing house, at the time of his death, April 13, left an estate "not in excess of $10,000," according to the petition filed, together with his will, in the Surrogates' Court yesterday. The entire estate is bequeathed to the widow, Mrs. Constance E. Poor of 777 Madison Avenue.

Mr. Poor had been rated at one time as being worth $5,000,000. He had been prominent in Wall Street, where he had dealt largely in leather and ice securities. He was a member of the firm of Poor & Greenough when it failed in 1908. Its liabilities were given at $2,110,869, and its assets $180,000. Mrs. Poor at that time turned over her entire property to the creditors.

GREELEY'S DAUGHTER WINS.

Court Rejects Claim of Granddaughters to Chappaqua Farm.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 13.—The Court of Appeals handed down a decision today in which it holds that the title to the Horace Greeley farm at Chappaqua, Westchester County, is vested in Mrs. Gabrielle Greeley Clendenin, daughter of the editor, and that the transfer of various parcels to Chappaqua residents is not to be disturbed. Mrs. Clendenin is the wife of the Rev. F. M. Clendenin, Pastor of St. Peter's Episcopal Church of Westchester, the Bronx.

The action was brought by Nixola Greeley Smith Ford, a newspaper writer of New York City and a granddaughter of Horace Greeley, and Mrs. Ford's sister, Gabrielle Smith, an actress. The property is said to be worth $150,000.

When Mrs. Horace Greeley died she left the estate to her two daughters, Gabrielle (Mrs. Clendennin) and Ida, later Mrs. Nicholas Smith. The two daughters were to get the "interest" from the farm, which was to be sold when they were 30 years of age. Both of them forgot the provisions of the will that created the trust and failed to sell the farm.

When Mrs. Smith died she left surviving three children, Nixola, Gabrielle, and Horace Greeley Smith. Mrs. Clendenin, after Mrs. Smith's death, recalled the trust clause and caused the property to be sold. Mrs. Clendenin bought in the property for $10,000 and Nicholas Smith, it was alleged, received his children's share for them.

ROCKEFELLER WINS SUIT.

Need Not Pay Taxes on $311,000,000. Ohio Court Holds.

CLEVELAND, May 13.—John D. Rockefeller today won his fight to prevent the collection from him of taxes on $311,000,000 in personal property by Cuyahoga County, when Judge John H. Clarke in the United States District Court granted an injunction to restrain the collection. The taxes in question amount to about $1,500,000, including a penalty of 50 per cent. for failure to pay when due.

The assessment, which is held invalid, was made in February, 1914, when Tax Commissioners visited the Rockefeller Summer home at Forest Hill here. They asserted that Mr. Rockefeller remained in the county more than six months of the year, and, therefore, under the Ohio law, was a resident of Ohio for taxation purposes.

Judge Clarke decided that Mr. Rockefeller's contention that he intended to leave Cleveland in October, 1913, but was compelled to remain here until Feb. 2, 1914, because of the illness of Mrs. Rockefeller was a valid excuse, and did not make him an Ohio resident, and that the intangible property named in the assessment, consisting of stocks and bonds, was in New York, the residence of the owner, and was not subject to taxation here.

The suit will be carried to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals by the attorneys for Cuyahoga County, and if the injunction is sustained there it may be carried to the United States Supreme Court.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

New Broadway Building in Twenty-Year Lease for $6,500,000—Montgomery Ward Company Lease Four Lofts in Stern's Old Store—$250,000 Sale in Fortieth Street—Active Suburban Market.

One of the largest leaseholds closed for some time in this city was recorded yesterday. It involves the new twelve-story commercial building to be erected on the westerly Broadway block front between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets. It has been leased for twenty years from the time of completion at an annual rental, as it is indicated, of $325,000, or a total for the entire period of $6,500,000.

The building has been taken by Sol Bloom, who has been an active operator, especially in the Forty-second Street locality, although the corporate name of the leasing company is the Old School Realty Company, controlled by Mr. Bloom. The lease was taken from the 1,337 Broadway Corporation, William Everdell, Jr., President, and William H. Barnum. It carries a twenty-one-year renewal privilege.

The deal is interesting in many ways, primarily, perhaps, as indicating the great confidence in the future business progress of the Broadway section just north of Thirty-fourth Street. Tearing down of the old buildings, including the Herald Square Theatre, only began on May 1. The property was purchased last June from Charles E. Johnson for about $6,500,000. The Thompson-Starrett Company, which is erecting the new structure, made a building loan of $1,250,000, and a mortgage of $5,000,000 was taken by Mr. Johnson. The plot fronts 211 feet on Broadway, 207 feet on Thirty-fifth Street, opposite Macy's, and eighty-one feet on Thirty-sixth Street. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy in December, "in time for the holiday trade," as Mr. Bloom said yesterday. He declined to state at this time what tenants were negotiating for large portions of the building, but it has been persistently rumored that one or more prominent retail concerns, either from out of town or from the old shopping centre below Twenty-third Street, would ultimately occupy all or a large part of the ground floor.

The deal was made directly between the principals. Mr. Bloom was represented by the law firm of House, Grossman & Vorhaus, while Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett represented Everdell & Barnum.

Big Lease in Twenty-third Street.

One of the most important leases which has been made in the famous Twenty-third Street shopping block for some time was closed yesterday in the renting by Montgomery Ward & Co., one of the largest mail order firms in the country, of the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth lofts of the former Stern's department store at 26 to 30 West Twenty-third Street, running through the block from 9 to 19 West Twenty-second Street. The space taken contains 85,000 square feet. It will be occupied by the women's wearing apparel and millinery departments, which will be moved from the Montgomery Ward headquarters in Brooklyn, and also by the firm's buying offices, now at 43 West Twenty-third Street.

The lease is for a term of years and was made through the brokerage firm of M. & L. Hess for Louis and Benjamin Stern and the estate of Isaac Stern. The Brooklyn plant will be used for other lines of merchandise. Montgomery Ward & Co. operate three large houses, the principal one being at Chicago. They also have a large establishment at Kansas City, Mo., and maintain distributing warehouses at Fort Worth, Texas, and Portland, Ore.

The building in which the lease has been made adjoins the smaller six-story portion of the old Stern store which has been converted into a market under the name of the Cosmopolitan Garden.

$250,000 Deal Opposite Library.

The seven-story commercial building at 12 West Fortieth Street, opposite the Public Library, has been purchased by the 8 West Fortieth Street Corporation to protect the westerly light of its new twenty-story structure nearing completion on the site at 6 to 10 West Fortieth Street. The purchase was made from Anthony Kimbel, who erected the seven-story building a few years ago for his business as interior decorator. He has taken back a long lease on three floors. The plot is 25 by 98.9, and the holding price of the property was $250,000. The broker in the transaction was William A. Pond Phipps.

Deals on West Forty-sixth Street.

George W. Mercer & Son have sold for the New York County National Bank the two factory buildings, 440 and 442 West Forty-sixth Street, on a plot 50 by 100, to a client for investment.

The estate of John W. Condit has sold to an investor the Lansdowne, a five-story apartment house at 352 to 356 West Forty-sixth Street. The building occupies a plot 75 by 100.5.

Upper Manhattan Flats Sold.

McDowell & McMahon have sold for the Belford Realty Company to Ennis & Sinnott the five-story triple flat at 143 Wadsworth Avenue, on a plot 37.6 by 100, between 180th and 181st Streets. The property was held at $52,000, and was an all-cash transaction.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Eastern depression is passing off the coast after quite general showers during the last twenty-four hours in the Atlantic States. Pressure is high north of the lake region and in the Canadian Northwest, and generally low to the southward, with the principal centre of depression over Northern Utah. This disturbance has resulted in scattered thunder showers in the Upper Mississippi Valley and the Northwest, and quite general showers over the Central and North districts west of the Rocky Mountains.

This pressure distribution has also caused a decided fall in temperature from New England westward through the lake region, and abnormally high temperatures in the Rocky Mountain region, the Plains States, and the Central Valleys, the maximum temperatures ranging from 90 to 94 degrees.

Showers and thunderstorms may be expected Friday in the Plateau and Rocky Mountain regions and the Plains States, followed by fair weather Saturday in the Plateau region. During Friday night and Saturday showers will continue in the Plains States and extending to the central valleys and the upper Lake region. The showers will be accompanied by falling temperatures. Elsewhere the weather will be generally fair Friday and Saturday, with comparatively low temperatures in the Northeast.

Winds for Friday and Saturday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate to fresh north; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate north; South Atlantic Coast, moderate, mostly south and southwest.

3 A. M.	44	57	4 P. M.	49	70
6 A. M.	43	57	6 P. M.	48	67
9 A. M.	45	62	9 P. M.	46	58
12 M.	46	70	11 P. M.	45	57

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 64; for the corresponding date last year it was 46; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 58.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 60; at 8 P. M. it was 62. Maximum temperature, 73 degrees, at 2:30 P. M.; minimum, 50 degrees, at 12:01 A. M. Humidity, 86 per cent., at 8 A. M.; 69 per cent., at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.76 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.76 inches.

Popular with His Wife.

"And him such a flirt. How does he do it?"

"She called him up the other day and said, 'Hello, darling,' and he recognized her voice and replied: 'You have evidently made a mistake. I am not your darling. I have the dearest, sweetest, most beautiful wife in the world, and she is the only woman I permit to call me darling.'"—Houston Post.

The New York Times:
For successful Country Board advertising, I find THE NEW YORK TIMES unrivaled.
I placed an advertisement in it and was delighted with the results. My rooms were not only rented to an exceptional class of boarders, but I was overwhelmed with replies.
As a medium for New Jersey advertising, I sincerely recommend your newspaper, the enormous circulation of which makes Country Board advertising profitable, and I have no doubt that New Jersey does not stand alone in this respect.

LAWYERS DREW UP GANGS' CONTRACTS

District Attorney Plans to Have Disbarred Attorneys Who Arranged Terms for Raids.

LABOR MEN ASSAIL PERKINS

Indictment of Leaders Is Part of a Conspiracy to Crush the Unions, They Say.

The District Attorney's investigation of the confession of Benjamin Fein, known among gangsters as "Dopey Benny," showed yesterday that lawyers now practicing in the Criminal Courts drew up contracts between the gang chieftain and labor union leaders, stipulating what pay Fein was to receive for raiding manufacturing plants and maiming worwmen and employers who had offended union leaders.

Some of these contracts have come into the possession of the District Attorney, together with evidence which reveals the names of lawyers who drew the papers up. It was said in the Criminal Courts Building that the Bar Association would be asked to bring disbarment proceedings against the attorneys involved in the case.

It was announced yesterday that the Grand Jury was sifting information concerning at least one more murder case in addition to that of Herman Lieberwitz, for which eight labor leaders, including Solomon Metz, now President of the United Hebrew Trades, were indicted on Tuesday.

Find Evidence of Another Murder.

The District Attorney declined to reveal the name of the man for whose death he expected indictments would be found, but it was said that the men who would probably be indicted were prominent east side labor leaders, and that the murdered man was killed in a row growing out of a strike among the cloak and suit makers. It was predicted that before the Grand Jury completed its investigation of Fein's confession the thirty-four indictments now outstanding would be increased by as many more.

The Executive Committee of the United Hebrew Trades, eight of whose members were indicted, appealed to Congressman Meyer London yesterday to take up the defense of the union men, saying it was a duty he owed to the Socialist Party. Other east side labor unions brought into the case Morris Hillquit, Abraham Levy and Jacob Panken, while they discussed a plan to employ Clarence Darrow, who defended the McNamara dynamiters, and William D. Haywood when he was accused of killing ex-Governor Steunenberg of Idaho.

"All we can say at this time," said A. I. Shiplacoff, an ex-school teacher who recently became Secretary of the United Hebrew Trades, "is that we are not going to allow the reactionary District Attorney to eat our beloved leaders alive. The District Attorney has been giving out statements that were utterly false, and we challenge him to produce any proof that what he has said is true. We refer especially to his assertion that the labor union raised a cash fund of $7,500 to pay the bail money required to get Fein out of jail after he was arrested last September for assault.

Denies Unions Aided Fein.

"I say with full knowledge of the facts that not only did we not raise $7,500 but that we did not raise a single penny for Fein. No self-respecting union leader with a heart in him could have resisted the provocation presented in years past to retaliate against the low brutality visited upon us by policemen, by magistrates, and by the employers who worked hand and glove with the police captains and sergeants to break up strikes for human working conditions.

"How far individuals went in resenting the fight made under the secret sabotage practiced by the employers against us I do not know. But I do know that no labor union official with whom I had any contact cared a snap what happened to Fein when he was arrested.

"He was regarded as a terrorist, a low gunman and a scoundrel, and we would have been the last people in the world to try to bail him out. If anybody raised a $7,500 fund for him it was his own gangster associates. The District Attorney says he nipped our plan to get Fein out of jail by having the bail increased to $15,000, which was more than we could obtain.

"That statement is as false as the statement that we have raised $125,000 as a defense fund for our leaders. We never dreamed any defense fund would be needed in these days of trial and hardship for all workmen and working women in the east side.

"They let the private banks default and get away with our savings, and very slight punishment was meted out, when any was meted out at all. They let off the men in whose factory 147 of our working girls were burned to death. We know what it is to have Magistrate, policemen, private detective agencies, employers, all lined up in a solid group working harmoniously against us. Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain found out what that meant when she dressed as a working girl and went near a place that was on strike, and was arrested—only to receive an elaborate apology from a Magistrate, who nevertheless had sent scores of genuine working girls to jail for striking against inhuman conditions.

Says Police Side with Employers.

"I saw our girls beaten time after time, and saw Police Captains whose names I am ready to give to any responsible investigators sitting in council with employers in Brownsville, and then saw policemen turn their backs while thugs hired by the employers beat up our girls. Of course they will never get evidence of that—any more than they will ever convict the gunmen who murdered women and children in Ludlow, Col., although they speedily, in the same kind of a raid that the District Attorney is now making on our labor leaders, convicted John Lawson, leader of the Colorado miners, of first degree murder.

"When we saw the raids the last Legislature conducted on labor we knew that something of this kind could be expected. The workers of the east side are not going to stand for it. It is shameful that we are called upon to fight when the looting of the bank accounts of our members brought them up to the opening of a hard Winter penniless, and then right afterward they were forced to strain their meagre resources as they never had to before to provide bread for thousands of their unemployed friends and relatives.

"District Attorney Perkins was not elected by the people. And it is clear from his outgivings that Assistant District Attorney Breckenridge has no heart in him to understand the kind of a game that labor on the east side was up against in the period when the disorders for which the union men alone are now singled out as blameworthy occurred.

"If the District Attorney is not going to let the dead past sleep, neither are we. We shall call a mass meeting of protest for Cooper Union in a very little while, and there will be parades and demonstrations, and funds will surely be raised, although at present we have none, instead of the fanciful $125,000 of which the District Attorney speaks."

Secretary Morris Sigman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was as emphatic as Mr. Shiplikoff in denouncing the prosecutions at this time. He characterized them as "a straight drive at the unions that have brought a little order out of chaos in the needlework trades."

Sees a Plan to Crush Labor.

Secretary Ernest Bohm of the Central Federated Union said that the labor leaders of the whole city would make the fight of the indicted leaders of the United Hebrew Trades their fight. "The whole affair," he said, "is in line with the gigantic efforts afoot in these war times by the capitalist class to crush labor and its organizations. The arrest of the east side leaders is just one link in the chain being forged by the employers to drive labor back into the slavery from which the unions have, in part, raised it up. The labor-baiting another link in the chain, as recent Colorado convictions were still other links."

District Attorney Perkins, when told of these statements by the union leaders, said that he was in no sense a foe of honest labor unions. He said he would be glad to have the unions bring evidence to him involving employers, and that, if such evidence was sufficient to warrant it, he would proceed against the employers as quickly as he had proceeded against the labor union officials.

Assistant District Attorney Breckenridge, who had charge of the investigation of Fein's confession, said he would be glad to obtain evidence involving employers as well as union officials, as he already was morally certain, although he lacked evidence to absolutely prove it, that certain private detective agencies employed gangsters to work against the unions. Proof in such cases was difficult to obtain, he said, because the employers usually acted within their own shops, where they had the defense that they were protecting their property.

Trials Held by Gangsters.

In going through Fein's confession, Mr. Breckenridge found that Fein and the gangsters held trials for men accused of being hostile to the union leaders. The accused men would be summoned before the gangsters, and if found guilty would be subjected to "discipline."

Mr. Breckenridge obtained from Fein, as proof of the truth of his confession, a diary that he kept all the while he was engaged in "strong arm" work for the unions. In this diary, which was given up exclusively to the record of his acts of violence while in the pay of the unions, Fein recorded the name of the man who hired him to do each job, the amount of pay he received, and the name of the man who gave him the money.

Mr. Breckenridge said yesterday that he found on referring to the court records, witnesses at Fein's trials in General Sessions were sure Fein was not the man who beat them because he was a good friend who never engaged in violent acts. This testimony was often directly contrary to the testimony given by the same witnesses at the preliminary hearings. Fein's diary showed the sums paid to such witnesses between the time of his arrest and his trial.

Another method by which Fein avoided conviction was to have his friends send the witnesses away. Persons whose testimony might prove damaging received tickets to points as far West as Cleveland, Ohio, and sometimes to Europe, and were kept away from New York until after Fein had been set free.

Union Delegate Convicted.

The union officials who were planning the defense of the indicted leaders received a setback yesterday when a jury in General Sessions brought in a verdict of guilty against Samuel Dudek, formerly walking delegate of Bakers' Union 305, who was the first union official to be arrested as a result of Fein's confession. Dudek was tried before Judge Mulqueen on a charge of extortion and the jury returned a verdict of guilty after less than half an hour's deliberation. Dudek was remanded for a week for sentence.

Three of the thirty-four men indicted on Tuesday surrendered yesterday upon the advice of their counsel, Abraham Levy. They were Abraham Silver, organizer of the Ladies' Waist Makers' Union; Morris Yulman, and Harry Katz. They were admitted to bail in sums ranging from $2,500 to $5,000.

Mr. Levy asked that Solomon Metz, President of the United Hebrew Trades, containing a membership of 250,000 east side workers, should be admitted to bail notwithstanding the fact that he was charged with murder. Mr. Levy pointed out that the alleged murder occurred five years ago and that Mr. Metz had been out on bail for a year after being indicted previously in connection with the murder. The evidence was so flimsy, the lawyer asserted, that the prosecution never dared to risk a trial. Judge Wadhams resented Mr. Levy's references to Fein as "a squealer." He said:

Mr. Levy withdrew his remark and Judge Wadhams ordered Mr. Metz to the Tombs to await a decision as to bail.

An Authoritative Voice.

A. L. Bixby, the genial poet-humorist of the Nebraska State Journal, attended a baseball game in New York one day recently. On the way out a dense crowd was jamming its way aboard an elevated train. Mr. Bixby is stout and past fifty, and being hustled by a crowd is not pleasant to him.

"Don't hurry, good people, don't hurry," he called out in a spirit of fun. "Let me on first."

And the crowd, thinking it heard the voice of authority, obediently made a passageway for him.—Newark News.

Bad Time to Pray for Rain.

Quite a number of prayer services for rain have been held in the drought section this year, which calls to mind a remark of the Rev. Levi Lee, a noted Primitive Baptist minister. When it was suggested by his membership that he invoke Divine Power to send a shower, he said: "Brethren; I think this a very unfavorable time to pray for rain; the moon isn't right for it."—Owensboro (Ky.) Inquirer.

No Good Men There.

We believe the Tennessee women and children are all right, but the testimony of the newspapers of Nashville is to the effect that all of the men are thieves, liars, and scoundrels.—Houston Post.

IN NEW JERSEY.

JERSEY CITY.—Vincent D. Cash, the policeman found guilty of murder in the second degree for killing Charles Hill, a fellow-member of the force, was sentenced yesterday to serve not more than thirty years nor less than twenty years in State prison.

JERSEY CITY.—Chief of Police Frank Monahan was suspended yesterday. Charges are based mainly on a speech the Chief is said to have made in New York at a dinner given to Police Judge John Warren, in which he criticised a superior officer.

BAYONNE.—Receiver Christopher L. Williams yesterday asked the Controller of the Currency at Washington for authorization to declare a dividend of 8 per cent. to the depositors of the First National Bank of Bayonne which failed in December, 1913.

NEWARK.—A thief tried to scare Miss Nettie Lederman, a cashier in the store of the Highland Dairy Company at 89 Elm Street yesterday by pointing a pistol at her and demanding "money or your life," but the would-be robber fled when the young woman screamed.

PASSAIC.—Michael Cuzenko, a third victim of the gun cotton explosion in the Anderson Chemical Company's plant at Wallington Wednesday, died yesterday.

SOUTH ORANGE.—Bishop John J. O'Connor yesterday transferred the Rev. John B. Bennett, assistant rector of St. Thomas's Church, Summit, to be assistant rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Franklin. The Rev. Richard S. Mahoney will succeed Father Bennett at Summit.

MORRISTOWN.—For making efforts to have his employer catch a train he desired, Valentine Conrad, chauffeur for A. Graves Ely of South Street yesterday paid a fine of $25 on a charge of speeding. As the automobile reached Convent the train was pulling out, but the chauffeur speeded to Madison before the train got there and got his employer aboard.

TRENTON.—Sheriff J. Warren Fleming of Mercer County was instructed by Attorney General Westcott to select 100 men as a panel for the jury which will try the twenty-five Deputy Sheriffs charged with the murder of Roosevelt strikers.

BOGUS CONSUL GIVES DINNER AT THE ASTOR

Invites Naval Officers and Diplomats to Feast, but Only Six Respond.

GORGEOUS IN GOLD LACE

Appropriated Body Guard of Marines, and Was Preparing to Entertain the Vice President.

At the head of a gayly decorated table in a banquet room of the Hotel Astor last night sat a young man in much gold lace. Enormous epaulets squared his shoulders and his breast made him look as if he had strayed from the Sub-Treasury vault. The occasion was a "dinner tendered by Lieut. Commander Ethan Allen Wenberg, K. G., Consul General for Rumania, to Dr. Alfonso Quinonez, Vice President of San Salvador, and his staff." Quotation marks are used because that was what was on the menu card, and the menu card was the limit of information as to the authenticity of the event.

If one cared to go on believing what the engraved menu card said, among the guests were Lieutenant Sterling, U. S. N.; Lieutenant George A. Kauff of the Police Department, Captain Hutchinson, Aide to the Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard; Captain Harry McL. Huse, Chief of Admiral Fletcher's staff and Commander G. Kobrick, U. S. N. Not that they attended the dinner given by the "Consul General," but their names were on the program.

The table was set for fourteen; six were present. They were, according to the host, Jose E. Suay, and Roberto Aguilar of Dr. Quinonez's staff, Vice-Consul General Montarro of Costa Rica, Irving Gordon, Miss Sedelle Fensten and "Lieutenant Commander Ethan Allen Weinberg, Consul General for Roumania." Vice-President Quinonez wasn't present when the reporters arrived, but the host said he and the other honored guests were on the way. Probably they still are, for the waiters said dinner was served for six—no more.

"Consul" Gives His Record.

When the "Consul General" was asked why his name was not among the available lists of consuls in New York, he was ready with this information:

First of all, "Consul General Wenberg" was a native of Brooklyn, his home used to be on Columbia Heights, he attended the Eastern District High School. At the outbreak of the Balkan war he went to Rumania and joined the Royal Aviation Squad. So much did he distinguish himself that at the end of the war he was made Military Attaché to the Rumanian Embassy at Paris. On May 4 he was officially designated Consul General at the Port of New York, his credentials had been sent to Washington on May 6 or 7, and he had "exchanged exchequers" Monday.

The "Consul General" was a little undecided about his headquarters. He said he had established an office at 2 Rector Street. Several moments later he said it was 28 Rector Street, and before the interview was ended he was quartered in a suite of eleven rooms at the Astor temporarily. It was No. 602, he said. No. 602 is a suite of two rooms occupied by Vice President Quinonez. Also, the reporters were told, the Consul General was a member of the Pan-American Commission. He neglected to say when Rumania had jumped out of the map of Europe.

The "Consul General's" uniform of gold lace was quite evidently built for another person of shorter and stouter form. But his eloquence:

Ethan Allen Weinberg Arrested.

One of his interviewers dug into a pocket and produced clippings from New York newspapers which told of the arrest on November 8, 1910, of Ethan Allen Weinberg, 17 years old of 71 Maujer Street, Brooklyn, on a charge or larceny. At that time Weinberg won the sobriquet of "The Boy Consul" because he produced papers showing he had been appointed a Consular Agent at Port de Aubres, Morocco, in August, 1910. He said he was therefore immune from arrest. He was sent to Bellevue Hospital, where he explained he was not in Morocco because he considered the salary of $1,800 too small for his abilities. He was later sent to the Tombs to answer the charge of stealing a camera from a department store on Sixth Avenue, where he was employed as an expert demonstrator of aero machinery. The clippings stated that "Weinberg" had attended the Eastern District High School and had made flights at Mineola.

The "Consul General" admitted he lived on Columbia Heights, but said 71 Maujer Street was not his home. He believed, he said, that some mistake had been made.

"Were you ever in Rumania!" was asked.

"Now, gentlemen," he replied, "you misunderstand me. I am not a Consul General. I am a special emissary from the Russian Government to establish a consulate."

He couldn't explain just who had made the mistake of putting him on the menu as "Consul General." He said, however, that it was not a mistake at all to call him by that title. Only he wasn't it—not yet. He was also confident he hadn't dropped an "i" from his name.

Pestered State Department.

A dispatch from Washington to THE TIMES last night said that two months ago the State Department received communications by mail and telegraph from some one signing himself "Ethan Allen Wenberg," inquiring inf the department had been advised of his appointment to the Rumanian Consular Service. The international practice is that notifications of such appointments come to the State epartment come directly from the appointing Government, and as nothing of the sort had been received regarding "Mr. Wenberg" the department ignored the subject.

It was stated that officials of the department believed the "Ethan Allen Wenberg" who was posing as the Rumanian Consul General in New York last night was the "Ethan Allen Weinberg" who two years ago announced himself as attached to the American Consular Service, and who did ask for an appointment. No appointment was made, and inquiries convinced the department that its correspondence was from a young man "not quite responsible for his actions." No steps were taken against him, as the authorities believed he was not amenable to punishment.

The dispatch stated that as far as the State Department was informed "Consul General Wenberg" had not attempted to perform any consular functions.

When told of the disparities in the "Consul General's" statements, the managers of the Astor went in search of the young man, but found that he had left the hotel after a spirited talk with Vive-President Quoinonez. It was stated that a substantial deposit had been made on the price of the dinner early in the day.

"Consul General Wenberg" rode about Manhattan in a cab yesterday, accompanied by three marines, who, he said, were a bodyguard assigned to him by the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Captain Hutchinson said last night that no such assignment had been made. It developed subsequently that the guard had been delegated for Vice President Quinonez.

Expects Fleet to Salute Him.

The "Consul General" said at 10 o'clock last night that he would make his official visit to the fleet today, when, he said, a salute of eleven guns would be fired for him. There is no provision in naval etiquette for the recognition of a consular agent by a salute. "Wenberg" also said he had arranged with Admiral Fletcher to let him know at midnight by wireless the details of the visit and the size of the guard which would be sent to escort him to the fleet in the Hudson River.

It was said last night that on Monday the "Consul General of Rumania" went aboard a battleship in the Hudson wearing civilian clothes and was not able to convince the commander of his "identity." Later he donned the uniform he wore last night and returned, when he was received with deference.

The "Consul General" seemd yesterday to be well supplied with funds. He has been about the Astor for several weeks, and his bills have been paid promptly, it was said at the hotel last night. He has usually been accompanied by one or more well-dressed young women.

"Consul General Wenberg" early in the evening issued a statement that next week he would be the host to the commanders of the fleet, the Vice President of the United States, and the members of the Cabinet. He said the dinner would be given at the Astor if he were assured suitable accommodations could be obtained there.

Piscatorial Humor.

The two vacationers had fished an hour without a nibble to reward them for their patience.

"At a time like this," said the first man, "old Izaak Walton would have indulged in philosophy. Have you anything philosophical on your mind that you might work off just now to relieve the monotony?"

"Nothing but this," replied the other man. "I suppose it is, by refusing to bite and compelling fishermen to philosophize that fish get the reputation of being brainfood."—Newark News.

COLUMBIA MEN BURN CALCULUS IN THE SKY

Sophomores Tie Demon to Balloons and Send Him Heavenward in Flames.

THEN DANCE IN PAJAMAS

Eagle-Eyed Proctor Spies Two Girls in Crowd Similarly Clad and Threatens to Call Bluecoat.

Every time a hot-air balloon mounted skyward from the Columbia campus last night it was wafted on its way by the cheers and groans of 250 sophomores arrayed in pajamas. The balloons—and the pajamas—were new wrinkles in the annual Sophomore Triumph ceremonies with which the students are wont to put an end to the demon calculus. Instead of building a bonfire and burning old Dr. Calculus in effigy, the students dipped volumes of calculus in oil and sent them floating heavenward at the end of innumrable balloons. Hence the cheers.

The ceremonies were held on the Quadrangle between the Library and University Hall, and the flickering lights of red torches ranged along the University Hall roof gave the groups of young men in pajamas a ghostlike appearance. Everything—lights, balloons, and cheering—was doing nicely when, at 9 o'clock, Henry Lang, Columbia's proctor, who always officiates at such student functions, put in an appearance. The lights were not very strong, but that did not prevent the eagle eye of Henry Lang from spotting something that called for closer inspection.

The particular something happened to be two figures in the prettiest pale pink and blue pajamas seen around Morningside Heights in a long time. For some reason the pink and blue visions were not mixing with the rest of the class, but preferred to hover in the corner of the "quad," where the shadows were deeper. Even so, Henry Lang could see at a distance that there was more hair on the heads of the persons inside of the pink and blue things than any self-respecting Columbia student ever thought of wearing all at once. It was done up ever so tight, but it didn't fool Henry.

"What d'ye think this is, a Barnard tea party?" he demanded, as he walked right up to the place where the pair with their escorts stood. "I'll have you arrested, that's what I'll do."

The young women protested that it was only a joke and begged to be allowed to leave quietly.

"Not a chance," Henry told them as he strode off, promising to get a policeman. But before he had time to half cross the campus the pink and blue pajamas made a dash for the nearest gate, and—well, that was all that was seen of them last night.

After the last flaming calculus had taken the Zeppelin route, the students marched in pajamas down Broadway, stopping for the customary breath at 110th Street and then continued over to Riverside Drive, where they served as a counter attraction for the throngs watching the illuminated fleet. The procession continued to the steps of Grant's Tomb, where cheers were given for Grant, the navy football, and many other things.

A Story from Stoneham.

A little girl called at a fish store in Stoneham and asked the fish dealer if he sold dry fish. Being answered in the affirmative the girl interrogated. "Real dry?" "Real dry," said the fish man. "What kind have you?" asked the girl. "Why, we have dry halibut, dry cod, dry herring, &c."

The little girl—Well, would you mind giving them a real long drink?—Boston Post.

Passing of the Sturgeon.

The pothunter is not the only enemy of wild life. The sturgeon has been pursued so ruthlessly by fishermen that it is on the rapid road to extinction. H. M. DAUGHTERS OF 1812 ELECT.

Mrs. Mathias Steelman Chosen President of Jersey Society.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., May 13.—At the opening session today of the State convention of the New Jersey Society Daughters of the War of 1812, held in the Carteret Arms, the following officers were elected: President—Mrs. Mathias Steelman of Elizabeth; First Vice President—Mrs. Samuel Drayton of Jersey City; Second Vice President—Mrs. A. G. Van Houten of Newark; Third Vice President—Mrs. Truman H. Clayton of Salem; Treasurer—Mrs. Maude Durrell of Jersey City; Recording Secretary—Mrs. James Vandyke of East Orange; Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. F. A. Waldron of Plainfield; Historian—Mrs. Henry Budd Howell of Jersey City; Librarian—Miss M. Adele Edge of Jersey City; Color Bearer—Mrs. Charles Vanaken of Maplewood; Auditor—Mrs. M. A. O. Condit of East Orange.

The Rev. George C. Wilding of Elizabet, in an address to the convention this afternoon, told the members that it should be their special privilege at this time to give expression to the confidence which the people of this country have for their President.

It Might Help.

The 3A class was having its daily lesson in hygiene. The subject for discussion was cleanliness in the schoolroom.

CAPE MAY, N. J., May 13.—The Cape May County Grand Jury today handed in twenty-five bills of indictment against District Attorney Matthew Jefferson. They charge him with embezzlement, larceny, obtaining money under false pretenses, and malfeasance in office. Jefferson declares that the indictments are the result of a plot of liquor dealers whom he said he tried to make obey the law.

A month ago a conference was held by Attorney General Westcott, Justice Charles C. Black of the Supreme Court and County Judge Henry H. Eldredge at which Jefferson was requested to resign, but he refused to do so. Attorney General Westcott will prosecute Jefferson. Jefferson studied law in Westcott's office.

KING OF ITALY RETAINS CABINET; PEOPLE WANT WAR

Refusal to Let Salandra and Sonnino Resign Averts Revolution in Rome.

TROOPS HOLD THE CAPITAL

Mobs Smash Into Chamber of Deputies and Riot All Over the City.

GERMAN SHOPS WRECKED

Angry Demonstrations Held Throughout the Country—Street Fighting in Milan.

ROME, May 14, via Paris, May 15.—Premier Salandra has convoked a council of the Ministers who are now meeting to make a decision relative to the present crisis.

The news that King Victor Emmanuel will not accept Premier Salandra's resignation, tendered last evening on the ground that the Cabinet did not have the unanimous support of the constitutional parties of the country in its international policy—and that the Premier and Baron Sonnino, the Foreign Minister, who will remain in power, is spreading like wildfire throughout Rome and creating an excellent impression.

All the people seem satisfied at so quick a solution of the crisis, it being believed that otherwise serious trouble was inevitable. It was asserted that the population had determined that tonight would not pass without such a demonstration of violence as would render the will of the people supreme.

The whole city was in a state of ebullition. The shops were closed, flags were hoisted at half-mast as a sign of protest against the Government's action, and the theatres had been requested to suspend their performances, except the Constanzi Theatre, where a play was given in honor of Gabriele D'Announzio. The poet was present and made an address of anti-Austrian character.

The entire garrison had been brought out to protect the most threatened points in the city, such as the streets where the Austrian and German Embassies and Consulates are situated and the Villa Malta, the home of Former Premier Giolitti. The city was divided into four military zones and the keeping of order was intrusted to the military authorities.

A riotous crowd during the day invaded the Piazza Montecitorio, in which the Chamber of Deputies is located, and smashed windows and doors and destroyed everything it came across. The rioters were about to enter the great hall of Bittings when troops intervened. A few of the demonstrators were wounded.

Members of the Chamber of Deputies who are followers of Signor Giolitti made their escape from the building, some of them leaving their hats behind. A venerable Garibaldian veteran harangued the crowd, declaring that Italy either must go to war or the people would bring about a revolution.

During the day a circular was distributed asking the people to form in procession and proceed to the Villa Ada, the residence of King Victor Emmanuel, and demonstrate their loyalty to the King, but also express their opinions in favor of Italy joining the war.

These circulars caused the forming of processions of thousands of persons who, with flags and shouting, enthusiastically marched toward the Villa Ada. On the way the demonstrators smashed all windows and destroyed the signs of German shops. One of the most prominent of the German business houses attacked was that of Loescher, the bookseller. The police, carabineers, bersaglieri, and infantry, and even cavalrymen and artillerymen charged the processions and closed the streets leading to the Villa Ada. The mob, however, proceeded to force the closing of all German shops placarding them with signs reading "Closed as a national protest."

Signor Giolitti was summoned by the King this morning. It is asserted that he expressed the opinion that Signor Salandra's Government not having been overthrown by Parliament, Salandra must remain in power or be entrusted with the task of forming a new cabinet.

Signor Salandra, signor Marcora, President of the Chamber of Deputies, Signor Manfredi, President of the Senate, and other men high in politics also were in conference with the King during the day. It is stated that they suggested that Signor Giolitti be entrusted with the formaion of the new cabinet, alleging that he was responsible for the crisis and, therefore, should bring about its solution.

The King during the day received in the order named the following statesmen: Signor Manfredi, President of the Senate; Signor Marcora, President of the Chamber of Deputies, and Signor Giolitti, the former Premier, but now the leader of the party in Italy in favor of neutrality.

QUEEN IN THE TRENCHES GREETS HER BELGIANS

Enthusiastic Soldiers Treasure the Sack She Sat On as a Souvenir.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 14.—Sir Cecil Hertslet, formerly the British Consul General at Antwerp, speaking at Eastbourne, said that a wounded Belgian officer had just given a description of an incident that occurred the other day in the Belgian trenches on the Yser.

Queen Elizabeth went to speak to the soldiers, but the men in the trenches did not recognize the kind and graceful lady. One mand said: "Come along, Madame; make yourself at home." Another soldier said: "Ah, but Madame, this trench is dangerous!"

The Queen replied: "Not for me; I'm so small."

One of the men produced a sack and placed it on the slope of the trench. The Queen sat down on the sack and began to distribute the chocolate and cigarettes she had brought.

On the sack on which she had sat were inscribed the words: "The resting place of the Queen." The soldier to whom the sack belonged was asked whether he would sell it as a souvenir, and he replied: "Not for a hundred thousand francs."

SINKS GERMAN SUBMARINE.

British Steamer's Captain Thinks He Ran One Down in North Sea.

BLYTH, England, May 14.—A German submarine is reported to have been sunk in the North Sea. The Captain of the steamer Collarnie on reaching port today stated that his vessel apparently had destroyed the submarine by running it down off the Northumberland coast.

No submarine was seen, but the Captain said his ship struck a submerged obstacle. A large quantity of oil subsequently appeared on the surface and the conclusion was drawn that a submarine had been run down.

LONDON, May 14. — "We miss his fearlessness now more than ever when we have the House of Commons quailing before the angry crowd of Irish publicans and distillers," said David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a tribute to the late Rev. ANOTHER FIGHT IN TRIPOLI.

Italian Column Repulses Fierce Attack by Rebels.

ROME, (via Paris,) May 14.—News received here today from Tripoli says that during the afternoon of May 12 an Italian column composed of infantry and cavalry was attacked by rebels in the neighborhood of Misurata. The attack was repulsed.

The Italian losses are given as twelve killed, including three officers, and twenty-nine men wounded.

GERMANS SEEK CITIZENSHIP.

Rush to Naturalization Bureau Since Sinking of Lusitania.

Since the sinking of the Lusitania the Federal Naturalization Bureau in this city has experienced a rush of business. Charles A. Weiser, the Naturalization Commissioner in the Federal Building, said yesterday:

"The number of Germans who have applied for citizenship papers since the Lusitania was sunk has increased enormously. Up to that time I had found that the Russians were filing the greatest numbers of applications for citizenship papers and the Germans were at the foot of the list. Now, however, there are quite as many Germans as Russians who apply."

MASSING AT SAN RIVER

Germans Declare Pursuit Continues and Russian Forces in South Poland Are Retreating.

PETROGRAD, May 14.—The following official communication was issued this evening:

In the region of Shavli the fighting is developing under conditions favorable to us. Yesterday we took more than 1,000 German prisoners and captured nine machine guns.

In Western Galicia the intensity of the fighting lessened on May 10. Our troops are concentrating gradually on the line of the River San with the object of occupying a shorter front.

The Austrian army evacuated on the 11th a strongly fortified position extending from the Bistritza River to the Rumanian frontier, in length 140 versts (about ninety-four miles,) and fell back precipitately on the 12th beyond the River Pruth. The enemy's cavalry, which was sacrificed in repeated charges to protect the general retreat, was disposed as follows:

Our cavalry divisions broke through the enemy's front at various points, and, by successful charges, threw the enemy's columns, which were on the march, into disorder.

Our vigorous pursuit of the enemy continues under conditions particularly favorable to us. The great number of prisoners we already have taken is being rapidly increased.

Flank Attack Relieves Centre.

The River San, to which the Russians have fallen back upon strong strategic positions, runs north and south through central Galicia. They now regard the German drive through West Galicia as having been checked permanently.

The arrival of fresh Russian troops, which successfully engaged the German flanks, has relieved pressure upon the Russian centre. These attacks on the German wings, in which the Russian cavalry has been supported effectively by mountain artillery, have been prosecuted with unusual fierceness.

The activity noted in the last few days along the centre of the Polish front, in the vicinity of Skierniewice and Rawa, is said to have been due to Russian initiative, with the object of holding the Germans in their positions and preventing the utilization of these forces elsewhere.

The retreat of the Russian centre from Lupkow is explained as due not to pressure from the Germans, but to the exposed situation of the Russians at that point in view of the rolling back of the Russian right flank. This wing rests on the lower Wisloka at Dembica, twenty miles due east of Tarnow. It is strongly entrenched.

With the checking of the German eastward movement between the Vistula and the Carpathians, there are already indications of a new Austro-German offensive against the Russian left, in the direction of Stryi and Uzsok. Evidence of this is seen in the transfer of German troops eastward through Lupkow. In view of this new activity the Russians attach great importance to their recent successes further east, in the Trans-Dniester country.

To the north the Russians have been able to hold the Germans on a line between Mitau and Kelmo, and have driven them out of Ragola, midway between Kovno and Rossieny. The grain elevators at Libau are said to have been emptied before the German occupation of that town.

Denials by Russian Government.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The Military Attaché of the Russian Embassy has received the following dispatch from his Government in Petrograd:

The Russian General Staff, in a statement issued May 12, says that last week the German military authorities made erroneous statements about operations on the Russian front.

Thus they said that the Germans took twelve guns during the battle at Libau, whereas the Russian artillery detachment operating there had but four guns. At Rossieny the Germans not only did not cause the Russians heavy losses, but had no success at all. The Russians were not in full retreat, as the German communiqué says, but their forces were obliged to withdraw along the front of the Russian offensive for a distance of from six to thirty miles.

The Germans affirm that they have driven back the Russian attacks at Kalwarya, Augustowa, and Przasnysz and inflicted great losses on the Russians; but the Russians made no attacks there. The Germans attacked the Russian forces at Vaskiedno, Rajets, and at the farm Pomicany; but some of their attacks were only demonstrations and the others were for

ONE TORPEDO HIT LUSITANIA, GERMANS SAY

Official Report Says Second Explosion Was Caused by the Ammunition Aboard.

BERLIN, May 14, (via Amsterdam to London, May 15.)—From the report received from the submarine which sank the Cunard Line steamer Lusitania last Friday the following official version of the incident is published by the Admiralty Staff over the signature of Admiral Behncke:

"The submarine sighted the steamer, which showed no flag, May 7 at 2:20 o'clock Central European time, afternoon, on the southeast coast of Ireland in fine, clear weather.

"At 3:10 o'clock one torpedo was fired at the Lusitania which hit her starboard side below the Captain's bridge. The detonation of the torpedo was followed immediately by a further explosion of extremely strong effect. The ship quickly listed to starboard and began to sink.

"The second explosion must be traced back to the ignition of quantities of ammunition inside the ship."

EMDEN'S SAILORS ARRIVE IN TURKEY

Party Which Escaped Capture Joyful When Told Hopes of Iron Cross Will Be Realized.

DAMASCUS, Syria, (via London,) May 14.—Lieutenant von Muecke and a landing party from the German Cruiser Emden, which escaped when their ship was sunk in the Indian Ocean on Nov. 10, have arrived here after six months of adventurous wandering. There are fifty men in the party.

"Have I won the Iron Cross?" was the first question asked by Lieutenant von Muecke.

He and the sailors in his command were delighted when told they were regarded in Germany as heroes, and that all were to receive the coveted cross. The Lieutenant declared all he wanted now was to get a command in the North Sea.

Von Muecke and the remnant of the Emden's crew were reported to have escaped from allied patrol ships and piloted the schooner Aysha, on which they escaped from Cocos Island, safely into the Arabia, on Feb. 5, of Lidd on March 27. They reached Hodeida, Arabia, on Feb. 5. They probably traveled by rail most of the distance from Lidd (Jidda?) to Damascus.

PEERS FORCED KING TO OUST KAISERS

British Garter Knights Threatened to Resign if Teuton Royalties Were Not Expelled.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, May 15.—The striking off of the Kaiser, Crown Prince, and other German and Austrian royalties from the roll of the Order of the Garter by King George was precipitated by the action of the English peers who are members of the Garter.

After the sinking of the Lusitania a committee consisting of the Duke of Portland, the Duke of Marlborough, Lord Rosebery, Lord Crewe, and Lord Lansdowne, representing the English peers belonging to the order, petitioned the King to remove the Teutonic members from the order, intimating to his Majesty that unless this were done all the English K. G.'s would resign.

Under the rules of the order no member can be struck off the rolls without a special convocation, at which the member whom it is proposed to strike off can be heard in his defense. The King as Sovereign of the order has taken upon himself to break this rule.

The Daily Chronicle's Windsor correspondent says that following divine service at St. George's Chapel, yesterday morning, the banners of the eight recreant knights were quietly removed from the building. The ceremony was carried out under the direction of Sir Alfred Scott Gatty, Principal Garter King-at-Arms, the chapel being closed meanwhile.

At Slough the Bishop of Buckingham described the eight degraded K. G.'s as unworthy to be members of the order, which, even in days of lesser enlightenment and greater indifference to human life, had upheld the traditions of chivalry and honor.

MAKES STATE CLAIM FOR LUSITANIA VICTIM

Widow of Salesman Sent Abroad by Firm Appeals to Workmen's Compensation Commission.

The claim of the widow of Charles Veith Mills, one of the victims of the Lusitania disaster, was filed yesterday with the State Workmen's Compensation Commission. It was the first claim for loss of life on the big steamship that has come in, although others are expected. Mr. Mills was employed by J. B. Locke & Potts, wholesale dealers in dry goods at 81-83 Franklin Street. He was a salesman and buyer for the firm, and was going abroad on the firm's business.

His home was at New Rochelle. He was 33 years old and left only a widow. His salary was $3,600 a year and if the claim is allowed, his widow will receive one-third of his salary as long as she remains single. If she marries again the payments will stop. The Globe Indemnity Company carried the insurance.

CONFIDENCE THE KEYNOTE

In Full Accord with the President's Course, the Country Awaits the German Answer.

American opinion, as voiced by scores of public men and newspapers through the columns of THE TIMES today, is united in support of the President in the policy which he has set forth in his note to Germany. Cordial approval of the tone of his communication is joined with acceptance of its conclusions as to the only way the German Government can satisfy the demands of this country in the face of the Lusitania disaster.

Governors of many States give assurances that the President's views have the backing of patriotic citizens in every section of the United States.

Senators and Representatives likewise, in their telegraphed opinions, demonstrate that in what is regarded as a sober period in the nation's history one spirit animates all who are concerned with the responsibilities of legislation.

The press of all parties are a unit in applauding the vigor, temperateness, courtesy, and high purpose of the President's note which many style a "great state paper," and even more accept as the voice of the American people speaking through their Chief Executive.

Editors East, West, North, and South are not more impressed with the firmness with which the President states the American attitude than with the strong and sincere desire he evidences to give the Berlin Government an opportunity to recede from a position which he regards as untenable from the standpoint of the accepted law of nations and the supreme law of humanity.

The jingo spirit is notably absent from these expressions of opinion. No wish for war is expressed anywhere; rather is the hope general that Germany will see the necessity, as a matter of national honor, for abandoning a method of warfare which is [illegible] menace to peace.

In the German-American newspapers also one sentiment is manifest: If conflict should arise, (and they pray that it may not,) they and all whom they represent will be Americans and nothing else.

Herman Ridder, editor of The New Yorker Staats-Zeitung, not only declares the President's note diplomatically correct and deserving the support of the whole nation, but also suggests that through the mediation that may be made possible by the American communication may come the larger mediation that will put an end to the great conflict.

THE NEW YORK CITY PRESS.

Editorial comment in the New York City newspapers yesterday regarding President Wilson's note to Germany was as follows:

The Note to Germany.

From The World.

President Wilson's note to the German Government cannot fail to satisfy the highest expectations of the American people.

It is calm. It is restrained. It is courteous, but with a cold, cutting courtesy that gives added emphasis to every word. There can be no mistake whatever as to the intentions and purposes of the American Government.

For the specific outrages against the United States of which the President complains, he properly asks that the German Government will not only disavow the acts in question, but that it will "make reparation, so far as reparation is possible, for injuries which are without measure," and that it will "take immediate steps to prevent the recurrence of anything so obviously subversive of the principles of warfare" for which Germany in the past has contended. Beyond all this, however, in the plain determination of the President to re-establish international law on the high seas, and this without compromise.

By the strength of his case and the moderation of his tone, the President has made it as easy for Germany to do right as to do wrong. If he is to fail in his effort, it will be in good conscience and in a good cause.

On this issue the President, sustained by the unanimous voice of the greatest and most powerful of neutral nations, can say, in the words of Martin Luther, "Here I stand. I cannot do otherwise. God help me."

Admirable in Tone, Moderate and Dignified, Says Ex-President Taft of Wilson's Note

Ex-President Taft, at the dinner of Methodist laymen in New York last night, said of President Wilson's note to Germany:

"Admirable in tone, moderate in the judical spirit that runs through the entire communication, dignified in the level that the writer takes with respect to international obligations, accurate in its statement of international law, he puts the case of the United States in a way that may well call for our earnest concurrence and confirmation."

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The German Ambassador told inquirers today that he knew absolutely nothing of the position of his Government because he had received no communication, and naturally would not until the note itself had been presented. He declined to discuss his own views for publication.

Some of his friends indicated later that the Ambassador was pleased with the friendly tone of the note, and was himself hopeful and confident that the questions in dispute could be satisfactorily settled through diplomacy.

In response to telegrams sent to the Governors of the States, THE NEW YORK TIMES has received the following expressions regarding President Wilson's note to the German Government:

Wilson's Message Admirable.

BOSTON, May 14.—The message sent by the American Government to Germany is admirable. It indicates that the Government's position has been taken after sober and earnest deliberation. It could not have pointed out the national injury that has been inflicted in plainer language.

Let us hope that the German Government will recognize the justice of our position. In any event the Government has spoken for us all. It is our duty unanimously and unitedly to support the Government.

Ohio with the President.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 14.—President Wilson's note of protest to the German Imperial Government is a calm, considerate expression of the firm determination of the people of the United States that their rights and the rights of their Government shall be respected by belligerants.

The thinking people of our country have awaited with judicial deliberation this announcement of policy by the President and will sustain him firmly in the position he has taken. President McKinley said almost with his last breath: "Let us remember that our interest is in concord not in conflict and that our victories are the victories of peace rather than the victories of war."

Then as now our nation was dedicated to peace, yet, our love for peace must not be misunderstood; it is not a sentiment prompted by fear. The rights of American citizens must be protected. The President has sounded a note of decision and deliberate conviction which will be heard around the world. The American people devoted as they are to peace among nations will sustain the President in his decision.

Frank B. Willis, Governor of Ohio.

Support to End of Chapter.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 14.—The diplomatic communication forwarded by Secretary of State Bryan after a conference with President Wilson and his Cabinet has been formulated with the utmost caution, circumspection and deliberation.

Before forwarding this official document to the German Empire, the President and his Cabinet permitted sufficient time to elapse after the shock occasioned by the destruction of so many American noncombatant lives on the Lusitania to let reason, law and justice control their official deliberations.

Now the nation has spoken through its President and Secretary of State and the patriotic citizens of the Republic will stand loyally behind the President and his advisors and continue to give their support to the President to the end of the chapter.

SENATORS UPHOLD WILSON'S HANDS

"A CLASSIC STATE PAPER"

Representatives Join in Approval and Support of President's Policy.

Members of the United States Senate who expressed opinion on the President's note to the German Government yesterday spoke in full confidence that it carried the views of the American people, and that the country stood behind the President, no matter what the outcome might be.

A Classic Among State Papers.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 14.—President Wilson's note accurately presents to the German Government the real question and places upon that Government the opportunity to accept or disclaim intentional responsibility for the great wrong to humanity as well as the American people resulting from the recent use of submarines. It indicates clearly to that Government the views of the American people as interpreted by him. His interpretation is correct.

It so presents the situation that the responsibility for graver consequences is made to rest with the Imperial Government of Germany. While it does not even indicate a threat, it does make clear that the patience of the American people has become exhausted, and that similar outrages will not be tolerated by our Government.

The President has behind him a united country, ready to follow his lead whatever may be the consequences. The people are willing to trust him to the fullest extent, knowing that he will not embroil them in war if that alternative can be avoided, but that he will protect their honor regardless of consequences. As a State paper it will become a classic.

FRANK S. WHITE,
Senator from Alabama.

Justifies Country's Confidence.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 14.—The President's note justifies the country's full confidence. It is a clear, irresistible, unambiguous, wholly patriotic statement. He seeks to arrive at a definite understanding that the law of nations exists and will be observed, thus avoiding the calamity of war.

DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,
Senator, Florida.

Note in the Right Spirit.

SANTA FE, N. M., May 14.—I think the President's note to Germany is in the right spirit. It should be held to and insisted on to the utmost. We do not want war. We could not reach Germany if we went to war, but there is much we could do. In case Germany fails to heed and conform to the conditions of the President's note he should insist upon its whole tenor to the last item.

T. B. CATRON,
Senator, New Mexico.

Will Fix Submarine's Status.

WAHPETON, N. D., May 14.—The President's note is both strong and courteous. Its effect must be to bring to a speedy settlement of the rights and duties of both belligerents and neutrals in respect to the operation of this new and most destructive instrument of modern warfare, the subharine.

P. J. McCUMBER,

WILSON LEAVES CAPITAL

Telegrams Praising His Course Continue to Pour In—Delay of Note Annoying.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The State Department was apprised tonight in a cablegram from Ambassador Thomas Nelson Page at Rome that the American note to Germany had been delayed in transmission and probably would not be delivered to the Berlin Government until tomorrow morning.

Secretary Bryan gave out the following:

"Ambassador Page at Rome cabled the State Department tonight that the President's note to Germany reached Rome at 2 P. M. today and was immediately copied and forwarded to Berlin at 3:40 P. M. today."

The intention was for the note to reach Ambassador Gerard at Berlin in time for translation and delivery to the German Foreign Office this morning.

It was apparent throughout official circles today that a feeling of hopefulness prevailed, and this feeling pervaded the regular meeting of the Cabinet, which was devoted, in part, to a discussion of the critical situation that had been reached in the relations of the nation with Germany. While there are some officials who are pessimistic, it is not going beyond the fact to say that generally the idea that the differences with Germany will be adjusted without war is in the ascendant.

While officials are extremely anxious to ascertain the German view of the note as soon as possible, they are inclined to the opinion that the longer the German Government delays its response, although it is hoped that due regard will be paid to the President's request for prompt action, the better will be the prospect that Germany's decision will be for peace. The American note was filed for cabling to Berlin as quickly as it could be in the circumstances, the desire being to have it reach the German Government as expeditiously as was feasible, so that it might serve to warn the German naval authorities of the manner in which this Government regarded submarine warfare and possibly have the effect of causing a suspension, at least, of the submarine attacks on merchant vessels.

Plans Go Awry.

The text of the note, put into cipher symbols at the State Department, was filed for cabling at about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and it was expected that it would reach the American Embassy in Berlin late last evening, be translated during the night, and be presented to the German Foreign Office by Ambassador Gerard by 11 o'clock this morning, Berlin time, which is 5 o'clock A. M. United States Eastern time.

The Government was particularly anxious that the text of the note should not be published in London or Berlin newspapers before it was handed to the German Minister for Foreign Affairs, and while copies of it were furnished to the press last evening for use in American newspapers, it was stipulated by Secretary Bryan that the note should not be filed for cabling to newspapers abroad until 5 o'clock this morning. However, the cable from the American Ambassador at Rome shows that the plan for prompt delivery in Berlin went awry. London newspapers, and probably Berlin newspapers, were able to print the text of the note this afternoon. Thus the German authorities, it is supposed, were able to read the note in newspapers before they received it officially, which was exactly what this Government was anxious to avoid, not only for reasons of international courtesy, but to prevent agitation over the American position coming to the ears of or in the [illegible]

President Leaves Capital.

Tonight President Wilson, accompanied by members of his family, left Washington on board the yacht Mayflower for New York, where he is to review the Atlantic Fleet and participate in the ceremonies attending the presence there of the great array of battleships and other war vessels. The Mayflower will not attempt to make speed, and when she sailed from the local navy yard, in command of Lieut. Commander Robert L. Berry, who will serve as the President's aid during the New York visit, it was the plan to make a leisurely voyage, with the intention of reaching New York on Monday morning.

The President Tired.

The President was tired, and showed it. Those who had an opportunity to observe him closely said that he felt the strain of the mental and physical effort of the seven days since the Lusitania went down, and they were glad that he was to have an opportunity for a rest.

Officials admitted that they had little on which to base the impression that Germany's course would not be for war. They conceded that President Wilson's note was very vigorous and called on Germany to abandon her submarine warfare with reference to merchant ships, not only those that flew the American flag or carried American citizens, but all merchant craft, without regard to belligerent status or the nationality of passengers or crew. This demand, coupled with those for reparation and disavowal of the unlawful acts complained of by the United States, probably will not be conceded by Germany without a struggle, it is believed, but the feeling is strong in Washington that the German imperial authorities will construe the representations of this Government in the spirit which pervades the American note, and will respond without anger or showing a disposition to refuse to discuss in an amicable manner the points in dispute.

Answer Must Be Explicit.

One of those familiar with the considerations that actuated the President in the preparation of the note indicated today that mere negative acquiescence in the American demands through a failure to continue the submarine warfare against merchant commerce would not satisfy the United States, which had asked for "just, prompt, and enlightened action" from the German Government. This, it was argued, called for explicit answers. The man expressing this view, however, did not profess to be speaking in any authoritative way. It is noteworthy that this suggestion did not enter into the views of those who were willing to talk on the subject of Germany's probable course. This larger contingent believes, or professes to believe, that a disposition on the part of the Berlin Government to respond to the American contentions without anger will pave the way to the accomplishment of what is called for by the President. The rather general tendency here is to overlook the likelihood that Germany will not concede all that is desired by this Government, and take into consideration only that the German reply may be of such conciliatory nature that friendly relations will not be severed.

Future Course in Doubt.

Whether President Wilson would be willing to accept a partial concession of the American terms with those not conceded left for future parley, is something that is not known. The belief is that the President has not come to any determination along that line, but will wait for the German answer and give it consideration on its merits. He is saying little on the subject of the future, or rather it should be said that it is not being disclosed that he is saying anything at all. At this time he is adhering strictly to a policy of watchful waiting.

Much of the conservative cheerfulness, which may better be described as cheerfulness tempered by gravity, that was noticeable among members of the Government today, and which was said to have been evident at the Cabinet meeting, was due to the character of the many telegrams that reached the White House from persons who had read the President's note. All of these were reported to be eulogistic of the President's course. They came from men in all parts of the country, and were so emphatic in their declarations of sympathy and support that the President and his advisers were bound to feel that the Administration would have the cordial approval of the nation in whatever course it was necessary to adopt after the German attitude had been disclosed.

None of these messages was made public by the White House. President Wilson preferred that they should not be given to the press, and while no formal explanation of this decision was furnished, it was understood that he was anxious that nothing should be done or said in any authoritative way that would rouse sentiment in the country or seem to be directed toward influencing Germany during the period when that Government was giving consideration to the terms of the American note.

Von Bernstorff Calls.

One reason for the feeling that Germany was not disposed to adopt a hostile attitude toward the United States was found in the fact that Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, called at the State Department this afternoon to disavow responsibility for himself, his embassy, and all his diplomatic subordinates in Washington for statements attributed to German sources here to the effect that the German Government would not accept the proposals of the American Government, as set forth in President Wilson's communication.

Count von Bernstorff's disclaimer was contained in a formal note which he handed to Secretary Bryan. In making known the purpose of the German Ambassador's visit to the State Department, Secretary Bryan said he did not care to furnish the text of the note, but he explained that generally it explained that statements made in newspapers purporting to have come from members of the German Embassy staff were pure inventions. The note, Mr. Bryan said, warned the press of the falsity of statements concerning Germany's probable attitude in the present situation attributed to members of the embassy.

Count von Bernstorff's action is regarded as significant of a desire on the part of the German authorities generally to show the United States that their course with reference to the American representations was not determined in advance. In it officials found a good sign, and were encouraged to believe that Germany would give earnest and careful consideration to the views and purposes of President Wilson.

Expect Disavowal.

There was much discussion in diplomatic and official circles today as to what attitude Germany would adopt toward the insistence of the President that the submarine warfare against merchant shipping be discontinued. One view which attracted attention from the fact that it appeared to be in the minds of a large number of well-informed persons was that Germany would make the disavowal asked and would respond affirmatively to the President's call for reparation, but would combat the other and main part of the American position by an argument designed to show that it would be impossible to abandon submarine attacks unless the British Government agreed to permit vessels carrying foodstuffs for the civilian population of Germany to proceed to German ports. A proposal of this character had already been submitted by Germany to England through the medium of the United States, but the negotiations toward effecting an arrangement of that character were futile. It was apparent that the belief was prevalent here today that Germany, while advancing in diplomatic correspondence reasons why her war zone order could not be rescinded, would direct the commanders of German submarines to confine their activities only to the warships of Germany's enemies.

This would mean, it was pointed out, that while Germany would still maintain in words that her submarine warfare was justifiable, she would actually discontinue it without any formal announcement or notice to the United States that this particular American demand—the most important of the three made by President Wilson—was conceded.

Lull in Submarine Attacks.

As evidence of the merit of this argument, attention was called to the fact that while prior to the Lusitania disaster the sinking of merchant vessels by German submarines had been of almost daily occurrence, such incidents had been repeated only on the day following the Lusitania's loss, and that six days had elapsed since any neutral or belligerent merchantman had been sent to the bottom by a torpedo from a German underwater craft.

It is gathered that officials believe President Wilson will be inclined to insist on a formal acknowledgment of the abandonment of submarine attacks on merchant shipping rather than be being satisfied with negative acquiescence in his demand. But nobody, except the President and perhaps a few of his most intimate confidants, understands what his course is likely to be should the situation produce such a result as that suggested.

Some persons here hold that the German Government will find it impossible to accede to the desires of the United States, and profess to believe that, while Germany may not take any action that will result in actual war with the United States, she may bring about a condition that will produce a state of war. But those who hold this view appear to be in the minority.

Look to the Emperor.

One interesting feature of the opinions expressed here today was that a considerable number of persons believed that if the decision of the German Government as to its response were to be left to the determination of Emperor William and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg the situation would make for peace. The fear was expressed that the matter might be handled by the most radical group of the German Government, and that their decision would be for rejecting what the President had called for. No particular grounds were advanced for the opinion that the Emperor and the Chancellor would be conservative, but it was apparent that some officials looked to them to avoid a clash between Germany and the United States.

Vice President Marshall is one of the most unpopular officials in Administration circles in Washington today. While officers of the Government did not comment openly on the subject, it was made clear that some remarks attributed to the Vice President were extremely distasteful to the Administration. The criticism was based on the following press dispatch:

TUPELO, Miss., May 13.—Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, speaking here on "National Tendencies," advised caution on the part of the United States in dealing with the delicate problem presented by the sinking of the Lusitania.

The Vice President said he considered that when a person boarded an English vessel he was virtually on English soil, and must expect to stand the consequences.

He said there were too many men in the United States crying for war who would not enlist unless given a position of selling goods to the Commissary Department.

Resented in Washington.

The Vice President's opinion concerning persons taking passage on English vessels is diametrically opposite to that set forth in the note written by President Wilson. The charitable view was expressed in some quarters that Mr. Marshall had been out of touch with newspapers which had represented the feeling of indignation in Washington over the sinking of the Lusitania, but few of those who commented on Mr. Marshall's remarks were so charitably disposed. Nor was any relish shown for Mr. Marshall's reflection contained in the last paragraph of the press dispatch.

No answer to the American note is expected from the German Government for several days, and the President had no hesitation in leaving Washington to keep his engagement to review the fleet at New York. It has been arranged, however, that the Mayflower shall be in wireless touch during her voyage with the commandants of the Norfolk and Brooklyn Navy Yards, to whom any important messages concerning the German crisis will be sent for transmission to the President.

Reply Within a Week?

It will take a week at least for the answer from Germany to the American note to be prepared and received here, in the opinion of diplomatists and officials.

When the German Government completes its reply it will be handed to Ambassador Gerard and will then be translated from the German by the expert translators at the American Embassy before being transmitted to the United States.

It is the custom of each country to give diplomatic notes to foreign Governments in its own language. Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador here, for example, speaks and writes English as fluently as any American, but all his diplomatic communications to the State Department are written in German. In the case of treaties, there is a formal exchange of translations. This often occurs in case of doubt on any words in diplomatic notes.

GOVERNORS PLEDGE STATES TO WILSON

concise and complete. I think it is an admirable epitome of preponderant American sentiment.

C. S. THOMAS,
Governor of Colorado.

Meets Country's Approval.

BISMARCK, N. D., May 14.—I am pleased with the President's note to Germany. It is firm, courteous, emphatic, and I believe will meet with the approval of the country.

L. B. HANNA,
Governor of North Dakota.

Brief, But Expressive.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 14.—I am with the President.

LOCKE CRAIG,
Governor of North Carolina.

Reflects the People's Sentiments.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 14.—The President's note is a manly statement in the language of a Christian gentleman. It is a model for dealing with a friendly power in the stress of a crisis. It is friendly but firm, courteous but courageous. It reflects the expressed views of a great majority and the subconscious sentiments of three-fourths of the rest of the people.

W. E. CHILTON,
Governor of West Virginia.

Suited to All Loyal Americans.

AUSTIN, Texas, May 14.—I think President Wilson's statement to the German Government should be heartily approved by all loyal Americans.

JAS. E. FERGUSON,
Governor of Texas.

Enough Said, But Not Too Much.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 14.—The country will fully approve both the substance of the President's firm and powerful note to Germany and the moderation and courtesy with which the President frames it. The note is all the more impressive because of its temperate and restrained language and its spirit of friendliness and of confidence in the ultimate justice and good will of the German government.

Less than the President has said in this momentous deliverance to the German Government would not have satisfied the sense of the great grievance that is suffered in the whole submarine warfare policy of Germany's navy and more is not required to maintain American national prestige and self respect before the world. All Americans will hope that the German Government will meet the reasonable demands set forth in the note and make more drastic defensive measures unnecessary.

ARTHUR CAPPER,
Governor of Kansas.

Bespeaks United Support.

OLYMPIA, Wash., May 14.—The protest of the President is clear, dignified and forceful; in the closing paragraph he expresses the position of the United States in language that cannot be misunderstood. In this expression the President will have the united support of the people of the United States.

ERNEST LISTER,
Governor of Washington.

JACKSON, Miss., May 14.—I agree with Mr. Wilson in his message to Germany. In fact, Mr. Wilson seems to be the right man in the right place.

EARL BREWER,
Governor of Mississippi.

Oklahoma with the President.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 14.—I indorse President Wilson's note to Germany. Am for peace with all nations if it can be had with honor and due regard to the rights of American citizens, but am in favor of carefully, patiently, and firmly demanding and insisting upon our rights and going to every reasonable and sane limit to preserve the same. I believe that a majority of the patriotic citizens of this State approve the course of the President.

B. L. WILLIAMS,
Governor of Oklahoma.

Not for Peace at Any Price.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., May 14.—I am thoroughly convinced that no citizen in the United States is as well qualified to ascertain the facts in the Lusitania disaster as President Wilson and his advisers. All his efforts to maintain neutrality have been thoroughly in accord with the national spirit. He also directly reflects the sentiments of the American people when he indicates that he is first for peace, but not at the price of the honor of the nation.

JOHN B. KENDRICKS,
Governor of Wyoming.

Has Country's Support.

RICHMOND, Va., May 14.—The President's note to Germany places the nation on ground which should compel the respect of mankind. Certain it is that his strong and pointed utterances will be supported by the patriotic citizenship of the country to any extent that circumstances may demand.

H. C. STUART, Governor of Virginia.

American Idea of Right.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 14.—The people of Missouri approve President Wilson's note to the German Government. It is a clear and forceful statement of the American idea of right and of the things that are best for humanity.

WILLIAM R. PAINTER,
Acting Governor of Missouri.

Should Open Way for Discussion.

PHOENIX, Ariz., May 14.—The note of the State Department to the Imperial German Government is, in my opinion, a very succinct and comprehensive statement of the existing exigency in which the United States is so vitally concerned. Considered as a whole, Mr. Bryan's definition of this country's position should afford excellent ground on which to conduct an exchange of diplomatic expressions with reasonable prospect of securing desired assurances affecting American life and commerce.

GEORGE W. P. HUNT,
Governor of Arizona.

Too Busy with Legislature.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 14.—My time is so occupied with the session of the Legislature that I have been unable to consider President Wilson's note to Germany.

PARK TRAMMELL,
Governor of Florida.

PRESS APPROVES WILSON'S NOTE

the apprehensions of the nation stirred to its very soul by the greatest series of outrages ever perpetrated upon a neutral country, these apprehensions vanished with the perusal of the note cabled last night to Germany. It might have been stronger; 'twill serve. Mr. Wilson has overcome the influence of those members of his Cabinet who are for peace at any price. He has lived up to the very best traditions of his character. In a document which makes no threat but which with the greatest solemnity states the unalterable position of the American Government, he has made a request on Germany which is susceptible of but a single meaning.

Words could not be plainer. In the body of his message to Germany, laying the ground for the demands quoted above, President Wilson inflicts upon the imperial German Government a castigation of a whip of scorpions. And yet he gives Germany the benefit of the doubt. It can call it all a mistake!

And if another American ship is torpedoed the only thing to be done will be to start the Atlantic fleet toward the war zone.

Language Cannot Be Mistaken.

From The Tribune.

But nothing can be plainer than the fact that, indignant, outraged, aroused as the American people were, their desire was not for a declaration of war. Terrible as the crime was, frightful as was the offense against this nation, against all civilization, it was still the overwhelming desire of the American people to refrain from hostilities—there was still a hope that German conscience, German sense of decency and humanity, would avail to abolish the madness disclosed in the massacre of the Lusitania. To have gone to war to avenge the dead, to vindicate national honor, to enter a world strife on such terms, was a thing American love of peace, of humanity, forbade. Such, being the unmistakable case, there was left but one course, one duty, one necessity. This was that the President should endeavor through the regular channels of diplomacy to obtain from the German Government not merely or chiefly reparation for injury endured, but a guarantee against a repetition of such a massacre as that of the Lusitania and such breaches of international law as were contained in the Falaba, Frye, and Cushing incidents. What he had to do Mr. Wilson has done with utmost simplicity, clarity, completeness. Speaking for a whole nation, he has set forth the American case against the German Government in language that cannot be mistaken. He has done more than this—he has drawn an indictment against the German nation which will lie for all ages to come, if the Kaiser's Government fails now to meet the demands of the President of the United States promptly and completely. But questions of detail are of little moment now. It is only important to note that the President of the United States, performing a high and almost tragic duty, has acted with calm, statesmanlike directness, deserved well of his own nation and earned the respect of the world.

Wilson Has Spoken Firmly.

From The Sun.

The United States will not omit "any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment." This is not the least significant passage in a paper which, without vaporing, without a trace of rodomontade, affirms, with the quiet resolution that is one of Mr. Wilson's most salient characteristics, old, inalienable right, justice, humanity, which the American people will not easily give up.

The President has spoken firmly. The country, supporting him as firmly, awaits without passion the German reply.

President's Letter Vigorous.

From The American.

The President's note to Germany, delivered to the American Ambassador in Berlin last night, may be an epoch-making chapter in American history. Its possible results baffle imagination. Some protest was compelled by circumstances growing out of the European war.

The President's letter is undeniably vigorous, but it is possibly dangerous as well. The nation desired that its rightful demands should be laid before the German Government, but it did not anticipate that the President would go so far beyond the plainly and soundly rightful scope of those demands as to invite a rebuff. In reiterating his purpose, expressed first in the note of Feb. 18, to hold Germany to "strict accountability" for injuries to American lives or property done in violation of international law, the President is wholly right. Nor can there be any question of his justification in classing as such violations of international law the cases of the Falaba, the Cushing, the Gulflight, and the Lusitania. He is right in demanding reparation for the injuries done in those instances, and in noting that reparation will not suffice without the taking of steps "to prevent the recurrence of anything so obviously subversive of the principles of warfare for which the Imperial German Government has in the past so wisely and so firmly contended." But the President goes on practically to protest against the use of submarines by Germany in the war that country is waging on British commerce. This offers Germany the opportunity to retort that so far as we are concerned the method of her warfare against England is none of our business.

Mr. Wilson's Note.

From The Press.

Into the end of his note to Berlin President Wilson has put some teeth, and not too many at that—into the end because the first of it is filled with those graceful but empty rhetorical phrases which long ago exhausted the patience of Americans no less than they excited the derision of the Berlin militarists.

The Washington Administration beyond question got its authority into contempt, led Berlin further into defiance of it, and still further invited the succession of crimes and horrors which have befallen our citizens, by its weak attitude in the first instance toward acts which were no less "a violation of sacred principles of justice and humanity" than the wholesale butchery last Friday of American lives on the Lusitania. If Berlin, then, has come or is coming to its senses, it is only because Mr. Wilson, after his gospel of being "too proud to fight," is coming to his.

What Will Germany Do?

From The Evening Post.

President Wilson has splendidly met the just desires of the American people. His note to the German Government is, both in form and substance, all that the crisis demanded. It is studiously courteous, yet the iron determination behind it is not concealed. It states our righteous grievance, basing it upon the general principles of the law of nations, with clear precision and urgent force, but carefully leaves the door open to Germany to make amends for the United States and to set herself right in the eyes of the world. In words that can admit of no mistake he states the position which this country is prepared to maintain with the last ounce of its energy.

Whatever the event, we must all await it with quiet patience and in good heart. The President has done his full duty. He has raised a standard of law, of justice, of humanity. Good citizens will repair to it. They will leave the world in no doubt that, in this matter, the voice of Mr. Wilson is the voice of the whole nation. And from his own calm and steady courage they will get help in rallying their strength to be equal to any fate.

Country Stands Behind the President.

From The Evening Sun.

In the note to Germany demanding the cessation of the submarine campaign the voice of the American people is heard. President Wilson is but their interpreter—a spokesman, it proves, well worthy of the occasion. Every loyal citizen will approve with his full heart and conscience the position that the President takes up.

It must borne in mind that the President's note sees the light at a most serious crisis for Germany's reputation in the eyes of the world. This day of its publication is the day after the awful disclosures of the German military measures in Belgium, made in the report of the Bryce commission. That the Kaiser and his Ministers will dare crown the terrible arraignments, made boldly in that outspoken document and diplomatically in the American remonstrance, with defiant threats of further ferocious deeds, we hope for the sake of humanity and for the future standing of a people once esteemed among the greatest, may not prove to be true. For Germany's sake as well as our own we trust wisdom and moderation may come to the German councils.

Through the President's words we have given hostages to honor and justice, and now as never before every citizen must arm his soul for the full support of the Government through every trial that may come.

The Whole Country Stands Behind the President.

From The Evening Mail.

The whole country will stand as one man with President Wilson in the protest which he has sent to the German Government against the submarine outrages. Considering the fact that the Gulflight attack, if not the Lusitania killing, was essentially an act of war, great consideration is shown to the German Government in making the note an appeal rather than a threat.

The very principle of neutral rights which President Wilson now asserts so plainly, and in such statesmanlike words, was involved in the violation of the neutrality of Belgium. We have reaped the fruits of our indifference at that time. Sooner or whether late or early, the President is right in asserting the doctrine, and the whole country, at whatever sacrifice, will back him up in it.

The whole country—including, we are sure, the German-Americans, who will loyally accept the declaration of the President of the United States, in a matter involving the rights and honor of the nation, as pointing out the way which all citizens should follow gladly.

Waiting on Germany.

From The Evening Telegram.

This is no time to criticize the tone of portions of the note appealing to Germany in the name of humanity and suggesting that it disavow its acts. Those things were no doubt intended to serve a purpose whether they do or not.

We are waiting. To hint at what Germany will reply would be as bad as to forecast what the President will do in the event of refusal.

The Nation Has Confidence.

From The Evening World.

With confidence the nation waited for the President to frame its utterance. With tenfold confidence and calm it now prepares to stand by a message the dignity and directness of which will make it forever memorable among State papers.

The country neither seeks war by threats nor does it shrink from war by taking back a syllable of its earlier representations. It still hopes to see "German influence engaged upon the side of justice and humanity."

Whatever happens, we are not excited. If Germany complies with our requirements, expressed with a patience and consideration which even she must recognize, we will do our best to help her steady her course. If she refuses, we cease to be her friend. We treat with her no further.

Our first duty must then be to protect our citizens from her ruthless hand. What more is forced upon us we will meet as it comes.

Sinned Against Humanity.

From The Globe.

With an admirable economy of words and an equally admirable economy of emotion President Wilson, in the manner of a good neighbor, frankly brings before the German Government the fact that certain agents of the German Government, to the prejudice of this country, have sinned against humanity by violating long-established rules of the sea. Calmly, courteously, yet vigorously and clearly, a disavowal of the acts of these agents is asked, together with a promise of reparation and a pledge against similar misconduct in the future.

This country is part possessor and one of the principal guardians of certain common rights of mankind won by the race in its stumbling ascent. It cannot and will not consent to the seizure and destruction of this hard-won heritage. Its citizens must be free to go about the world on their legitimate business subject to interference no greater than the law of nations. They are not to be subject to the hazard of a sudden attack on the carrier on which they are legally embarked. From time immemorial neutral citizens have had the privilege of traveling on belligerent merchantmen, with a guarantee that their lives are to be respected in the event of encounter with a hostile vessel.

America's Demands.

From The Brooklyn Times.

Two major demands are made upon Germany in President Wilson's note. One, easy of compliance, directs disavowals of her acts in the wake of which has come the loss of American lives. The other, insisting upon practical abandonment of her submarine warfare on merchant vessels, will prove a subject for contention and negotiation. There is one paragraph in Mr. Wilson's note which seems to preclude the creation of further alternatives. "The Imperial German Government," it says, "will not expect the Government of the United States to omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment." This has the ring of finality. It is fully in accord with general patriotic opinion and the only manner of expression compatible with American dignity.

Germany Must Fish or Cut Bait Now.

From The Brooklyn Standard-Union.

In homely phrase, that is the position the Imperial German Government is placed in by President Wilson's note defining the relation of this country to the sinking of the Lusitania, and other vessels in which American citizens lost their lives through the action of the Kaiser's submarines. There is left not the slightest room for misunderstanding. All the forms of diplomatic courtesy are complied with, but there is no selecting of the line of least resistance when the President comes to tell of the unalterable antagonism of everything this country stands for to the methods of sea warfare adopted by the German Government. Nor is there any hesitation about the demand for reparation. Of course, there is the possibility that militarism may prevail over wiser councils, and that the Imperial German Government will resent this country's just demands made in its own behalf and in behalf of humanity the world over, but as to that, if such be the decision, it can only be said again the President's message puts her in a position in which she must either fish or cut bait. The period of diplomatic fencing is ended.

Note Is Positive.

From The Brooklyn Citizen.

The note from President Wilson, sent through the State Department, to Germany, is as positive as the nature of the matter in controversy calls for, and as courteous as the most exacting friend of national peace and international good will can possibly desire. But the great majority of intelligent and right-minded people on both sides of the Atlantic, and certainly within our own borders, will feel more confident than ever that the country is exceptionally fortunate in having President Wilson in the White House at the present time. What, however, is to be regarded as the main thing, is that President Wilson has succeeded in quite removing any grounds for war between the two countries, unless Germany, which does not seem probable, is so strongly given over to passion as to desire it. If this should prove the case, there will, however, still remain to the American people the satisfaction of knowing that they have failed in no way to do what every moral feeling compatible with the sense of national honor required of them. To this it ought, of course, to be added, for the better guidance of Germany, that the unquestionable concurrence of the American people in the course taken by President Wilson will be utterly misconstrued if it is held to imply a vacillation.

Germany Told What to Expect.

From The Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

Germany has been told that American citizens act within their indisputable rights in traveling on the high seas. She has been told not to expect the United States to omit any word or act necessary to the performance of the sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the citizens of the United States and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment. These representations, so called, are made in a note written by the President, signed by the Secretary of State and cabled to Ambassador Gerard yesterday. They commit the country. * * *

Similarly, there should be liberal rather than strict interpretation of the statement that the Government of the United States was loath to believe and cannot now bring itself to believe that "these acts, so absolutely contrary to the rules, the practices and the spirit of modern warfare, could have the countenance and sanction of that great Government." For, neither countenance nor sanction has been wanting. On the contrary, the German Government has sealed with its approval the acts to which the President refers.

PRESS OF THE COUNTRY.

Nation's Comment on the President's Note to Germany.

CALIFORNIA.

A Crisis Splendidly Met.

From The Sacramento Bee.

The American people today have rich reason to be proud of their President. Woodrow Wilson has met a grave crisis splendidly, facing it with firmness, without fireworks.

Conciliatory.

From The Los Angeles Times.

It is apparent that the feeling and attitude of the President and his advisers is conciliatory. That is the state of mind of the country. But America will insist to the last that there be no more murderous attacks on merchantmen carrying noncombatants, women, and children.

"Act" Perhaps Not Force.

From The Fresno Republican

If Germany is prepared to make its submarine blockade of England physically as well as psychologically effective, we may be sure the Imperial Government will yield to no argument except force, and we do not understand that the word "act" contemplates use of force, nor that the American nation is in possession of any force to use if it were so contemplated.

Commends Itself to Common Sense.

From The San Francisco Chronicle.

Unmistakably firm, the note is yet friendly in tone, and, though this latter qualification may be displeasing to the jingoes, it commends itself to the common sense of people unafflicted with inflammable hatreds. The nation mourns the loss of her citizens, but, while demanding justice, does so as one who would render justice to all others.

COLORADO.

Manly and Patriotic.

From The Denver Post.

The President's note to Germany is manly and patriotic. The stand of the United States is unquestionable, notwithstanding the suave and diplomatic expressions used. The red-blooded people of the West would have preferred a note containing a little more emphasis and a little less circumlocution. But, anyhow, come what will, the contents of this note and its sentiment are indorsed by the unanimous sentiment of the great Rocky Mountain regions.

Free from Jingo Hysteria.

From The Pueblo Chieftain.

A wise, strong, patriotic message, free from jingo hysteria.

Uphold the Nation's Honor.

From The Colorado Springs Telegraph.

The United States should insist upon a separation of the passenger traffic and the war traffic. We should be prepared to uphold the nation's honor at any cost.

Meets People's Wishes.

From The Pueblo Star Journal.

The note fully meets the expectations of the American people, that Germany be held to a strict accountability for its actions.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Appeal from War Madness.

From The Washington Star.

The President's note meets and thoroughly satisfies the national expectation, both in its substance and its form. * * * His appeal is to the humane and enlightened Germany of the past as against the war-mad Germany of the present.

Issue Rests with Germany.

From The Washington Post.

The note is framed in moderate language and leaves abundant opportunity for the German Government to reply in a way that will restore good-feeling between the two countries. * * * The issue rests with Germany.

FLORIDA.

Will Impress the World.

From The Jacksonville Metropolis.

This note will go down in history as the most dignified, diplomatic, yet plain and specific, expression of our Government that has ever been sent to a foreign power. It must impress not alone the German Government, but the neutrals of the world that America stands for the freedom of the seas. * * * It will be approved by every real American.

GEORGIA.

Voices Conservative Sentiment.

From The Atlanta Constitution.

Every development since the sinking of the Lusitania has justified The Constitution's position that there were other ways than war by which this country could meet the issue involved. The President's attitude in very promptly demanding complete reparation * * * is the attitude of conservative sentiment the country over.

Law and Humanity.

From The Atlanta Journal.

Quiet and civil in its tone, the President's note to Germany is positive, and far-reaching in its import. It is more than a protest against German wrongs and an assertion of American rights. It is a demand that those wrongs be recompensed and promptly discontinued and that those rights be diligently respected. It is the voice of law and humanity lifted in solemn warning against lawlessness and savagery.

Firm, but Friendly.

From The Savannah News.

The President's note is firm in tone, but friendly. It maintains the attitude that the German Government would be held to a strict accountability for further acts of submarine aggression.

If Germany Does Not Accede?

From The Savannah Press.

If the Berlin Government does not accede to the conditions laid down in President Wilson's note we shall feel strongly inclined to change our mind in regard to our disagreement with Lord Beresford, who said Germahy deliberately planned to draw the United States into the war.

IDAHO.

A "Showdown."

From The Boise Statesman.

It is a "showdown." If the President's words mean anything, it is that Germany must abandon its policy of naval anarchy or accept the consequences of our "other action."

ILLINOIS.

People Will Sustain It.

From The Chicago Herald.

There is now no possibility of mistaking the position of our Government. And it is a position in which the American people will sustain their Government in whatever measures may be necessary to uphold it.

The Cause of Civilization.

From The Chicago News.

Every one who reads the note should bear in mind that the cause represented by the authorities in Washington is not alone the cause of Americans and of all neutrals. It is the cause of civilization. The ruinous doctrine that international law is whatever a belligerent power chooses to make it had to be challenged in unmistakable terms. The note is admirable in spirit and in substance. The people of the United States stand firmly behind the propositions thus laid down by their Government.

Upholds Humanity's Rights.

From The Chicago Journal.

The President's note is even a more admirable and far-reaching document than was indicated by the summary sent out yesterday. It is particularly admirable in that it makes the defense of American rights an occasion for upholding the rights of humanity. It is a solemn notification that engines of war which violate the rights of neutrals and the principles of humanity cannot be used, no matter how handy some sabre-rattling power might find them.

Voices Nation's Sentiment.

From The Chicago Tribune.

Whatever the fate of our relations with Germany, the President undoubtedly has voiced the sentiment of the nation upon the use of the submarine and as to the rights of neutrals on the high seas.

Necessity Must Know Law.

From The Chicago Post.

The President strips the issue between the United States and Germany down to this fundamental: If the submarine and international law conflict, the submarine, not law, must yield. This is an absolute negation of "necessity knows no law." It is, necessity must know law. We, too, have our necessity, as well as those nations whose sense of rights of others may be weakened by the desperation of feeling brought by the war for existence.

Not Vindictive.

From The Springfield (Ill.) State Journal.

It is the dignified protest of a nation, which, while feeling that its rights and the rights of other neutrals have been violated, is neither vindictive nor resentful.

INDIANA.

Met in Manly Fashion.

From The Indianapolis Star.

In manly fashion, the President's note does not shrink from the logical consequences of his position, but accepts the full significance of his attitude.

Nation Speaking.

From The Indianapolis News.

The note is perfectly polite, temperate in language, and yet strong almost to the point of sternness. It is not simply the Government, but the nation that speaks through the document. There is no one who does not hope for a peaceful adjustment of the difficulty.

IOWA.

Proud of the President.

From The Des Moines Capital.

Every patriotic American is proud of President Wilson and the note sent to Germany yesterday. But what is to be the result? We pray that it does not mean war. We trust Germany will take advantage of openings purposely left in the note and disclaim the unfortunate incidents that have aroused America, and announce obedience to the rights of neutrals in the future.

Purposely Conciliatory.

From The Des Moines Evening Tribune.

The purposely conciliatory tone of the President's note to Germany is made plain in every line. A much more flamboyant message might have committed the country to a much less definite course of action. In a calm, dispassionate, friendly appeal the President calls upon Germany to disavow responsibility for the loss of American lives.

LOUISIANA.

Uphold Their Hands.

From The New Orleans Item.

Our future rests with fate and on President Wilson and his advisers as the instruments of fate. We should pray for a happy outcome while we uphold their hands.

Meets Popular Expectation.

From The New Orleans Daily States.

President Wilson's note to the German Government will meet the just expectations of the American people. It loses nothing of its force; the rigidity of its insistence upon American rights is mitigated in no wise by the diplomatic urbanity in which its terms are couched.

Measures Up to Requirements.

From The New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Both in contents and in tone the American note concerning the Lusitania tragedy measures up to the requirements of the crisis which has arisen between the great Republic and the great Empire. Though there is a complete lack of bluster, there is no lack of resolute insistence upon the rights of our citizens.

MAINE.

Takes Bold Position.

From The Portland Press.

President Wilson has taken a bold position. It behooves us to have full confidence in the President and be prepared to give him the support he has a right to expect.

Nation with the President.

From The Portland Argus.

The note will have the unqualified approval of the American people. The whole nation will be with the President whatever eventuality may arise.

MARYLAND.

The Voice of a Statesman.

From the Baltimore Sun.

There is all the red blood in the message that a red-blooded nation can ask. It is the voice of a statesman speaking the mind of a great people most anxious not to break the peace, but determined not to tolerate further wrong.

No Spirit of Truckling.

From the Baltimore American.

It has evaded nothing, it has mitigated nothing, and it shows no spirit of truckling. Germany must now either concede the position of this country or stand outlawed before the world.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Words of a Patriot.

From the Boston Journal.

President Wilson's words are those of a patriot. We cannot believe that a nation which is bound by so many ties of friendship to this nation is so far possessed by war madness that she will fail to heed the message.

Appeal to German Sanity.

From the Boston Post.

The note is all that such a message from a justly aggrieved nation to the aggressor nation should be. In it is the voice of the American people at its finest and best. It is a powerful appeal to German sanity.

Germany Must Relent.

From the Boston Globe.

President Wilson has not shirked a grave responsibility. The American note clearly shows that Germany must relent or take whatever consequences we may decide to adopt.

It Covers the Ground.

From the Springfield Republican.

The Government's position in this case is the country's position. It is not extreme, yet it covers the ground.

Its Logic Sound.

From the Springfield Union.

Nobody, not even the most punctilious German sympathizer, can assert that this note is intemperate, granted that its premises and logic are sound, and we do not see how they can be controverted.

Behind Wilson to a Man.

From The Boston Transcript.

The responsibility for the future lies wholly with Germany, and in that fact lies also the ingenuity of our Government's note. It behooves all Americans at this time to assume an attitude of "watchful waiting" for Germany's reply. The President is standing up for the Government and people of the United States and they stand behind him to a man.

Reflects Feeling of Country.

Boston Christian Science Monitor.

There is probably no body of opinion in the United States which will be dissatisfied either with the tone or temper of his note. It reflects the feeling of the country as indicated in the editorials in the press and in the expression of private opinion, and for the moment there is little more to be said.

MISSOURI.

Embodies American Idealism.

From The Kansas City Star.

President Wilson has said what was in the hearts of his countrymen. He has said it with dignity, with consideration, but with unmistakable directness. His words embody the idealism of the American people and the obligation to maintain the principles of high humanity which they feel have devolved upon them in a world in which some of the hard-won gains of civilization have been submerged by the passions of war. The President has nobly met the demands of this critical situation.

Door Open for Peace.

From The St. Louis Republic.

If the Government at Berlin is looking for a way to escape from the consequences of these events short of war with the only great power—save Austria—with which it is now at peace, the door is held widely open by the hand of President Wilson. But every word of the note, from beginning to end, breathes the determination on the part of the Government of the United States not to pause short of the fullest reparation for the past and the guarantee of the recognition of the full rights of American citizens in the future. Shall it be peace or war? The decision rests with Germany. The Government at Washington, without rashness and without fear, takes its stand on the law of nations and awaits the answer of Berlin.

Issue Up to Germany.

From The St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Suppose Germany had been wronged by America as America had been wronged by Germany. Suppose America had illegally attacked German ships and drowned German citizens. Would the Kaiser do less than President Wilson has done? What would the German people think? The issue of right or wrong is clearly and squarely put to the German Government.

MINNESOTA.

Height of Forceful Diplomacy.

From The St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The American note reached to a wonderful height of forceful diplomacy. Hoping for the best, the universal American sentiment will be that America has done its duty, and the people will support the President through whatever may be the consequences.

Nation Behind President Wilson.

From The Duluth Herald.

Acting with deliberation as well as firmness, President Wilson, after due time of thought and—doubt it not—prayer, has formulated his message to the German Government. Behind these firm though courteous demands stand the American people to a man. This nation cannot afford to let any nation in the world think for a moment its interests can be lightly regarded with impunity. Manifestly, it is the purpose of the President to leave no room for doubt on that point.

People Will Stand by Him.

From The Minneapolis Journal.

The strength of President Wilson's note lies beneath the surface. Outwardly it is almost too calm, but upon examination it is seen that the formal civility of expression is in reality a mask for a grave and final proposition to the Imperial German Government. And then comes the last strong paragraph. Could the President have said more? The American people will stand by these words.

MICHIGAN.

An Unmistakable Censure.

From The Detroit News.

There is absolutely nothing in President Wilson's note to Germany which can be construed as offensive. It is an unmistakable censure, but, being based upon law, precedents, and the facts, the German Government cannot consistently take offense without betraying eagerness to quarrel with this nation.

People's Duty Plain.

From The Milwaukee Sentinel.

The President assumes as beyond question the principle that, in so far as neutral rights are defined, international law is in no wise abrogated or suspended by the peculiar exigencies of this war or the advent of new devices for making war. Belligerents may, in their desperate reprisals set aside the rules of international law as against each other; they have no justification for doing so as against neutrals. Now that our own Government has spoken there is only one plain duty for all Americans, and that is so plain that to define it would be an insult to the patriotism and intelligence of any American fit to be called one.

Temperate in Tone.

From The Detroit Journal.

No exception can be taken to the note, as it is exceedingly temperate in tone, dignified in language, and anything but unfriendly in its terms. It does not seek to interfere with the kind of warfare Germany may choose to wage upon its enemies, but it does assert that the rights of American citizens upon the high seas must be respected by all belligerents.

Door Open for Peace.

From The Grand Rapids Press.

While presenting the situation unequivocally, the President wisely opens the way for negotiations for settlement and reparation, provided Germany enters upon them in friendly feeling and with evident desire to avoid the supreme arbitrament.

MONTANA.

Strong Yet Courteous.

From The Anaconda Standard.

The note is strong, firm, and dignified, yet courteous.

NEBRASKA.

To the Point.

From The Omaha Bee.

The protest is plain spoken and to the point and unquestionably voices the sentiment of the great majority of the American people.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Must Back It Up.

From The Manchester Union.

We may hope that Germany will come to her senses, admit the gravity of her offense, and give guarantees against its repetition, but if such shall not be the case, President Wilson's temperate declaration of our national purpose must be backed up if it costs, for every American life already sacrificed, a thousand more of America's best manhood.

NEW YORK.

No Backdown.

From The Buffalo Express.

There has been no backdown. Let the people's response go out from every corner of the land. We are all Americans.

Reflects President's Poise.

From The Albany Argus.

Dignified in its tone, logical in its argument and conclusions, firm in its demands, the United States note to Germany reflects the poise of the President, Woodrow Wilson, under most trying circumstances.

Places Issue Squarely.

From The Albany Knickerbocker Press.

The note places the issue squarely before Germany for action, and an announcement of future policy acceptable to the United States Government, particularly a policy of sea warfare, must not long be delayed.

Meets Every Requirement.

From The Buffalo Courier.

Right-minded men of every party will approve its tone and tenor. The clearness, the definiteness, with which this presentation is made can satisfy the most rigid Americanism that views large affairs sanely. It seems to meet every requirement of American patriotism and honor.

Courteous and Without Bluster.

From The Rochester Post-Express.

Courteous in tone and without bluster, the communication makes it clear to average understandings that we do not and shall not submit to war on the seas as Germany has thus far waged it, and the calm assumption of our State Department is that the Imperial Government must know that the American people will enforce their righteous contention by all the means at their command.

All That Could Be Desired.

From The Auburn Advertiser-Journal.

The American note to the German Government is all that could be desired, either by the most rabid advocate of force or by the most extreme stickler for peace. It is easily the ablest State paper that has emanated from the present Administration.

An Emphatic Notice.

From The Watertown Daily Times.

The note emphatically tells Germany that she must rewrite her code of naval warfare or else the United States will rewrite it for her.

Will Thrill Every American.

From The Rome Sentinel.

It will thrill every American heart; it can leave the world under no mistaken impression as to our national determination. We do not want war. We intend to do everything we can in reason and in honor to avoid war. But we shall insist upon our unquestioned rights and do our share in demanding the same treatment for other neutral peoples.

Says What Should Be Said.

From The Amsterdam Recorder.

Mr. Wilson's note to Germany says what should be said, and it says it in a straightforward way. It stands firmly and squarely for both American rights and the rights of humanity.

In Temperate Language.

From The Gloversville Leader-Republican.

There is nothing in the note which could be construed as indicative of an unfriendly course. The language used is extremely temperate. Indeed, an actual compliment to Germany is involved in the expression of belief contained that the Imperial Government will recognize the justice of demands made and comply with them in a spirit of fairness.

OHIO.

Not Hostile to Germany.

From The Cincinnati Times-Star.

The President should be able to count upon the support of every loyal American. Mr. Wilson doesn't want war. But he has proper regard for the rights of American citizens and the dignity of the nation. The note shows careful consideration of a very serious question. It is written in no spirit of hostility to Germany. The note deserves a place among America's great State papers.

Breathes Highest Ideals.

From the Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

The strength of a just man armed is apparent in the protest sent by President Wilson. Devoid of truculence, breathing the highest ideals of international justice, this remarkable paper, freighted with momentous possibilities, brushes aside all formalities and is frank, and in unmistakable language tells the Kaiser's Government what the American people think.

Germany's One Chance.

From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Three paths are open to the Kaiser. One will remove from Germany the stigma of outlawry and restore her to her position of honor among the nations. One will definitely confirm her voluntary withdrawal from the brotherhood of civilization. The third is a crooked path of quibble and procrastination. There is ground for hope that Germany will choose the best way.

War Not Likely.

From The Ohio State Journal.

How Germany will promise to protect the lives and property of our people in the future, or in what manner this country will receive her refusal to, remains to be seen. Ill is a grave alternative; and while it is not likely to result in war, it will bring about an enmity toward Germany that will be full of anxiety.

All Americans Could Wish.

From The Cleveland News.

Our country's hope of unbroken peace now rests with Berlin. The note * * * fulfils all that was predicted of it. It is all that Americans could wish. In its dignity, honesty, moderation, and determination it deserves to stand, as it does stand, as the voice of the whole American people.

A Great Duty Admirably Done.

From The Columbus Dispatch.

It was given to President Wilson to be the voice of the nation crying out against the horrors of war. It was a great duty, and he has performed it admirably.

OREGON.

Ignores Sophistries.

From The Portland Oregonian.

The President ignores as unworthy of consideration the sophistries by which Germany has excused the wholesale murder, not only of noncombatant men, but of women and children, including babies at their mother's breasts. He takes his stand on the firm grounds of international law, which declares the rights of humanity and of peaceful citizens to traverse the seas unharmed. No sufferings which the enemies of Germany may inflict on her people can justify vengeance on neutrals or the conduct of war in such manner that neutrals are harmed deliberately.

Standing on this firm footing, we occupy a moral position that is impregnable.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Ultimatum to Germany.

From The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

There may be some regret that the President has deemed it necessary to conceal his evident thought in the courtesy of language. * * * But the determination of the American people is not veiled in the form of expression. There is an ultimatum before Germany. A way is left for the maintenance of peace by her avowal of the laws of humanity and her recognition of the rights of Americans. But if she refuses there is only one other way open. And the most serious thought of the moment is that the United States must be prepared to take that other way, if necessary, whenever definite action may be required.

Germany Must Choose.

From The Philadelphia Record.

The note is in every respect a masterly document. It puts the German Government squarely in the position of choosing whether it will obey the dictates of conscience, reason, and humanity, and retain the friendship of the United States, or accept the stigma of an outlaw nation and deliberately provoke a new quarrel.

Will Germany Listen?

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The Administration has spoken, and spoken to the point. The German Government cannot have the slightest doubt as to its meaning. Will Germany listen to the voice of prudence before it is too late?

No Hasty Word.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer.

We have not always agreed with the President of the United States, but when it comes to a question of the nation's honor, the President must be upheld. The note is written deliberately and coolly. There is not a word spoken in haste.

Meets Patriots' Views.

From the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

That note has fully met the expectations of every true and patriotic American who has looked to his Government to assert and guard the rights which belong to it as a neutral nation. As the President has met the emergency and responded courageously to the demands of his people, so do the people now respond in his support.

A Refreshing Summons.

From the Pittsburgh Post.

The note is a refreshing summons back to the code of civilization. It is difficult to see how Germany can view it any other way.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Plain, Frank, Honest.

From the Columbia Record.

It is plain, frank, honest, and represents the will of the people.

From the Charleston Evening Post.

The note is the voice of the nation, and its requirements are supported by the whole people of this Republic, and its consequences will be accepted by them with satisfaction if they preserve and promote peace, with courage and confidence if they lead to anything more lamentable.

Firm Course the Only One.

From the Charleston News and Courier.

The President's firm course with Germany is not only grounded solidly upon international law, upon morality, and upon justice; it is also the one course which offers any possibility of preserving peace.

TENNESSEE.

No Evasive Answer.

From The Chattanooga Times.

He [the President] will take no diplomatic evasion as an answer; no shunting of the responsibility for the loss of American lives and property on to England; no "ifs," "ands," or "maybes"—but Germany must recognize the right of American citizens to go upon the high seas in the pursuit of legitimate callings, secure against the assassin's torpedoes and the bullets of the bully.

Such is the meaning the President's deliberate words carry to the German Government, and such is the significance the American people will attach to them. If Germany shall refuse to comply with these altogether just and fair demands, then she will practically declare herself in a state of war against the United States, and the President will find the whole people back of him ready to enforce to the uttermost the majesty of his proclamations and the dignity and self-respect of the nation ever which he presides.

We think it means, also, that realizing the calamities that have seized the nations of the world, and fully appreciating the frenzied hatreds that have been aroused by this war between the nations of Europe, likely not to be healed for many generations, but remaining to menace and constantly endanger the peace and tranquillity of the world, and made conscious of the insecurity of our own exemption from participation in the general demoralization, the Congress of the United States should and will at the earliest possible moment provide for the enlargement of the regular army, strengthen the arm of the State militia, and increase the country's defenses against assaults from the seas, adding to the navy enough ships of all classes to put us among the first powers of the world for defensive and offense warfare, should either become necessary.

Weighty and Well Considered.

From The Memphis News-Scimitar.

His (the President's) words are weighty and well considered. His position is lofty, humane, and patriotic. Those who endeavor to misinterpret his message or read into it what it does not contain will find the country detached from them as much as it was when they tried to drive the President into rash and hasty action.

Its Meaning Unmistakable.

From The Memphis Commercial Appeal.

The President, in words that no one can fail to understand, declares that this Government will not permit any abridgment of the rights of its people. * * * Woe to those who seek to abridge our lawful rights and their free exercise and enjoyment is under every word of President Wilson's note.

TEXAS.

Stand Behind the President.

From The Dallas Times Herald.

The principles of warfare which German submarines have practiced are poles apart. Can they be brought together so as to insure the safety of innocent Americans at sea? Meanwhile all Americans stand squarely behind the President.

A Great State Paper.

From The San Antonio Light.

The note is a great State paper. Everything that should be there it contains, and there is nothing that should have been said that has been omitted. The entire country will resolutely indorse the President in the stand he has taken, be the developments what they may.

Our Rights at Stake.

From The Houston Chronicle.

It is not Germany's right or England's right or any other warring nation's right that constitutes the crux of this situation, but the right of the United States of America. The President practically asserts that American citizens have the right to navigate the high seas and that they have the right to sail on belligerent merchant vessels. He is right.

UTAH.

Gratifying.

From The Salt Lake Herald-Republican.

Will Be Upheld.

From The Salt Lake City Tribune.

We take it for granted that the President's position in his note to the German Government will be upheld with practical unanimity.

VIRGINIA.

Germany Must Decide.

From the Richmond News-Leader.

Germany must now decide whether she will accept the American protest as an ultimatum or as an opportunity of rescinding an indefensible proclamation. If she is determined to continue her submarine warfare she must face at least an immediate severance of diplomatic intercourse with this country. If she is willing to abandon a policy of wholesale murder and cowardly assassination, she can do so with no loss of prestige by a simple disavowal of the acts of her naval officers. Our protest is unequivocal and was meant to be so.

WASHINGTON.

No Faltering or Division.

From The Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

It is no jingo utterance, no "mere scrap of paper," but a cool, calm, declaration—ultimatum, if you please—of this American nation, and in support of it there will be no faltering or division.

Temperate and Meaningful.

From The Seattle Times.

It is a temperate and meaningful note. Ninety per cent. of the American people will stand behind the President in his efforts to carry out those real American declarations of true patriotism.

WISCONSIN.

Attitude Needs No Explaining.

From The Milwaukee News.

The note puts matters where it is Germany's next move, if any move is to be made. * * * The President has placed this nation where its moral attitude will need no explaining, no matter what necessities it ultimately may be called to justify.

Dignity and Adequacy.

From The Milwaukee Wisconsin.

There is no mistaking the firmness of the note nor its purpose if possible of averting an irreparable breach of friendly relations. Even hair-trigger Americans, as well as all who would have been impatient with any show of weakness, must recognize its dignity and adequacy.

Asserts Guaranteed Rights.

From The Milwaukee Journal.

The note asserts rights guaranteed American citizens under the laws of nations to safety of lives on neutral vessels and on merchant vessels of belligerents. The President's firmness and desire for friendship are certain of support from all Americans.

Nation Behind the Note

From The St. Louis Times.

While the American note to Berlin is the strongest protest that has been sent to a foreign power since Mr. Olney defied Great Britain in the Venezuelan matter, we feel that war will not be the result. That a strained relation exists is not to be denied. Whether the German response will increase the tension is the question now uppermost.

We are rather inclined to the thought that the German foreign officers will find some temporizing language that will have an ameliorating effect for the moment. Any reply, however, that falls far short of a complete acknowledgment of the American position will put this Government in an attitude where it will be necessary to send Ambassador von Bernstorff out of the country and recall Envoy Gerard.

Every American citizen, whether he be native or hyphenated, is back of the President in his vigorous protest against the destruction of American life and property. It is to be hoped, devoutly, that it will not be necessary for this Government to proceed with extreme measures, but if the necessity is presented President Wilson will find back of him a great nation in concord.

CANADIAN PAPERS' VIEWS.

They Like the Note, but Doubt if Germany Takes Heed.

Dignity and Vigor.

From The Toronto Evening News.

The friends of the United States will rejoice at the dignity, compresentiveness, and vigor of the note to Germany.

Represents Wilson at His Best.

From The Toronto Evening Telegraph.

The Lusitania message represents Woodrow Wilson at his best. The protest is a noble and quietly phrased state paper. The restraint of President Wilson's style is wasted upon Germany.

Expects More German "Assurances."

From The Montreal Star.

We imagine that it will not be beyond the resources even of clumsy German diplomacy to meet this American "note" with assurances which will prevent immediate action of any sort. The Germans are not likely to bandon their submarine blockade at the bidding of a nation which has not regarded the wanton murder of a hundred-odd of its citizens as a "casus belli."

C. A. CULBERTSON, Senator, Texas.

Leaves Way for Settlement Open.

CHICAGO, May 14.—I unqualifiedly approve of the President's note as one of temperate tone, a document fortified in the doctrines of international law, and a statement of the position of America as to the rights of her people which will receive unanimous approval of our countrymen and the support of the nation under any circumstances and at any crisis.

The note is fortunate in carrying no offensive sentiment toward any nation and leaving open to Germany every avenue for peaceful solution and settlement of differences which could be hoped for between civilized and Christian countries.

JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS, Senator, Illinois.

Meets International Law.

OAKLAND, Cal., May 14.—President Wilson's note to the Imperial German Government should meet with the approval of every patriotic American. It is dignified, and is in accordance with international law.

GEORGE C. PERKINS, Ex-Senator, California.

Meets the Situation.

NEWBERN, S. C., May 14.—The President's note to Germany fully meets the present situation and gives assurance of a steadfast purpose on the part of this Government to meet any possible eventualities with calm deliberation and courage.

F. M. SIMMONS, Senator, North Carolina.

Waives Party Differences.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 14.—The note of the Secretary of State to the German Foreign Office may have the effect which it was intended to have upon the Imperial Government. The reply thereto will b eawaited with very great interest, not only by the American people, but throughout the world.

It would not be appropriate for me to criticize or analyze this note, which evidently reflects the President's frame of mind, and must be supported by all loyal Americans.

Our Government is dealing with a most delicate and important affair, the consequences of which may be far reaching. We can well afford to waive party and factional differences and survey the situation with calmness and deliberation.

If trouble should result from this incident, which I do not anticipate, every patriotic citizen will sustain the course of the American Government. Congress alone can declare war and in my opinion it will hesitate long before committing the Government to that course. Diplomatic difficulties often lead to misunderstanding and embarrassment, but our prestiage as a nation can only be maintained by the most scrupulous regard for all the equities.

WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH, Senator, Michigan.

"What Is to Come After?"

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 14.—The President's note to Germany is excellent as a protest, but the important question is, What is to come after?

Are we prepared to go to war to enforce our demands? If not, the protest will prove to be an idle thing. I do not believe our people are ready to go to war with Germany for such a cause. There is no reason to believe Germany will abandon her course, therefore, we have done the proper thing in declaring our position, but things will go on about as they are.

It would be much better for us to stop sending munitions of war to the belligerents, and be what we loudly proclaim ourselves to be, strictly neutral. It is this violation of the spirit of neutrality that has made most of the trouble.

JOHN D. WORKS, Senator, California.

War Gore's Last Argument.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—War should be the last argument of republics, if not of Kings, Kaisers, and Czars. Diplomacy should be exhausted before guncotton is given a thought. The President has said all that national honor and international law require. Under such an overpowering provocation it would have been easier to speak the language of passion than that of reason.

The President's voice must be the unanimous voice of a hundred million Americans. Still every true American must say with Grant: "Let us have peace." Peace, not war, with Germany is the desire of this nation, as it is the supreme interest of both nations. Peace can never be exchanged with honor for any other consideration than that of ultimate security.

Moral conquests are more enduring than military conquests. Exemplified respect for the principals and precedents of international law is our proper attitude. Even-handed and even-hearted neutrality is our true policy. The United States should look with equal disfavor upon all those who disregard the rights and interests of neutral nations.

If the rights and welfare of neutrals continue to be wantonly disregarded the United States, as far as possible, should effect an informal entente on the part of all neutral nations touching matters of common concern. If a blow must be struck to vindicate the rights, the interests and the honor of neutral nations it should be a common and crushing blow. If unanimous in nothing else we are unanimous in the hope that such a necessity may never be imposed upon us.

T. P. GORE, Senator, Oklahoma.

Greatest Since Monroe Doctrine.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—The President's note is the greatest declaration of our national rights since the pronouncement of the Monroe Doctrine. The position of the United States could not be more firmly or more definitely presented. The demands made upon the Germant Government while couched in the most conciliatory and diplomatic language, breathing the spirit of peace and friendship, leave no doubt as to the determination to protect and maintain its position. The responsibility is shifted upon the German Government, and a prompt and unequivocal reply and action on their part is required.

KEY PITTMAN, Senator, Nevada.

Represents American Sentiment.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 14.—I believe the note to Germany represents the sentiment of the American people.

N. P. BRYAN, Senator, Florida.

Thinks Germany Will Comply.

FORT DODGE, Iowa, May 14.—The President's note is a clear presentation of our country's position. Germany, being a just nation, must recognize its force. I believe the President's demands will be complied with. He can be certain the nation is with him in whatever plan he deems best. He will never lead us to war if it can be honorably avoided.

W. S. KENYON, Senator, Iowa.

Every Confidence in Wilson.

DENVER, Col., May 14.—I have every confidence in the wisdom and ability of President Wilson—that is manifest by the text of his note to Germany.

CHARLES S. THOMAS, Senator, Colorado.

Hitchcock Not Ready for War.

OMAHA, Neb., May 14.—Personally, I should not be willing to go to war for the purpose of securing to American citizens the right to travel in the war zone on an English ship loaded with arms and ammunition.

GILBERT M. HITCHCOCK, Senator, Nebraska.

Expects Note to Free Commerce.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—I believe the note will have a very wholesome effect and restore to commerce the freedom of the seas.

JAMES D. PHELAN, Senator, California.

Right and Timely.

ATLEE POMERENE, Senator, Ohio.

CHAMP CLARK HOPES FOR PEACE WITH HONOR

Members of Congress Agree with Speaker that Wilson Spoke with People's Voice.

Members of the House of Representatives made the following expressions of opinion yesterday regarding the President's note to the German Government:

Great State Paper.

BOWLING GREEN, Mo., May 14.—The American note on the awful tragedy of the Lusitania will attract world-wide attention, not only by reason of the gravity of the situation and the importance of the subject matter, but also by reason of the clear form and dignified statement of the case.

In all human probability it will rank as a great state paper. It goes without saying that the situation is exceedingly ticklish and while many of our people are prone to look upon diplomacy as of little value, nevertheless the fact remains that diplomacy has hitherto ironed out several quarrels and entanglements which seemed to press our entrance into the war. I have no doubt that President Wilson will succeed in preserving peace with honor.

The last sentence in the note asserting the Administration's determination to maintain the rights of America and Americans will be most generously applauded. One thing is certain—the American people will sustain the President in this crisis, for they doubt not his ability or his patriotism.

CHAMP CLARK, Speaker.

Expresses People's Purpose.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14.—President Wilson in his note to Germany expresses accurately and with dignity and force the opinion and purpose of the American people.

A. O. STANLEY, Member of Congress, Kentucky.

Every Word Indorsed.

SMITHFIELD, N. C., May 14.—I indorse every word in it.

EDWARD W. POU, Member of Congress, North Carolina.

Clear, Sound, Unanswerable.

DUQUEEN, Ark., May 14.—It is clear, sound, and unanswerable, especially those portions which state the rights of American citizens and our duty to sustain them, and the concluding paragraph, which asserts in effect that this Government will do every act necessary to the performance of its duty in maintaining our rights.

OTIS WINGO, Member of Congress, Arkansas.

In the President's Masterly Way.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 14.—I have read the President's note to Germany with much care. It is a clear, strong, dignified statement of the case made in excellent tone and temper and phrased in the President's masterly way.

JAMES M. GRAHAM, Member of Congress, Illinois.

Speaks for Illinois.

OTTAWA, Ill., May 14.—I believe the last paragraph of the President's note to the German Government states the position and expresses the feeling of a large majority of the citizens of Illinois.

W. H. HINEBAUGH, Member of Congress, Illinois.

Worthy of Our Best Traditions.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The President has resolutely taken a solemn responsibility and has courageously comworthy of our best traditions. The note loses none of its gravity or moment because couched in terms of considerate courtesy.

A. P. GARDNER, Member of Congress, Massachusetts.

America Safe with Wilson.

GREENVILLE, Mich., May 14.—The President's note to Germany truly expresses the mind of the American people. His masterful manner in handling the present situation shows a very high type of statesmanship. We have nothing to fear. The American people are loyal to Wilson. They admire his statesmanship, his courage, and they have great confidence in his ability to guide this nation in the right. No President since Lincoln has faced a more trying situation, but America is in safe hands with Wilson.

FRANCIS O. LINDQUIST, Member of Congress, Michigan.

Right, Says Voice from Appomattox.

APPOMATTOX, Va., May 14.—The President's position is entirely right, and will be indorsed by the American people.

H. D. FLOOD, Member of Congress, Virginia.

Disarms Dilatory Defenses.

CARROLLTON, Ill., May 14.—President Wilson's note to Germany is one of the greatest State papers ever issued. For the White House it marks the commencement of a new era in diplomatic correspondence in that it anticipates dilatory defenses, expressions of regret, &c., and answers them in advance.

The absolute right of our position must be admitted by Germany. I expect that the German answer will quickly come, and that it will concede the propriety and justice of all our demands.

HENRY T. RAINEY, Member of Congress, Illinois.

Just, Moderate, Firm.

CLEVELAND, May 14.—Our Government's note to Germany puts the situation with justice, moderation, and firmness. It is a great letter, and will have the indorsement of the American people.

ROBERT J. BULKLEY, Member of Congress, Ohio.

Law Lucidly Set Forth.

ROCHESTER, Ind., May 14.—International law is the safeguard of neutral rights in time of war. Wilson and Bryan have lucidly and diplomatically set forth to the world this country's conception of both the law and the rights of our citizens to travel on international highways, wheresoever they may be, free from murderous attacks of belligerents.

HENRY A. BARNHART, Member of Congress, Indiana.

Sale of Fine Shirts for Men ever held by Saks & Company

The sale began with 17,000 Shirts, of which 13,000 were the famous Gotham brand, the makers of which are retiring from business, and 4,000 Saks Shirts added to complete the size-range in all the lines. Though the selling has been very large, there is right now a fine assortment of patterns, and the size-range is intact.

These Shirts are made with shrunk, beaded neckband; extra fine stitching, and best buttons, in a factory organized only to make fine Shirts. They are not ordinary "sale" Shirts, but regular, high-grade stock.

LEGAL AUTHORITIES COMMEND THE NOTE

Choate, Coudert, Depew, Giddings, and Other Noted Men Uphold President's Stand.

THINK IT JUST AND PROPER

Prof. Kirchwey Suggests Something Should Have Been Proposed to Offer a Way Out.

President Wilson's note to Germany was indorsed yesterday by some of the country's foremost authorities on international law, as well as by men prominent in many other professions. Practically all were agreed that the tone of the note was correct, and likewise nearly all thought the demands contained therein were just. Few ventured the suggestion that the note might involve the United States and Germany in war, but every one pledged his support to the President.

Frederic R. Coudert said: "It is the duty of every American citizen to sustain to the uttermost the firm and just stand taken by the President and which is in accordance with the plainest dictates of humanity as well as with rules of international law settled among the family of nations by centuries of acquiescence.

"If any war is to result it must be because Germany is intent upon pursuing an utterly unjust, unlawful, and inhuman course of action to which no self-respecting nation could properly submit. It must now be evident to all that the dignity and honor of the nation are entirely safe in the hands of the Chief Executive, and it is certain to my mind that he will receive unanimous support in whatever steps he may deem necessary in carrying out a just course that his note so cogently sets forth."

As soon as he read the President's note, Mr. Coudert sent this telegram to the President's Secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty:

"When opportunity presents, kindly convey to the President my sincerest admiration for the note, so dignified and so worthy of highest tradition—American diplomacy."

Admirable, Says Depew.

Chauncey M. Depew said: "I think President Wilson's note to Germany is admirable in tone and temper. That is all I care to say about it."

Professor Brander Matthews of Columbia University said: "The paper struck me as admirable, firm in its purpose, dignified in its tone, excellent in its temper. It is a worthy addition to the memorable series of American State papers."

"I think President Wilson's note is admirable," said Joseph H. Choate. "I quite agree with everything he has said, and every American should stand by him."

Professor George W. Kirchwey of Columbia University, also one of the country's most widely recognized authorities on international law, said: "The President's note is a strong, sane, and convincing statement of the case of civilization against Germany, but it seems to me that it fails to meet the real demands of the occasion.

"It is well enough to protest, to demand reparation, to insist on guarantees against further acts of aggression, but in my opinion something more was required, something proposed—or suggested as a way out.

"The President's note all but closed the door to a peaceful solution of the difficulty, for nobody expects that Germany will back down, and nobody in his senses wants war between the two countries.

"It seems to me that the note might well have closed with the suggestion of a conference of the powers to be held at once to determine the rules which should govern submarine warfare, and with a demand that until such conference had taken action all naval operations not sanctioned by present international law be suspended.

"The destruction of the Lusitania was an outrage. For us to go to war about it without first making every effort to adjust the difficulty by peaceful means would be an incalculably greater outrage."

Alphonse G. Koelble, President of the United German Societies of New York, who in 1911 upset a celebration in Carnegie Hall of 100 years of peace between this country and Great Britain because he thought Germany had been snubbed, had this to say:

"I think the reply of Germany to the demands made in President Wilson's note will contain neither a categorical yes nor no. I hardly think Germany will accede to the demands regarding the use of submarines, but there undoubtedly will be a modification of this method of naval warfare.

Suggests Note to England.

"I think the German Government will show a marked inclination to protect American citizens, provided the American Government is willing to do its part to protect its own citizens. It certainly has failed to give such protection. While sending a note to Germany, the President also should have sent a note to Great Britain demanding that Government's protection of American citizens taken as passengers on vessels carrying war supplies and munitions."

Professor William M. Sloane of Columbia University said: "The general tone of the note to Germany seems to me to be very fine. It is firm, and I don't see in it a challenge. Some persons might see in it a little irony. If that is true it is unfortunate, because it is not fitting to be ironical during the present serious time. To me the tone of President Wilson's note seems to be absolutely correct. I don't pretend to know all the information the State Department has on the situation, and any conclusions at this time would be premature."

Elihu Root, Jr., Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., John G. Milburn, Jr., Hamilton Fish, Jr., and fourteen other young men well known in New York, on Monday sent to President Wilson a telegram advising him of their support of any measures, however severe, that might be necessary to obtain redress from Germany for violation of rights of American citizens and to gain guarantees against future violations. Members of that group were asked yesterday what they thought of the President's note to Germany, and those who could be reached made this joint statement:

"It is hardly necessary to say that all of the signers of that telegram believe that the President's note fully meets the situation and correctly interprets the sentiment of the country. There is no doubt but that the country as a unit will support the President in any action required."

Professor Franklin Henry Giddings of Columbia University said: "I think the note is a clear and dignified statement of the rights of neutrals and of the principles which the United States has throughout maintained and has declared that it would insist upon. The entirely diplomatic and temperate tone of the note is noticeable and can convey no possible offense so far as form and courtesy of language are concerned.

All Depends on Germany.

"Everything now depends on the intention of the Imperial German Government. If the intention is and has been to treat the United States in accordance with treaty understandings and continuance of friendly relations, the Imperial German Government can do no less than comply with the demands of Washington. Anything short of that—short of a complete acknowledgment of the position of the United States and compliance with what is called for by this Government—can only be construed as an intention other than that which this Government has attributed to the ...rial German Government."

...or James A. O'Gorman, who was at his office here yesterday, gave out this signed statement:

"I do not feel at liberty to discuss the protest of our Government. The matter is now in the hands of the President, in whose judgment and discretion the American people repose every confidence."

Ellery C. Stowell, Professor of International Law at Columbia, dictated the following statement:

"I heartily approve of the United States' note to Germany. It makes plain the position of the country. We stand on the broad principle that a belligerent in pursuit of his purpose cannot disregard the still more important right of neutrals and other noncombatants.

"The laws of war are restrictive and not permissive. They do not authorize everything which is not otherwise prohibited. They must not be at variance with the fundamental sentiments of humanity. The United States has given an exampled instance of moderation and patience in our dealings with Germany. It is to be hoped that Germany will appreciate this attitude and make it possible to find some peaceable solution honorable to both nations.

"It is most important that Congress be called without delay. Congress should be called because the American people should in this crisis be master of its own destiny. The calling of Congress would also do more than anything else to impress Germany with the seriousness of our intention. To have Congress commence military preparations will give the most effective means of preserving peace. I believe Congress will afford another illustration of the self-control of the nation, and not be guilty of any hasty or intemperate action. I believe it most vital that Congress be called at this time."

Jacob H. Schiff Silent.

Jacob H. Schiff declined to express his opinion of the note.

"I do not think," he said, "that I should say anything now. This is not the time to speak. It is a time when it would be better if all men kept silence."

Carl H. Schurz also declined to discuss the situation.

Ex-Congressman Herman A. Metz said: "The President's message is a very able statement of conditions that exist. If he will go a step further and say the same to England we shall find relief from the pests that are bothering us. The President has paved the way for just that outcome, I believe, and in the end no further trouble will come to this country.

"Our commerce has suffered as much from one side as the other, the only difference being that in one case lives have been lost. The President has struck the right course, the declaration that we have rights and intend to assert them."

Borough President Marks of Manhattan expressed the opinion that every good citizen, irrespective of political affiliations, should support the President in his effort to preserve peace with honor. With thousands of lives in the scale patience and firmness were needed, and the President, in Mr. Marks's opinion, had shown highly commendable judgment.

George Randolph Chester, the author, said: "I am unreservedly in favor of any procedure that will protect the lives of American citizens wherever they may choose to go, and I am in favor of supporting that procedure at any cost."

Charles D. Wetmore of Warren & Wetmore, architects, made this brief comment on the note: "Very good. I am sorry to say it, but I think it is very good."

"The note," said City Chamberlain Henry Bruere, "seems to me to be of admirable restraint and dignity. I believe it represents the best points of view prevailing in the country regarding the situation. It meets fully the emergency."

Borough President Pounds of Brooklyn said that the note struck him as a forceful statement. It was couched in excellent diplomatic language, but it covered the situation well.

"It is evident the welfare of the nation is in the hands of a man well able to protect it properly," said Borough President Connolly of Queens. "President Wilson has taken a stand and all citizens should support him."

Controller Prendergast did not care to discuss the note, but Alderman O. Grant Esterbrook, who was Acting Mayor through the absence of both Mayor Mitchel and George McAneny, President of the Board of Aldermen, stated that he had been much impressed by the diplomacy of the note. He felt that he expressed the hope of all good citizens when he said that he trusted that it might lead to an amicable adjustment of the questions involved.

"The people should leave the whole matter in the hands of the President," said Frank Dowling, Tammany leader of the Board of Aldermen. "They should abide by his good judgment, as expressed in his firm declaration in the note. No doubt the people will stand by the President in this emergency."

ROOT KEEPS SILENT, LOW PRAISES THE NOTE

Ex-Judge O'Brien Says Every American Will Support President's Stand.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 14.—Many of the leading members of the Constitutional Convention would not comment today on the President's note to Germany, thus living up to the compact of silence upon which some of them entered at an informal conference several days ago after the sinking of the Lusitania.

"I shall say nothing—at least not for the present," was all that ex-Senator Root was willing to say in reply to a request for a statement.

Ex-Attorney General George W. Wickersham, ex-Secretary Henry L. Stimson, ex-Congressman Herbert Parsons, and Louis Marshall asked to be excused from making any comment.

"I like it very much," said ex-Mayor Seth Low, when asked what he thought of the President's note. He declined to be drawn into any discussion of future possibilities in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania.

"I consider President Wilson's note an admirable document," said Lemuel E. Quigg. "It must be remembered, though, that any nation which cares to adhere to rules of warfare, adopted years ago, is likely to find itself confronted with a different task. The rules which we now seek to enforce were made before Maxim and men of his kind who were at work making more complex the art of war. They were adopted before the submarine was thought of."

Ex-Judge Morgan J. O'Brien said:

"Every one must admire the stand President Wilson has taken. Every American will go to any length to support it. It is difficult to think of any course of action other than that proposed by the President, which would avert war and yet give us peace with honor. I think the note will receive the unqualified approval of every patriotic American."

Ex-Senator George A. Blauvelt said:

"The President has asserted in a forceful and dignified manner the rights of the American people, as fixed by international law. And he has done this in a way which cannot be construed as a challenge to Germany. We have made our position clear, the decision now rests with her. Whatever happens, the record of the United States will be straight on the pages of history as a result of President Wilson's note."

DR. DERNBURG RETICENT.

"I Have No Statement to Make," His Only Comment.

Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, the unofficial representative of the Emperor of Germany, declined yesterday to comment upon President Wilson's message to the German Government. Dr. Dernburg, who is at the Ritz-Carlton, asked to be excused from giving an interview.

"I have no statement to make," he said.

MINISTERS APPLAUD WILSON DOCUMENT

Presbyterians Proudly Recall the President as an Elder of That Denomination.

OTHER SECTS PRAISE NOTE

Two German Lutheran Pastors Think England Should Have Been Held to Accountability.

Presbyterians, both ministers and laymen, observed with pride that President Wilson is a Presbyterian elder. The satisfaction of his fellow-Presbyterians knew almost no bounds. The Presbyterian Building in Fifth Avenue was the centre of visitors from Brooklyn and Jersey. Secretaries of mission boards had hardly time for anything in the line of duty.

The Rev. Dr. Charles L. Thompson, President of the Home Mission Council and long Secretary of the Presbyterian Home Mission Board, said:

"The greatest state paper, the greatest utterance of America since President Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg. No matter what the outcome, that paper will last as long as our Government lasts. It will have place in public school readers. The message is idealistic in that it does not confine itself to relations between Germany and the United States, but discusses the relations between Germany and all the world, Germany and humanity. In the interests of humanity I hope Germany will accept it. If it does not do so America's skirts are clear."

The Rev. Dr. A. W. Halsey, Secretary of the Presbyterian Foreign Board, said:

"All Americans must stand by it. It is remarkable for what it does not say as well as for what it does say. Put down anything you like. It is a great paper and will live. I believe it will accomplish the purpose and avert war."

Praised by Bishop Greer.

Bishop David H. Greer of the Protestant Episcopal Church made this statement through the American League to Limit Armaments, of which he is an executive member:

"I can only say what I think every loyal American citizen would say at such a time as this—that we should stand by the President. I hope and believe he will find some pacific solution of the present crisis, and that he will guide the nation away from the difficulties which seem so imminent. That he makes this his supreme wish and desire is amply evident in all his utterances; and under his guidance we can feel that our best interests will be preserved in the noblest manner which his wise judgment can devise."

Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church, said: "President Wilson has met the present grave situation in a way worthy of the executive head of this great nation. His note is courteous, temperate, just, and unmistakably firm. The President has taken the only position possible in the interests of the nation, and also of civilization and humanity. His words express the sober and unqualified judgment of the American people, and they have behind them the deep, moral conviction of the nation."

Dr. Samuel Schulman, rabbi of Temple Beth-El, Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street, said: "The President superbly proved the wisdom of the confidence of the American people. His address at Philadelphia, with woe of the nation in his heart, was a sublime illustration of moral courage worthy of the divinely inspired fearlessness of the Prophet Jeremiah, and his action after the address was an expression of the firm love of justice and fearless insistence upon right—a worthy sequel to the moral leader's love of peace and courageous maintenance of it."

Methodist sentiment was hearty in support of the President. Bishop Wilson said:

"I regard the President's note as a calm and deliberate message that guards well our national honor. It is worthy in every way of our President and our country. I feel that in these troublous times we should pray that God may grant wisdom and grace that so His strength may be as His days."

Strong and Admirable.

The Rev. Dr. Charles L. Goodell of St. Paul's Methodist Church in West End Avenue said:

"A very strong and entirely admirable message. I had hoped that there might be some condition suggested by which there might yet remain some possibility of an adjustment to avert war. I hope for peace. America ought to be able to set an example to all nations that should make it plain that a nation can preserve the Christian ideals, and by the force of those ideals draw the great nations to a similar position."

The Rev. Dr. Malcolm James McLeod, pastor of the oldest church in New York, at St. Nicholas Reformed, in Fifth Avenue, commented as follows:

"It is the duty of every American citizen to stand behind our President. He has written a very diplomatic document. There are no threats in it. He has put a kindly construction upon an inexcusable outrage. He has made it as easy as possible for Germany to back down, and yet withal, it is firm and courteous. I do not find a single sentence that can bear a double meaning, as is so often the case in diplomatic letters. There is no clouding the issue. Facts are massed together and then the grave conclusion is drawn. There can be no doubt any longer as to where our Government stands. It now remains for the American people to back it up by their loyalty.

Baptist opinion in New York, at least the ministerial part of it, was voiced by the Rev. Dr. Curtis Lee Laws, editor of The Watchman-Examiner, the Baptist weekly. He said:

"The note of President Wilson represents the highest conception of our American citizenship. To every word of the note every good citizen ought to be able to subscribe. In every line of it dignity, courage, and Christian manliness appear. We have nothing to gain by war with Germany, and we ought to thank God that our President in representing our nation combines self-control, quiet determination, and Christian courtesy."

Cardinal Farley was in Buffalo attending Bishop Colton's funeral. So were Bishop Hayes and Mgr. Lavelle, but the Rev. William J. Sinnott, formerly of the cathedral staff, now pastor of historic St. Ann's Catholic Church in East Twelfth Street, said:

"I admire the President's attitude because I feel that we do not have to fight Germany. I hope the President will save this country to the cause of peace. It is better to spare the lives of soldiers than to lose them unnecessarily. There is no use to avenge. Vengeance is a pagan virtue and not Christian. This nation should assume the Christian attitude."

German sentiment and opinion on the note, as expressed by three Lutheran pastors of New York, found some things lacking, and also some doubts about the outcome. The Rev. Dr. J. B. Remensnyder, pastor of St. James Church in Madison Avenue, member of the Church Peace Union and President of the Lutheran General Synod, in particular found something wanting. He said:

"I approve Prtsident Wilson's message in that it stands firmly for the war to be conducted on the principles of humanity, and that the outcome does not sever peace relations between this country and Germany, but the message would have been greatly strengthened had the President proposed that if Germany would consent to abandon submarine attacks upon passenger vessels within the war zone he would likewise hold England to strict accountability in observing international laws respecting foodstuffs for the civilian population of Germany, and in case England should decline that he would prohibit the carrying of ammunition and war cargoes by English passenger vessels."

View of Lutheran Pastor.

The Rev. William F. Schoenfeld is pastor of the largest Lutheran congregation in Manhattan, that of Immanuel Church at Lexington Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street. He said:

"President Wilson takes the only position he can take, since our Government's supreme duty is to protect its citizens. Yet since the President makes appeal to the higher, yea, highest law of humanity and conscience, it seems to me that the demand for the recognition of this law should have been urged with greater insistence. Especially is this so when Germany, in answer to our Government's protest, offered to abandon its submarine warfare on merchant and passenger vessels on condition that England and her allies discontinue their blockade with reference to foodstuffs for civilians and raw materials for its industries.

"Either the international laws and dictates of humanity and conscience must be universally and impartially obeyed by and enforced on all belligerents, or none of these provisions can be rightly enforced upon any. In this case each belligerent country will of necessity fall back upon the natural law, 'an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth,' and in the performance of its supreme duty to its own people and country will, as history shows, employ any means of reprisal at its command. I sincerely hope the President's note will compel the recognition of this fact and secure the abandonment by all the powers concerned of all measures of war contrary to international law and humanity."

The Rev. Dr. A. B. Moldenke of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, at Lexington Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, doubted if Germany would accede to the President's demands. He said:

"The message is fair, but I much doubt if Germany will agree to it. I feel in suspense, as do many other German-Americans."

SPEAKS FOR HUMANITY, PAN-AMERICANS SAY

Delegates from South American and Central American nations to the coming Pan-American Conference in Washington who are now in this city voiced last night their approval of the position taken by President Wilson in his note to Germany.

While making it clear that what they said was their personal opinions and not to be taken as representative of the attitude of their Governments, they united in expressing the conviction that the public sentiment of their countries would approve the course of the United States.

"I think Mr. Wilson has done right," said Ricardo Aldao, a member of the Argentine delegation and former Minister of Finance. "He has done precisely what I should expect the President of my country to do if put in the same position. I have no doubt that his action will meet approval in my country. It was what I consider a real statesman would have to do to maintain the prestige of his country. Mr. Wilson stands as the savior of the highest interests of humanity."

Ramon Arias-Feraud of the Panama delegation said:

"The position taken by President Wilson is exactly right. There could be no other. He speaks in the name of humanity. American lives were taken, and there was no other alternative but for him to demand guarantees that no more lives of citizens of his country be taken by submarine warfare. Germany probably will refer in her answer to violations of international law by England, but the fact remains that England has respected the lives of neutrals."

Alfonso Quinones, head of the delegation from San Salvador, said that he had not had an opportunity to have the President's note translated into his own language and did not feel competent to discuss it from the point of view of international law.

"In a general way," he said, "I approve the stand taken by the United States Government in demanding that lives of neutrals on the high seas be protected. I am not acquainted fully with the points of international law at issue, but certainly, if Germany has violated it at the cost of American lives, the United States is warranted in demanding that the law be observed in the future. American gentlemen with whom I have spoken in regard to the note today told me that they were satisfied with its gentle and at the same time energetic terms."

LABOR MEN WANT PEACE.

Leaders Express Confidence in the President's Wisdom.

Leaders of organized labor in this city yesterday asserted tha they had confidence in President Wilson to deal with Germany in a manner satisfactory to the citizens of the United States and the laboring people in particular, and that they hoped for a peacable adjustment of the controversy.

Roswell Tompkins, Secretary of the United Board of Business Agents of the Building Trades, said:

"The United Board of Business Agents of the Building Trades will act on the President's message, but its declarations will be against war. The building trades believe that the war could be setled in forty-eight hours by putting all members of the royal families on the firing lines. There is a general feeling of confidence in the President to handle the delicate situation satisfactorily."

B. F. Shrimpton, Secretary of the New York Branch of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America said:

"The Wall Street telegraphers are opposed to the United States going to war because it would close the Stock Exchange and throw many out of employment. I don't think, however, that American citizens' lives should be sacrificed in view of the neutrality of the United States."

John Golden, President of the United Textile Workers of America, said:

"I think President Wilson will handle the situation properly, and the feeling of confidence in the President is widespread among all classes of citizens. Organized labor is a great advocate of arbitration and believes that the present controversy with Germany can be settled by means of arbitration."

John Fox, delegate of the Coal Teamsters' Union of Greater New York, said:

"We don't want any war with Germany and we trust to Wilson to settle the trouble with Germany in a peaceable manner."

A. I. Shiplikoff, Secretary of the United Hebrew Trades, said:

"There is too much distress in the country for war. The 300,000 Jews represented by the United Hebrew Trades in this city are in favor of the abolition of war and the permanent establishment of international peace. The Jews will bring the strongest possible pressure to bear in favor of peace. We expect President Wilson to adjust the present dispute in a peaceable manner."

FARLEY UPHOLDS WILSON.

Lusitania Sinking Absolutely Without Justification, Says Cardinal.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, May 14.—"It is absolutely without justification; the most appalling thing in my life."

Thus Cardinal Farley of New York today characterized the torpedoing of the Lusitania, with the loss of more than a thousand lives. Cardinal Farley was here to conduct the funeral of Bishop Charles H. Colton.

"The sinking of this hip and its attendant los of life will go down in history as one of the most awful things the world has ever known," he continued. "The position taken by President Wilson is to be commended. I am sure all good Americans approve his stand in the Lusitania affair, as well as his efforts to maintain strict neutrality throughout the war."

Cardinal Farley will return to New York tomorrow night.

PROMINENT WOMEN STAND BY WILSON

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont Would Like to Head a Regiment, but Can't, She Says.

SUFFRAGIST FEELS SLIGHT

Mrs. Laidlaw Thinks It Humiliating That Women Have No Voice in the Government.

Well-known New York women who were asked yesterday for their opinions of the President's note to Germany were almost unanimous in approval. Some of the suffragists, alone, asked why they should consider the matter, one in which they had no voice, whether for peace or war.

"Certainly I approve of the President's note to Germany," said Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. "I expect there will be war, and I hope so. I only wonder why action was not taken long ago. Why should we wait until a few Americans are killed before we take notice of what Germany is doing? We have been very cowardly. Why was it not as much our duty to interfere when the Belgians were so cruelly ill-treated? Have we no feeling of humanity except for our own people? I believe with Tom Paine that the world is my country.

"And I can't help thinking that if there had been only a few steerage passengers killed on the Lusitania the affair might not have made such a deep impression upon us and caused such excitement and immediate action. The note might not have been written. The fact that one very rich man is lost stirs every one. It is a poor commentary upon the democracy of this country. Yes, we are snobbish and commercial. I don't mind the commercialism. It is necessary for most of us to enable us to get our food and clothes.

"We should have helped England long ago. The Allies are fighting the battle of civilizations."

Asked what she thought of women drilling as they are said to be doing in England, Mrs. Belmont said:

"It is all right and the women are fighting in some places, too. I would like to head a regiment of women myself. No, I couldn't do it. I couldn't be Captain of a company all alone. Most of the women think too much of peace to care to be soldiers."

Calls It Wonderful.

Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, President of the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, said:

"There is nothing to say in regard to the President's note to Germany but what is being said all over town and what one reads in every paper. It is a wonderful State document, and I believe it voices the feeling of the American people, who have used great self-restraint in waiting patiently for the action of the President.

"I hope we shall not have war, but I am not a peace-at-any-price person. Our national honor must be maintained. We are facing a very grave crisis, a very serious moment. And are we ready for it? Morally we may be, but certainly not in any other way. I believe that we should have an adequate army sufficient to protect our two coast lines, and there is our Mexican border! All our coast defenses should be strengthened."

Asked what the women would do in case of war, Miss Chittenden said:

"I hope they will be behind the men, and I am sure they would uphold their hands in every way possible."

"I think the suffragists had better not talk about national politics," said Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Chairman of Manhattan Borough for the Woman Suffrage Party. "The one question of national policy in which they are interested is that, hereafter, whether in peace or war, we women shall have a voice in it. It is humiliating to think that whatever comes of this we shall have had nothing to say about it. The lesson that is borne in upon us by the findings of Mr. Bryce and his colleagues is that in the last analysis in war the suffering of women is more terrible than that of any other sufferers. What need a suffragist say more?"

"What women want," said Miss Lavinia Dock of the Nurses' Settlement, "is to lay a structure to prepare for peace in the future. It is futile to say more."

Anti-Allies, Not Pro-German.

A suffragist and settlement worker who did not regard the President's note to Germany with unmixed admiration was Miss Florence King.

"People seem to think that if you do not agree with everything that the Allies do you are pro-German," said Miss King. "I am not pro-German, but I cannot see but that Great Britain has treated us with as much contumely as Germany, and she undoubtedly would go just as far under similar conditions. Great Britain told the United States that she could come here and might not go there, and we never murmured. And I am wondering if, had the Vaterland been carrying ammunition and Americans on board, the ships of Great Britain would not have torpedoed it in just the same way.

"Also when the Germans are charged with treating women with cruelty Great Britain cannot say anything. I cannot help thinking of the way she treated, not foreign, but her own women, of the way she maltreated and abused the suffragettes."

Miss Mary Garrett Hay, head of the Woman Suffrage Party, spoke warmly of the note.

"It is a good, strong and safe document," said Miss Hay. "I think we are to be congratulated upon having in the White House a man who does not act quickly and who considers the 100,000,000 people in the country before he takes any decided step. Drastic action means trouble for every one. The President has not considered himself or his party, but he has taken the action that seemed best for the nation. No, I don't believe we are going to have war. I think we are too civilized for war."

Miss Edith A. Reiffert, President of the League of American Women of German Descent, said:

"I think the United States has no cause to ask redress from Germany. She should ask reparation from Great Britain because the Lusitania accident was one for which England directly was responsible. We have a man at the head of our Government who has a well-balanced mind and a silent tongue, and this is a time when silence is golden."

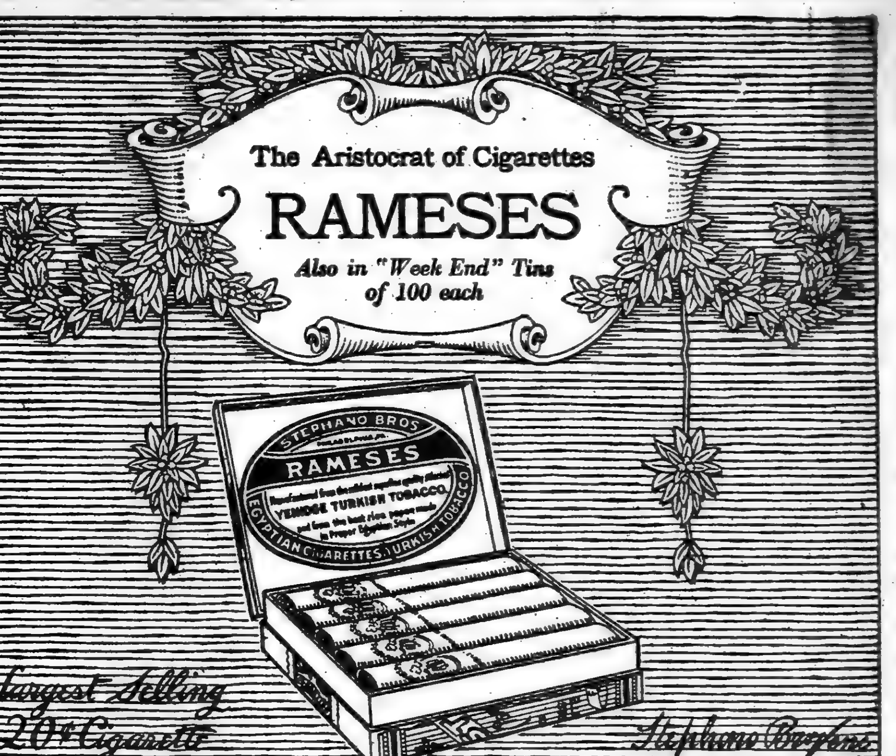
BANKERS SUPPORT PRESIDENT.

New Jersey Association Officially Indorses His Course.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 14.—The following resolution was adopted by the New Jersey Bankers' Association, which opened its annual convention here today:

That the bankers of the State of New Jersey, in convention assembled, with due appreciation of the critical situation now confronting the Government of the United States, reaffirm and express their loyalty to the President of the United States in this his hour of great care and anxiety, and further beg to convey to the President their full support in and admiration of the dignified, calm, but firm stand taken by him in his relations with the foreign Governments, and which is so clearly expressed in his latest official statement to the German Government. The bankers of the State of New Jersey believe in and pray for peace and prosperity consistent with national honor and are contest to rest in perfect security in the fullest confidence thta these blessings will be our country's portion under the skillful guidance of the President.

The resolution was offered by Thomas N. McCarter, former Attorney General of New Jersey, and the Secretary was directed to telegraph it to Washington.



W. H. TAFT LEADS 900 IN PRAISE OF WILSON

TRIBUTE BY BISHOP WILSON

"Are We Standing for Corsica or for Galilee?" the Question, He Declares.

William H. Taft praised the note to Germany in the highest terms at a dinner of 900 Methodist laymen and ministers at the Simpson-Crawford restaurant, at Nineteenth Street and Sixth Avenue, last night. After the dinner the ex-President assisted in drawing up a telegram to President Wilson expressing their approval of the note.

At the beginning of the meeting a motion was carried by a unanimous standing vote to send the telegram to the President indorsing his note and his course of action. When Mr. Taft was called upon a little later he said:

"I wish to congratulate you on the resolution you have directed your Chairman and Secretary to send to the President of the United States. I concur fully with the language in which Bishop Wilson has characterized the note that was published this morning.

"Admirable in tone, moderate in the judicial spirit that ran through the entire communication, dignified in the level that the writer takes with respect to international obligations, accurate in its statement of international law, he puts the case of the United States in a way that may well call for our earnest concurrence and confirmation.

Taft Suggests Message.

"And while I am not a member of your body, I would suggest to the Chairman and the Secretary that the resolution should include—for I believe that the spirit of the body justifies me in making the suggestion—a distinct reference to the expression of the Chief Magistrate of this nation of the position of the United States in reference to the issue which his note treated.

"I make that suggestion because I have been President myself, and I know that what you like when you are engaged in the performance of a duty of the critical character he is engaged in is a specific and definite approval, so that your support hits the mark. I have mistaken the spirit of this meeting if that is not what you want to do."

After the meeting Colonel E. W. Halford, U. S. A., retired, who was President Harrison's Secretary, and who presided at the meeting, asked Mr. Taft to outline the resolution as it should be. Mr. Taft sat down and wrote the substance of the telegram which was sent to President Wilson in the following form:

New York, Friday, May 14.

President Wilson, White House, Washington:

Nine hundred Methodist men of New York City, assembled at dinner, direct me to express to you their full approval of the note to Germany in which with admirable clearness, moderation, accuracy, and justice is stated the case of the United States in the present crisis, and to assure you of their cordial sympathy and support.

E. L. HALFORD, Chairman.

Cheer President's Name.

The gathering stood and cheered the mention of the name of President Wilson by the Chairman and, while they were on their feet for the standing vote in favor of the telegram, somebody started "America" and all joined in singing it. Colonel Halford called for the resolution in these words:

"I wish now to take the order from you to wire to the President of the United States assurances of our sympathy and support in the efforts he is making for peace with honor—less than that we do not want, and more than that we should not have."

Bishop Luther B. Wilson said that the question for all Americans was:

"Are we standing for Corsica or are we standing for Galilee?"

Speaking a little later of the note to Germany, he said:

"President Wilson's note is calm, deliberate, and forceful. In it there is no fact accentuated which might make difficulties; in it the conditions are emphasized which point the way to peace. And in the closing words President Wilson makes it plain that no citizen of this country, at home or abroad, need ever feel that he is a man without a country.

"Mr. Ridder, with whom perhaps many of you have often had occasion to disagree, made this morning a pronouncement which must profoundly stir the sympathies of all of us—that every son of the Fatherland who has sought refuge here would have, in case a conflict should come, but one flag and that the Stars and Stripes."

MINE WORKERS AGAINST WAR.

Want Labor Congress Called to Oppose Hostilities, if Threatened.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 14.—President Wilson's "efforts to keep this country at peace with all the nations of the world" were indorsed by the Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America in a resolution adopted today. A copy of the resolution was sent to the President.

The resolution advises that the American Federation of Labor call a congress of all the trades unions in the United States "in the event that war is apparent or that a special session of Congress be called to consider this momentuous question." The Labor Congress, according to the resolution, would meet in Washington at the same time as the United States Congress "for the express purpose of voicing the disapproval of labor toward any programme involving this country in war."

ROOSEVELT DECLINES TO COMMENT ON NOTE

His Opinion Covered in Previous Statements—German Organizations Drop Him.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, May 14.—Colonel Roosevelt today declined to comment on President Wilson's note to Germany. He said that his opinion was covered in the statement which he issued two days ago.

The Colonel left for Oyster Bay on the midnight train and will return here Sunday night.

The New Yorker Staats-Zeitung yesterday announced that Colonel Theodore Roosevelt had been dropped as an honorary member from the roll of the League of Old German Students and of the General German Language League. It said:

"The name of Theodore Roosevelt no longer adorns the list of members of the Vereinigung alter deutscher Studenten and of the Allgemeinen Deutschen Sprachvereins. Both leagues have dropped Teddy abruptly and finally from their lists, in which till now he figured as an honorary member. The Old German Students dropped Mr. Roosevelt some time ago without any ceremony. The occasion for this procedure was the attitude which Mr. Roosevelt has taken in this war against Germany.

"The Allgemeine Deutsche Sprachverein likewise cherished for some time the intention to endure the loss of the honorary membership of Mr. Roosevelt. But it resolved upon this only at its last meeting, probably because of the sufficiently well-known declarations made public by Mr. Roosevelt in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania. In both leagues it was not considered worth while to discuss the matter long, but was found appropriate to drop him smoothly and without much ado."

PRAISED IN WALL STREET.

Note Has Only One Critic Among Financiers Interviewed.

President Wilson's note was generally well received yesterday by leading financial men, and the belief of Wall Street, as expressed by most of the bank and corporation Presidents, was still that the probabilities were strongly against this country's being dragged into the European war. Only one man of prominence was found who thought the sentiments expressed by the President ill-advised, and he, like many others approving the message, declined to be quoted by name.

A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Chase Nationa Bank, said that he indorsed the note unqualifiedly.

"It is dignified, statesmanlike, just, and right," said Mr. Hepburn. "He represents the position of this country fairly and forcefully. The whole country will support him.

"If Germany refuses to agree with him she must take a new position as to neutral and belligerent rights, different from that the world has accepted, different from what Germany has accepted and maintained heretofore."

Alexander J. Hamphill, Chairman of the Guaranty Trust Company, said that he felt Mr. Wilson's note to Germany fully expressed the demand of the American people.

"It is just, frank, and firm," he said. "It has unified all factions and parties. There are no more hphenated Americans; the entire nation stands behind the President."

"It is a very strong note, which puts things squarely up to Germany," commended James S. Alexander, president of the National Bank of Commerce. "What her answer will be it is hard to guess."

A similar view was taken by Frank Trumbull, chairman of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, who said that the note was excellent in every respect.

"But I am not so much interested in what we say, as in what Germany will say in reply," he added.

The opposition sentiments were uttered by a man of wide international acquaintance, who said that the United States could not afford now to make any concessions from the demands made upon Germany. He did not believe either that the Kaiser would admit the justice of President Wilson's stand, or that the Kaiser's refusal to do so would lead necessarily to war.

"We are going beyond our rights in demanding that Germany end its submarine war on unarmed merchantmen," said this man. "We should have rested on the demand that American lives be safeguarded. The obvious reuly of the Germans will be the suggestion that we cease shipments of war supplies and that we persuade Great Britain to surrender its determination to keep food supplies from Germany. Then, if our State Department replies that our quarrel is with Germany alone and has nothing to do with Great Britain's policy, it is only natural to expect the Germans to say in effect: 'Very well; leave us alone in our dealings with Great Britain.'

"The expression by our State Department of its high regard for Germany's observance of international law and the laws of justice and humanity does not square our knowledge of what Germany has done to the neutrality of Belgium and to the women and children of that poor country."

NOTE IMPRESSES LONDON PAPERS

Held to be Fair Warning to Berlin That America Cannot Be Put Off in Easy Fashion.

WONDER ABOUT ANSWER

And Agree That Germans Have a Great Problem to Meet Our Just Complaints.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, May 15.—In an editorial this morning on the American note to Germany The Daily News says:

"It is very much what was generally anticipated. A way out of the impassé is suggested to the German Government. They may take the President's irony at its face value and declare that the submarine commander, who sank the Lusitania, acted in excess of his orders. It is a little difficult, in view of the official defense of his action already issued, and the triumphant paeans of almost the entire German press, but no doubt it can be done.

"In any case the German Government is formally required to disavow the outrages committed against American shipping, make reparation, so far as reparation is possible, and, finally, take immediate steps to prevent a recurrence.

"There are certain things left in obscurity in this otherwise exeremely lucid demand. It is not stated definitely what steps will be held to be sufficient to meet the requirements of the third demand, though a total cessation of submarine attacks on merchant ships is fully clearly called for, a guarantee of immunity for neutral vessels from such attacks would evidently not meet the case.

"Finally, the resultof a failure to comply with the American Government's confident expectations is veiled in a mist of scrupulously friendly words, but it will be a very rash assumption on Germany's part if she persuades herself that there is nothing behind the veil."

The Chronicle says:

"President Wilson has at last spoken out. His note to the German Government is studiously courteous in expression and very firm in substance. There is one paragraph in it which will jar on British feelings. It is that in which Wilson alludes to what he calls 'the humane and enlightened attitude hitherto assumed by the German Government in matters of international right' and speaks of German influence in the field of international obligations as 'always engaged upon the side of justice and humanity.' In view of Germany's flagrant violations of international right and of the laws of warfare by sea and land these compliments sound strangely to the English ear.

"With this reservation we think the note is worthy, both of the occasion and of the great country from whence it enamates.

"Wilhelmstrasse will be hard put to frame a suitable reply to the demands formulated in this able ad searching document. Either Germany must radically change her methods of sea warfare or face the prospect of a diplomatic rupture with the United States."

An Appeal for All the World.

LONDON, Saturday, May 15.—Referring to the note of President Wilson to the Government of Germany The Westminster Gazette said yesterday:

"The central fact is that in the name of humanity and international law the United States demands a guarantee that the right of neutrals to travel over any portion of the seas, in neutral or belligerent vessels, shall be respected. This is of profound importance not only for the present war but for the future peace and security of the world, and by dispatching this note the greatest of the neutral powers definitely takes a stand on maintaining the limits hitherto set down for warfare at sea.

"President Wilson is acting for the honor and safety of the American people, and all of us, who have the bias of belligerents, will do well to spare him advice or comment in dealing with the situation which may arise out of the dispatch of this note.

"It is more than our cause, which is at stake, and more than our interests that have to be considered. We will merely take note of the fact that one of the greatest issues of the war is sharply defined in this note, and that the answer, whatever it may be, must make clear to the whole world whether or not Germany definitely abjures legal sanction to the limitations of that which hitherto has been unchallengable between nations."

The Daily Graphic, in an editorial this morning, on the note has this to say:

"The American note is a definite challenge, and it is difficult to see how either country can evade an issue so clearly stated. It remains to be seen whether Germany will face war with the United States rather than abandon the practice of murdering noncombatants and neutrals upon the high seas."

Oklahomans Commend President.

TULSA, Okla., May 14.—The Oklahoma Bankers' Association, Oklahoma Department of the Grand Army of the Republic, and State Organization of the Spanish War Veterans, in session here today adopted resolutions urging the President to use every means to avert war and commending his course so far. The resolutions were telegraphed to Washington.

RIDDER SUPPORTS PRESIDENT'S COURSE

Diplomatically Correct and May Lead to Mediation Ending the War.

A TRIANGULAR PROBLEM

Opens Way to Consider British Blockade of Germany Also—German-Americans Elsewhere Uphold the Note.

Under the heading, "The President's Note," Herman Ridder, editor of The Staats-Zeitung, says in that publication of the issue of today:

"The attitude assumed by the President, in the note delivered yesterday to the German Government, toward the infringement of our rights on the seas is diplomatically correct and must compel the support of the entire American people.

eW have suffered grievously at the hands of more than one of the belligerent nations, but for the moment we are dealing only with Germany. The note recites a series of events which the Government of the United States could not silently pass by; and demands reparation for American lives lost and American property alerady destroyed and a guarantee that the rights of the United States and its citizens shall be observed in the future. All this the German Government may well grant, frankly and unreservedly and without loss of honor or prestige. It would be incomprehensible if it did not do so.

"The note admits, as most diplomatic documents do, of two interpretations. They will be applied to it variously, as the reader is inclined to essimism or to optimism. It is a document in which lies the choice of war or peace evenly balanced. I prefer to read into it all the optimism which can be derived from the knowledge that two nations, historically likeminded and bound to one another by strong ties of friendship, seldom go to war over matters which can be settled without resort to the arbitrament of arms. There is no question outstanding today between the United States and Germany which cannot be settled through diplomatic channels. I am inclined all the more to this optimism by the temperament and character of the President of the United States for the tie being.

"I see in the note great possibilities for good. The undersea activities of the Germany Navy in their effect upon the rights of the United States and its citizens form, properly, the burden of its argument. We are addressing Gesmany and it is only over her submarine policy that our interests have clashed with hers. The note takes cognizance, however, of the inter-relation of Germany's submarine policy and the British policy of starving out Germany. The President has opened an avenue to the full discussion of the rights and obligations of submarines in naval warfare, and when Germany has stated her case it is not only not impossible but it is highly probable that he will be asked to suggest a modus vivendi by which the objectionable features of both these policies may be removed.

The situation is basically triangular and it is difficult to see how the settlement of our difficulties with Germany can escape involving at the same time the rectification of Great Britain's methmods of dealing with the trade between neutral countries and her adversaries. It is but a step from the position of mediator in a question of this sort to that of mediator in the larger questions which make for war of peace. I believe that the note contains the hopfeul sign that these things may come to pass.

"The possibilities are there and the President, I am confident, will overlook no possibility of advancing the cause of an early return of peace to Europe nor leave any unturned stone to free this country of the dangers and inconveniences which have become the concomitants of the European struggle. Out of the troubled waters of our present relations with Germany may thus come a great and, we may hope, a lasting good. Should this happily be the case, the wisdom of the President will have been confirmed and the thankfulness of the nation secured to him. On the other hand, should his pacific hand be forced by those who wax fat anod wealthy on strife and the end should be disaster untold to the country we will still have the consolation of having fought a good battle and of knowing that he was worsted oly by the irresistible force of demagogy in this country or abroad.

"The subject with which the note deals is one of the same paramount importance to Germany as it is to this country and we must wait in patience for Germany's reply; and I, for one, shall wait in the confidence that when it is received it will be found to offer a basis for a friendly solution of the questions which exist between Germany and the United States and, not unlikely, for those further steps which I have intimated."

THE GERMAN-AMERICAN PRESS

Realizes Gravity of Situation, Stands by Wilson, Counsels Moderation.

Under the caption "A Word of Earnest Advice," the evening edition of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung yesterday issued the following warning to Germans and German-Americans:

The times are grave—even very grave. * * * A conflict between America and the old Fatherland is threatening. Such a conflict must rend the heart of every German-American who has acquired the rights of citizenship here, who has founded a new career for himself and brought up his children.

It is probably unnecessary to give any advice to the American citizens among our readers in regard to their conduct in this grave time. A series of years must pass before an immigrant can obtain his citizenship papers; nobody is forced to become a citizen. Of the man who has voluntarily become a citizen of the United States we may therefore expect that he knows the conditions here obtaining, the institutions of the country of his adoption, as well as his rights and duties. But there are thousands upon thousands of our readers who are not citizens, and to them a serious word of advice shall now be addressed. In the grave time of the conflict let efforts be made to avoid every personal conflict. It is not necessarily cowardly to deny one's descent, but it is not necessary, either, to make demonstrations.

Where there is life there is hope. The hope still is entertained that the conflict will be eliminated, that the bond of friendship between Germany and America will not be torn. Through thoughtless Hotspurs, who allow themselves to be carried away by excitement and do not dam up the flood of their eloquence, much mischief can be done. Keeping away from the public places where the excited groups congregate and discuss the burning questions of the day must be urgently recommended. It was for many a sport to participate in these discussions, and with more or less skill, but always energetically to champion the German cause.

The American is in general very liberal in regard to expression of opinion. He likes to hear also the "other side," but it must not be forgotten that in times of conflict the "other side" may be regarded as the "enemy side." What has heretofore sounded harmless may now be interpreted as a criticism made against the United States. But the American as a rule repels a criticism made by strangers against the affairs of his own country. Through heated discussions and unwise demonstrations nothing is at present to be achieved but much can be spoiled.

Grave times!

Calmness is now the first duty of citizenship—for all non-citizens.

Trusts in the President.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14. — The American note to Berlin evidences the desire of the President to hold Germany to strict accountability for the loss of American lives in the Lusitania disaster. This proceeding on the part of the American Government is eminently just and proper. If the President had failed to hold Germany to strict accountability he would have failed of his official duty. The President's forceful action cannot be but of salutary effect in this country also. It gives the American people the assurance that the Government at Washington is prepared and ready for the protection of American citizens wherever they may chance to be.

There was a time when the Government did not resort to very vigorous measures in this respect. American citizens while travelling abroad were frequently subject to insult and violence, and the authorities at Washington seemingly paid little heed to complaints. The result was that the American citizen abroad was not held in that respect which emanates from the knowledge that his home Government is prepared to go to the length of its ability, if necessary, to accord him protection.

One or two of the demands formulated against Germany do not meet with our approval. The President demands a cessation of German submarine warfare on merchant vessels, but as the interruption of the starvation plan adopted by England against the civil population is urged upon the latter it will remain. The starvation plan is primarily being waged against the weak and helpless, and is, therefore, responsible. It is also in violation of the spirit, if not the letter of international law. If the President can force a demand for the cessation of the submarine warfare, he ought also to have the right to demand the lifting of the starvation blockade. The tragedy was chiefly due to either stupidity or design on the part of the British Admiralty in failing to afford proper protection to the ship. While we do not agree with the President on some points in his note, we repose the fullest confidence in his patriotism, as well as his deliberate judgment as giving assurance that, whatever the outcome, the case of the American people rests in trustworthy hands.

The people should by their action spare him unnecessary embarrassment and rely for a satisfactory solution of the grave questions confronting us on his patriotism and honesty.

CHARLES NEUMEYER,
Editor Louisville Anzeiger.

Charges Blame to England.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, O., May 14.—The part of the note referring to the Lusitania catastrophe had better been directed to London. England, not Germany, is responsible for the destruction of the Lusitania. England, through the violation of the rights of nations and the brutal threat to starve 70,000,000 Germans, has forced Germany to a policy against English commerce of which the Lusitania was a victim. Germany declared to our President her willingness to stop submarine warfare if England would allow the importation of food for the German civil population. England contemptuously cast aside the President's mediation.

It has not yet been proved that submarine warfare is not in keeping with international law. Distinguished authorities on international law have declared that Germany was not only justified but bound to adopt this method in the hour of need, because it is the only effective defense against England's warfare. Germany cannot cease this warfare unless she wishes to surrender with tied hands to a ruthless enemy. All we can justly ask of Germany is that neutral ships be not attacked, and that damages be paid in case of loss through mistakes. Germany has already agreed to this.

MAX BURGHEIM,
Editor Freie Presse.

Calls Us England's Ally.

From The Chicago Abendpost.

The conditions which the message demands of Germany and the grounds upon which these demands are stated show clearly and convincingly that the United States officially stands wholly and completely on the side of England and her allies. That which has been asserted for months—that the great Republic has been an ally of England in the spirit if not in the main—seems now to be clearly demonstrated.

Hopes Against War.

From The Milwaukee Abendpost.

We do not remember ever having written an article with heavier heart. While we compose it we are under pressure of most cruel situation which an American citizen of German extraction may have to face, that which has always appeared to us not only as direst calamity that could befall us, but also as most heinous crime that could be committed against civilization, has apparently at least become a possibility—a war between the two countries dearest and nearest to our hearts. On one side there is no sentiment more natural and more beautiful than the loving attachment to the country where our cradle stood. * * * On the other side we are American citizens, who, under all conditions, have to conserve their loyalty to the great country of their adoption. * * * We can only express most ardeht hope that the German Government while fully conserving its legitimate rights may yet find in its answer the tone that will spare us the worst.

Loyal to Stars and Stripes.

From the St. Paul Volks-Zeitung.

The stand taken by the President serves notice on our own so-called leaders and the irresponsible jingo press that this country will not go to war without full justification. We are glad to see the President take such a strong stand for upholding the rights of American citizens; we sincerely trust he will demand that hereafter all countries will respect our right to the sacred freedom of the seas. * * *

Whatever the outcome, no matter how great the suffering and mental agony that German-Americans would undergo, there can be no question about their loyalty to the Stars and Stripes.

Won't Alter Situation.

From the Detroit Abendpost.

Considered from a purely ethical standpoint the note deserves high praise. But if the President believes Germany will in consequence of his note be moved to change its methods of warfare, he is mistaken. It would have to be presupposed that England would change its methods, and this would have been done long ago if only our Government had gone ahead toward England with as much energy as it has used at different times toward Germany. Notes will have complete success only when the President learns to treat all foreign Governments alike.

Dictating to Germany.

From The Philadelphia Tageblatt.

The senseless war raging now in Europe has led to a new conflict brought about by the note of our Government demanding the cessation of submarine warfare against mercantile shipping. This demand is something entirely new. It is the first time in history that a neutral power tries to dictate to a belligerent in which way it shall use a legal weapon against its enemies. The United States practically says to Germany, "You may use your submarines against warships but not against merchant vessels because Americans may have taken passage on such ships and get killed."

Such a far-reaching consideration of the rights of neutrals never was asked before. The law of nations certainly does not justify it.

Nevertheless, Germany was willing months ago to do exactly what the United States demanded. The German Government declared in February its willingness to forego the submarine warfare against English trade if England give up its "Order of Council" policy of starving the German civil population, a policy which clearly finds no justification in the law of nations. But England declined. If the Government of the United States had indorsed this just and humane offer with the same energy which is shown in the new note to Germany the new conflict would have been avoided.

The use of submarines in warfare is as yet not regulated by international law. A single power has no right to issue such regulations. The theory that submarines may not be used against merchant vessels is untenantable. The American Government had no right to believe that the German Government will give up its submarine warfare against England for no other reason but to please the United Stateps. Germany cannot help to regard the note as a proof of great partisanship for its enemies. Washington must have known this. The consequences are incalculable. We look into the future with anxiety.

Means Sea Disarmament.

From The Indianapolis German Telegraph Tribune.

We believe it impossible for the German Government to comply with the President's extravagant demand, which amounts to German disarmament on seas. All that will be required to safeguard British armed merchantmen carrying contraband will be to put passengers, preferably Americans, on board, and they will be immune from attack by German submarines. It is a palpable injustice of President Wilson to demand that Germany should lay aside its most effective weapon of attack.

"Shelters British Cowardice."

From The Cincinnati Volksblatt.

The note is disappointing in that it disregards the just complaints of Germany and appears to espouse the cause of Great Britain. We think that the difficulty admits of a satisfactory solution by advising American citizens to travel on American vessels. Unwillingly, the President shelters British cowardice, which tries to make British ships immune to German attacks by taking American passengers aboard.

All Depends Upon Reply.

From The Waechter und Anzeiger, Cleveland, Ohio.

Everything, of course, depends on what the real goal our Government is driving at. If so disposed, a polite answer defining the German viewpoint could certainly be accepted the same as was England's denying answer to the American note protesting the rights of neutral commerce. This would be the wisest and best. But we cannot claim that some of the note's sentences, especially those toward the end, encourage such hopes.

Press's Sacred Duty.

From Die Westliche Post, St. Louis.

For the press of the whole country there is at present but one sacred duty, to leave nothing undone to avert inner strife. That we Americans of German descent with a bleeding heart contemplate the possibility of an armed conflict between the United States and the land of our forefathers, no fair-minded person will condemn us for. There still is hope for an honorable understanding on both sides. May Providence grant that the worst be averted.

Japan as a Peril.

From The Illinois Staats-Zeitung.

The jingo Anglo-American press is doing its utmost to arouse the public to make a demonstration against Germany. Let the Americans consider what war would mean. War on Germany by this country would give Japan free rein to seize the Philippines and become mistress of the Orient.

What has been clamored for several months past, that this great Republic is the ally of England, in fact if not in name, seems to be full established now.

The German-Americans who love our Fatherland and also love our adopted land are in the distressful position of a child who sees its parents fighting. It loves them both and does not wish to take sides with either, but may have to make a hard choice between them.

STAND BY ADOPTED COUNTRY.

Germans of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware of One Mind.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—German-American citizens throughout Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware will support President Wilson even to the extent of taking up arms against Germany should such action become necessary, according to general sentiment as indicated in dispatches from various points throughout these three States. In a few instances opinion among the German-Americans is not altogether in accord with the tone of the President's note, but generally the sentiment favors him and any action he may decide upon.

In several sections of Pennsylvania the citizenship is largely of Teutonic extraction and is more or less closely connected with Germany by ties of relationship. This is particularly true of Lancaster and Cester Counties. Men prominent in business and professional circles, although deploring the possible severence of the hitherto friendly relations existing between the United States and Germany, had no hesitation in expressing their intention of standing by their adopted country in the event of further trouble. These declarations came from such points as Pottstown, Boyertown, Gettysburg, Harrisburg, Reading, Lancaster, and York, Penn.; Newark and Egg Harbor, N. J., and Wilmington, Del.

Philadelphia German-Americans also expressed themselves as firm in their loyalty to the President and his stand in the interest of justice and humanity.

ST. LOUIS GERMANS LOYAL.

They Support the President and Say America Comes First.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, May 14.—Prominent German-American leaders in St. Louis said today that the allegiance of the St. Louis Germans was unswerving and that they were a unit in indorsing President Wilson's handling of the situation that has arisen with Germany.

Charles Nagel, ex-Secretary of Labor and Commerce: "Up to this time I have discussed all questions with entire freedom. I have endeavored on the one hand to present facts that seemed to me to be essential to a fair consideration and that do not appear to have reached the general public. On the other hand I have done what I could to discourage the consideration of any question from any standpoint but that of our common German-American Press Association, publishers of The St. Louis Times and The Westliche Post: "The President of the United States has spoken, and the German-Americans, in common with all other good citizens, accept the word of President Wilson as our supreme law. His handling of an extremely delicate situation has been admirable, and we all trust that he may so continue it that there may be no strife between this country and the fatherland."

Henry Kersting, president of the German-American Alliance: "The statesmanlike note written by President Wilson and transmitted to the German Government deserves to take high rank among American state papers. It deals with a most delicate situation in a diplomatic manner and yet with the most perfect frankness. There are perhaps some of us who might wish that he had said something in condemnation of England's attiude in seeking to starve the non-combatants in Germany. But there are none who have aught but praise for what he has said. The manner in which the so-called German-American citizens receive the President's message shows that as a matter of fact tehre is no such thing as a German-American or any other hyphenated American."

Henry W. Barth, a representative leader in South St. Louis: "We are not neutral. We are for the grand old United States of America against the world. We sympathize with those of our fellow-citizens who are taking sides in this European lunacy, and unless we miss our guess they will feel awful foolish after it is over. Wait for the test, and if we then prove lacking in genuine American patriotism, judge us."

MANY SILENT IN CINCINNATI.

German-Americans Reluctant to Discuss Note—Some Expressions.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, May 14. — Some reluctance was shown by a number of Cincinnati German-Americans today to discuss the note of President Wilson to Germany. Many declared they would rather give the note thorough consideration before expressing an opinion.

Dr. G. Deutsch, college professor: "The President would have been derelist in his duty had he taken the loss of so many American lives lightly. That the vigorous tone of his message was as justifiable as the effort to be conciliatory in form is to be acknowledged. I miss, however, in his message the slightest indication of a desire to use this opportunity for renewing his offers for mediation which he made at the outbreak of the hostilities."

August B. Gorbach, President of the German Day Association: "I sincerely hope that the answer of the German Imperial Government will be such as to eliminate the possibility of conflict between our country and Germany, not because I am under the impression that Germany is doing wrong, but simply because I am at all times against war and am especially against war that would involve the two greatest nations of the world, although I am of the opinion that Germany is only doing what England has forced her to do by trying to starve out women and children."

Attorney John H. Marckworth, son of a former German Consular Agent: "The note of President Wilson was a gem in its contents and its composition, excellent in what he said and the manner in which he said it. I agree with it in every particular."

FOR U. S. A., RIGHT OR WRONG.

Cochems Thus Speaks for German-Americans of Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 14.—Attorney H. F. Cochens said today: "President Wilson's note leaves the field open for an amicable adjustment between the United States and Germany. There is not going to be any war. If there should be, all nationalities in the United States will support the flag, right or wrong, but half of them would have to fight without conscience because they would feel they were fighting in an unjustifiable cause."

Ex-Congressman Thobald Otjen: "In times like this it is best to keep cool and use strong language. There is no need of war, but if war should come we will all be Americans."

HOBSON ACCUSES CUNARD LINE

Asserts Relative Was Warned by Agent, and Is Contradicted.

A widowed cousin of Congressman Richmond Pearson Hobson of Alabama was warned secretly by an agent of the Cunard Line not to take passage on the Lusitania, because the vessel was under orders of the British Admiralty, according to a statement issued yesterday by Congressman Hobson through his brother-in-law, George H. Hull, Jr., 30 Pine Street.

From Torrington, Conn., Mr. Hobson telephoned the statement in which he attacked the British on the ground that they left the Lusitania open to submarine attack to embroil this country. He criticises this Government for failure to ascertain the facts by investigation through a naval court.

"A widowed cousin of mine applied at the New York office of the Cunard Line for passage on the Lusitania," Congressman Hobson said. "The booking agent, an old friend, took her apart and told her that the vessel was acting under Admiralty orders and that she simply must not take passage on it. He pledged her to secrecy until after the trip. This fact brings up pertinent questions.

"Why did not the Cunard Company give to all parties applying for passage the same humane advice its agent, for old friendship's sake, gave to my cousin, instead of loading the vessel down with a full passenger list, including many distinguished Americans, whose loss would necessarily strike the American imagination?

"Knowing that German submarines were operating south of the Irish coast, why did not the British Admiralty, which controlled the Lusitania's movements, order her to use the uninfested route around the north of Ireland?

"Why was the ship, having a speed of twenty-five and a half knots—a very substantial aid to security—ordered by the British Admiralty to slow down to seventeen knots in the danger zone?

"How could a torpedo sink such a ship in twenty minutes? An elementary knowledge of naval architecture would convince any one that such a thing is impossible unless there was a contributing cause inside the vessel, such as open water-tight doors or inside explosion.

"Why was there no protecting convoy in the danger zone?

"Why was there no consort for the great ship's passengers' lives, ready for rescue work?

"Why was there no preparation along the shore? Why was rescue work so slow in reaching the scene?

"Why was it possible, in a smooth sea, within sight of land, in the middle of the day, to lose so many lives?

"Why was the censorship thrown open to all the harrowing details throughout the slow and inexplicable work of the recovery of the bodies, while secrecy was ordered for the Admiralty instructions, under which the ship proceeded to its doom?

"The President's note to Germany is firm and masterful, but its central demand of immunity of American lives on merchant vessels, assumed that these vessels will be unarmed and unresisting toward enemy war vessels and, in virtue of which non-resistence, international law gives them the right of immunity of life.

"The order of the British Admiralty, instructing British merchantmen to attack with the ram German submarines on sight, makes all the British merchant vessels armed and resisting toward German submarines and nullifies their claims in international law to warning and immunity of life from these submarines.

"Maintaining our position toward Germany, as defined by the President's note, without insisting on revocation of the British Admiralty's instruction, is equivalent to demanding that German submarines shall not attack British merchant vessels with American lives on board, while these British vessels are free to attack, and are under orders to attack, German submarines. So Great Britain could maintain a fleet of merchant vessels hunting and destroying German submarines with full immunity. The submarine is the weapon of the gallant and weak against the strong, and cannot and should not be thus abolished.

"There could be no possible motive for Germany wishing to destroy American lives. In fact, Germany sought by extraordinary warning not to destroy American lives, and her commander torpedoed the vessel at a point nearest the shore, where it was presumable there would be ampl tim for th rescue of life.

"On the other hand, there is a full motive for England wishing such a tragedy—the motive for thrusting America into war with Germany. Our own self-respect and our position in history demand, at least, that we should find out the facts by regular, impartial investigation of a naval court. We could not condemn the basest criminal without a fair trial. We cannot pass judgment on a fellow Christian people simply from the charges of their enemy, given by a burning motive to embroil us in war.

"The American people are not afraid of Germany and her allies, nor are they afraid of England and her allies, but we are God-fearing people, afraid of His righteous wrath. We are not too proud to fight, but we are too brave and true knowingly to do wrong."

When Charles P. Sumner, General Agent of the Cunard Line was asked about the statement made by Congressman Hobson, regarding the alleged warning, he replied: "It is absolutely false," and declined to discuss the matter and further.

The officials of the passenger department, who spent the morning on the Lusitania before she sailed at 12:28 P. M. on May 1 for Liverpool, said they were positive that no such information had been given to any person at the pier or in the Cunard office prior to the sailing of the ship.

With regard to the criticism on the seamanship of Captain Turner taking his ship over a well-known course in the war zone and receiving his instructions from the British Admiralty, Mr. Sumner said that the commanders of the Cunard ships navigated their own ships and did not receive their course at sea from the Admiralty or any one else.

PEACE DELEGATES APPROVE.

Agree That the President Will Have Support in Any Exigency.

CLEVELAND, May 14.—Prominent delegates to the World Court Congress read President Wilson's note to Germany with grave concern today. All agreed that whatever contingency arises the Government would receive the firm support of the nation.

"The American public will stand back of the Government in any exigency which arises," said John Hays Hammond, Chairman of the congress.

"In the present situation the solid support of America is at the command of President Wilson, and leaders in social and economic life will undoubtedly be glad to lend him the support of their patriotic counsel.

"I have no doubt that in the absence of Congress, the President is enlisting the counsel of men experienced in international affairs and representing all parties and all sentiments."

Henry Lane Wilson, former Ambassador to Mexico, said:

"The note to Germany is an excellently worded State document. Americans generally desire peace, but not at a sacrifice of honor and dignity, and the note seems to express this attitude.

"If the situation develops to that point where it is impossible to avoid conflict, the American people will stand solidly behind the Government.

"In such an events, ancestry, religion, and politics will have, in my opinion, absolutely no influence on the attitude of our citizenry, 'hyphenated' or otherwise."

Dr. John Wesley Hill of New York, said:

"It is to be hoped that this crisis will be passed without a serious break in the long standing friendship existing between Germany and the United States.

"Self respect and national honor, however, arise above all other considerations, and as President Wilson asserts and defends them, he is asured of the sympathy and support of the American people."

WANAMAKER MAKES APPEAL.

Wants a Million Americans to Send Pledges to Wilson.

An apepal to American citizens whether native or foreign-born, to sign a pledge to support the President is made through an advertisement in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning by John Wanamaker, who says Mr. Wilson "will feel stronger" if a million men and women throughout the country send such an assurance.

When news of the sinking of the Lusitania was flashed across the United States last Saturday Americans simultaneously said, "Stand by the President," according to Mr. Wanamaker, who now urges all, regardless of "race, creed, color or politics" to "nail up the American flag" and stand for it on the principles enunciated in the President's note to Germany.

This pledge, urges Mr. Wanamaker, "cannot hurt anything," but it may help to strengthen the President in his arduous work.

BARNES DENIES MURPHY ALLIANCE

Swears He Never Met the Tammany Boss Except at an Amen Corner Dinner.

BOWERS SCORES BUT ONCE

Extorts Admission That Barnes's Paper Opposed Osborne, Whom He Said He Favored.

JUSTICE CHECKS IVINS

Refuses to Admit Newspaper Evidence Designed to Impugn Colonel Roosevelt's Credibility.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, May 14.—William Barnes, who is suing Theodore Roosevelt in the Supreme Court here for $50,000 for libel, was subjected this afternoon to a severe cross-examination by Colonel Roosevelt's counsel, John M. Bowers, but managed to evade most of the traps the New York lawyer had skillfully prepared. Mr. Bowers will go after Mr. Barnes again on Monday, an adjournment having been taken over the week-end.

For two hours Mr. Bowers questioned the witness, and was able to catch him only on this one important point, namely, that although Mr. Barnes testified that he favored Thomas Mott Osborne, an independent Democrat as a compromise candidate, during the Senatorial deadlock in the 1911 Legislature, he was publishing editorials in his newspaper, The Albany Journal, attacking Mr. Osborne, whom he accused of trying to disrupt the Democratic Party, and praising the Tammany candidate, William F. Sheehan.

Mr. Barnes, in his direct examination, stuck to his testimony that he did not have nearly as many conversations with Colonel Roosevelt as the Colonel has testified, that he did not tell Colonel Roosevelt that influential Democrats had contributed largely to his campaign, and expected to be protected from adverse legislation, and that he did not discuss with the Colonel the so-called Platt issues.

At the close of the session Mr. Bowers had reached the subject of the letter Mr. Barnes had written Colonel Roosevelt in 1899, protesting that the establishment of a State printing concern would ruin him financially, but he did not get far along with the matter before adjournment.

Contradicts Roosevelt's Testimony.

During the morning William M. Ivins, Mr. Barnes's chief counsel, led him over many of the events about which the Colonel and his witnesses had testified, and Mr. Barnes calmly, but emphatically, contradicted many of the Colonel's sworn allegations.

He denied, for instance, that he had ever met William Loeb, Jr., at the office of J. S. Bache while the Senatorial contest of 1911 was in progress, or that he had ever told him that he had a working agreement with Charles F. Murphy. He also denied that he had ever said to Royal W. France of the Brooklyn Young Men's Republican Club that he could defeat the workings of the Direct Primary law by voting the riff-raff of both parties at the polls, thereby making decent citizens disgusted with the law.

Mr. Barnes also emphatically denied that he had ever had any working arrangement with Mr. Murphy. He swore that he had met Mr. Murphy but once in his life, at an Amen Corner dinner, and that he had never seen him or heard from him again.

Of his meeting with Colonel Roosevelt in 1910 at the Manhattan Hotel, Mr. Barnes gave an entirely different account from that of the Colonel. He said the Colonel appealed to him to support him for Temporary Chairman of the State Convention that year; that Colonel Roosevelt told him that he (Barnes) was taking the question of direct nominations entirely too seriously, as it was not a serious matter, and he said he told the Colonel that he could not support him because of the speech Colonel Roosevelt had recently made at Ossawatomie, Kan., on "The New Nationalism."

Mr. Ivins tried to get into the record the proceedings of the Republican National Convention in Chicago in 1912, to show that Colonel Roosevelt was actuated by malice when he made his attack upon Mr. Barnes, because the latter was instrumental in defeating his candidacy for President. Justice William S. Andrews would not let this matter in, however.

Colonel Roosevelt left Syracuse tonight for New York. He received word that his wife, who recently underwent an operation at the Roosevelt Hospital, had returned to her home, and the Colonel decided to spend Saturday at Oyster Bay. He will return here Sunday night.

Barnes-Murphy Alliance Denied.

Before Mr. Barnes took the stand at the morning session, Mr. Ivins called a dozen other witnesses in an attempt to show that Mr. Barnes did not have an alliance with Mr. Murphy during the contest of the election of a United States Senator.

One of these, ex-Senator J. Mayhew Wainwright, of Rye, Westchester County, proved to be a good witness for the Colonel. Mr. Wainwright voted for Colonel Roosevelt for United States Senator in the Republican caucus. Mr. Wainwright said he was present, with Frank H. Platt, at the home of Mr. Barnes, when the caucus was on, and that he told Mr. Barnes of a conversation he had had with Assemblyman Shortt of Richmond County in regard to the possibility of a union between the insurgent Democrats and the Republican legislators. The witness said Mr. Barnes asked him to call up Mr. Shortt and find out what he thought about it. He said Mr. Shortt told him that a man like John D. Kernan of Oneida County would make a good Senator, and that when he repeated the conversation to Mr. Barnes, who stood beside him, Mr. Barnes made this comment:

"No, it won't do. The arrangement was, or has been agreed with the Democrats, that it is to be their fight, and we will keep our hands off."

Mr. Wainwright admitted that Mr. Barnes had not tried in any way to influence his vote. Seven other members of the 1911 Legislature also said that Mr. Barnes did not try to influence them, and then Mr. Barnes was recalled.

Mr. Ivins referred to the testimony of Royal W. France and asked Mr. Barnes if he had ever sent Mr. France a message that he wanted to see him and discuss State politics.

"I do not recall that I sent any such message," replied Mr. Barnes. Asked to relate the substance of his conversation with Mr. France, Mr. Barnes said:

"I told Mr. France that I was opposed to the Primary bill then in force, as I had been opposed to the Hinman-Greene bill or the Cobb compromise bill. I held that the principle of committee designations, with a ratification primary afterward, was a false principle, and would lead to all kinds of difficulties; that it was susceptible of the very operation which he testified that I approved of. I said that any man active in political life in either party or any party could injure a candidate so that he would be handicapped in the race."

"Did you say that direct primaries were subversive of party organizations?"

"I did; they could not fail to be so."

The Manhattan Hotel Conference.

Mr. Ivins took up the Manhattan Hotel conference of Aug. 15, 1910, at which Colonel Roosevelt, William L. Ward, and Mr. Barnes were present. This is what Mr. Barnes said took place:

"Colonel Roosevelt told me that I took the direct nomination matter entirely too seriously—that it was not a serious matter at all. I replied that he was out of the country for several months, and that we (meaning the legislators, the Republican State Committee, and others) had gone through with the programme, and that we intended to fight out the matter at the State Convention; that we intended to make a clear-cut issue, so that we would know just where we stood once for all. I told him that the theory was not in accordance with the platform the party had adopted in 1908, which distinctly declared for the preservation of the convention system. Colonel Roosevelt then stated that he did not understand my action of that morning in voting for Mr. Sherman as my preference for Temporary Chairman. He said he thought I should support him (Colonel Roosevelt) for the position. I told him that I did not do so because I was not entirely clear as to what his ideas were, as I had read his osawatomie speech, in which he put forth his doctrine of the 'New Nationalism,' and that I could not under the circumstances vote for him for Temporary Chairman. Colonel Roosevelt made some references to President Taft, but they are not material."

Mr. Ivins then asked about Colonel Roosevelt's activities in the Republican State Convention at Saratoga. Mr. Barnes said Colonel Roosevelt had performed all of the functions of temporary presiding officer, that he had appointed the various necessary committees, including the one on resolutions, and in making his selections for that committee had not followed the usual custom of selecting the members recommended by the delegates of the various districts.

Mr. Barnes then told of Colonel Roosevelt's activities after Senator Root was made Permanent Chairman. He said the Colonel defended the majority report of the Committee on Resolutions, and that he (Mr. Barnes) made a speech in favor of the minority report. Henry L. Stimson, he said, was nominated for Governor, and the Albany and Columbia County delegates voted for James B. McEwen of Albany.

Mr. Ivins asked the witness when he succeeded Ezra Prentice as Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and Mr. Barnes said it was on Jan. 1, 1911, and that he continued as Chairman until about April 1, 1912, when he was re-elected and served until Sept. 29, 1914.

The 1911 Senatorial Campaign.

Mr. Ivins next took up the election of a United States Senator by the Legislature of 1911. He asked Mr. Barnes to explain his physical condition between January and Feb. 14 of that year. Mr. Barnes replied: "My physical condition was all right up to a day or two after I was elected State Chairman on Jan. 1. After that I was confined to my room by illness until I went to attend the Lincoln Day dinner in New York City on Feb. 14. After that I went to Havana and did not return until March 1."

Q.—During that time the voting on the Senatorship had been in progress? A.—It had.

Q.—Did you at any time prior to your return from Havana speak to any member of the Legislature, or give any of them any advice or instructions as to his vote on the Senatorship? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with any member at any time regarding the election of a United States Senator? A.—No.

Mr. Ivins then asked the witness if he knew Charles F. Murphy, and Mr. Barnes replied:

"I met him once at the Amen Corner dinner."

Q.—Were you introduced to him? A.—I was, or he was introduced to me.

Q.—Who introduced you? A.—I cannot remember.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with Mr. Murphy? A.—No.

Q.—Have you seen or talked with him since? A.—No.

Q.—Have you seen or talked with him on any subject, directly or indirectly, orally, or by agents, or over the telephone, or by telegraph, or in any way? A.—No.

Mr. Ivins then took up the Lincoln Day dinner and asked the witness to tell about his conversation with Colonel Roosevelt there.

"Before the dinner began," said Mr. Barnes, "Colonel Roosevelt and I met. He said he wanted to talk to me, and he asked Mr. Low, who was presiding, to seat me next to him at the table. Mr. Low said he could not do that, as the seats had already been arranged. During the dinner Colonel Roosevelt sent a waiter to me with a message asking me to come and sit next to him, and I did."

"Who was on Colonel Roosevelt's other side?" asked Mr. Ivins.

"Dr. Gunsaulus of Chicago," said Mr. Barnes. "He made the main speech of the evening. I had with me a type-written copy of the letter President Lincoln had sent to Thurlow Weed, as I expected to use it in my speech, and I showed it to Dr. Gunsaulus."

"Did you show it to Colonel Roosevelt?"

"He took it out of my hand," said Mr. Barnes.

"Did you ask him to incorporate it in his speech?"

Roosevelt Pocketed Weed's Letter.

"No, he said it was a most interesting letter and that he would like to show it to Dr. Abbott. He then put it in his pocket."

This started a laugh, which the Justice checked with his gavel.

"Do you know what the newspapers said about it the next morning!" asked Mr. Ivins.

Mr. Bowers objected, and Justice Andrews asked Mr. Ivins what he expected to show.

"I expect to show," said Mr. Ivins, "that he didn't give it to Dr. Abbott at all, but turned it over to the newspapers, and that his action in doing this would bear upon Colonel Roosevelt's credibility."

"I do not think so," said Justice Andrews. "Even supposing you claim that Colonel Roosevelt stole the letter, forged certain sentences in it, and sold it to The New York Tribune, could you prove his lack of credibility by that?"

"I certainly could," said Mr. Ivins.

"You know well enough," said the Court, "that you could not attack the credibility of a witness by any such means. I will not allow the question."

"Well," said Mr. Ivins, "may I put the newspapers in evidence?"

"You can if there is no objection," said Justice Andrews.

"But suppose there is an objection," insisted Mr. Ivins.

"Then I'll sustain it," said the Justice with a laugh.

"Then I won't put it in," said Mr. Ivins, and he dropped the subject.

Barnes Makes a Long Speech.

Mr. Ivins went back to the Senatorial fight of 1911 and asked the witness to tell all about it. Mr. Barnes, in response, made his first long speech of the day. He said:

"Inasmuch as President Taft had called an extra session of Congress for early in April of that year, and that two months of the Legislative session had passed without a Senator being elected to succeed Mr. Depew, and as the opinion had grown distinctly in favor of action of some kind being taken, I felt, as chairman of the State Committee, that it would be wise and proper for me to endeavor to do what I could to bring about the election of a Senator, and of course a Senator who would be an embarrassment to the Democratic party. I asked Mr. Stetson to come to Albany and met him at my house. Mr. Frank H. Platt was also there. We talked about the various members of the Assembly and Senate, all of whom have testified here. Mr. Stetson had brought along a list of four names which Franklin D. Roosevelt and others had given him with the hope that perhaps we would favor them. He asked who, in my opinion, would be the best candidate—Martin H. Glynn, Martin W. Littleton, Thomas Mott Osborne or John D. Kernan. I said that I would not attempt to enter into negotiations of any kind so far as Mr. Glynn was concerned. I told Mr. Stetson that as for Mr. Littleton, I felt that if the Republicans joined with the Democrats and elected him he wouldn't remain independent after the election, but might join hands with Tammany Hall. I also said that I would be perfectly willing to submit the names of Mr. Osborne and Mr. Kernan to the Republican members of the Legislature.

"I then sent for Elon R. Brown to find out if Mr. Osborne would accept. He reported that Mr. Osborne would. I then sent for Mr. Brackett and Mr. Merritt and suggested to them that possibly the deadlock could be broken if the Independent Democrats would combine with the Republicans. He expressed a doubt that it could be done if it came to a test. Mr. Brackett was in favor of doing it, but Mr. Merritt was opposed. They agreed, however, to talk with other members and see if it could be brought about. From time to time they told me how the plan was getting along. The matter hung fire until March 28, when Harold J. Hinman and others came to my house, and we again discussed the proposition. Nothing was done. Next day there was complete confusion owing to the Capitol fire, and the day was unimportant so far as the Senatorial contest was concerned. The next day, March 30, I wrote to both Mr. Brackett and Mr. Merritt, the Republicans respectively of the Senate and Assembly. That night Mr. Sweet came to my house and called up Franklin D. Roosevelt and asked how matters stood. Mr. Roosevelt told him he thought it was going to be fixed up the next morning. I do not recall that I did anything further. Senator O'Gorman was elected by the Democrats."

Mr. Ivins then took up the Chicago National convention of 1912 and Mr. Barnes's relation to it. Mr. Bowers objected, and Mr. Ivins said:

"You do not want my witness to be as loquacious as yours."

Mr. Ivins said that he wished to show by the evidence to be developed the malice of the defendant in publishing the alleged libel. Mr. Ivins tried to get into the record a speech of Henry J. Allen of Kansas, at the convention, but the Court ruled it out, and the matter was dropped.

Barnes Corrects Loeb's Dates.

The alleged Loeb-Barnes interview at the office of J. S. Bache & Co., testified to by Mr. Loeb as having occurred during the Senatorial fight in the Spring of 1911, but by other witnesses present at the luncheon testified to as having taken place two years after the Senatorial fight.

"Do you remember meeting Mr. Loeb at Mr. Bache's office in 1911?" asked Mr. Ivins.

"No," replied the witness. "Mr. Loeb is mistaken. I never met him there in 1911."

"Do you remember ever meeting Mr. Loeb there?"

"Yes, once, but I cannot remember just when it was. I think it was about two or two and a half years ago."

"Subsequent to the election of the United States Senator?"

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Barnes. "It must have been after the election of 1912."

"Did you have any such conversation with Mr. Loeb as he has testified to about an agreement between yourself and Mr. Murphy?"

"I had no such conversation," replied the witness positively.

Mr. Ivins said he was through with the witness, and as Mr. Bowers arose to begin his cross-examination Justice Andrews turned to the jury and said that he wished to explain what evidence had been ruled out of the record.

Justice Explains His Rulings.

The Justice's remarks were in the nature of a charge, as he explained at length just what evidence was left in the record, and what the jurors had to consider. He explained that, as the jurors had been sent from the room every time an important argument had been made, they were entitled to know what had been excluded from the record. He explained that he had held that the article was libelous, per se, because it charged a corrupt alliance between Mr. Barnes, as head of the Republican Party, and Mr. Murphy, as head of the Democratic, with relation to the State Government.

"I used the word 'corrupt,' as I have explained several times to you already, not as meaning necessarily something connected with pecuniary gain. I have also held that the article is libelous per se, because it charges Mr. Barnes with working through an alliance between corrupt business and corrupt politics.

"In justification of that libel—and when I say in justification I mean as tending to prove the truth of the libel itself—I have permitted in evidence, first, testimony with regard to the Senatorial situation in 1911, and I have permitted evidence, which, the defendant claims, is to show that Mr. Murphy and Mr. Barnes improperly—treacherously, perhaps—joined together in regard to the election of a United States Senator. That is all the evidence in the case bearing upon that particular libel.

"I have also permitted evidence in the case upon the question of Mr. Barnes's profiting or working through an alliance between corrupt business and corrupt politics. That evidence consists, in the first place, of alleged admissions made by Mr. Barnes with regard to contributions from members of both political parties under an agreement, expressed or implied, that by reason of these contributions they were to be protected. So far as the legislators and the executive department of the Government were concerned, I permitted evidence, secondly, to be offered with regard to the printing situation in Albany. You will see that that evidence ought to be to justify the charge. The charge was that Mr. Barnes worked through an alliance between corrupt business and corrupt politics."

Justice Andrews explaining that he had ruled out the printing evidence because the defense had not produced enough evidence to justify the jury in finding there was corruption in the printing situation.

Mr. Bowers Cross-Examines.

Mr. Bowers, in beginning his cross-examination, did not assume a brusque manner. He had Mr. Barnes admit that he was responsible for the business and editorial policies of The Albany Journal and then had him admit the identity of several Senatorial editorials bearing on the Senatorial contest of 1911. One, published on Feb. 1, 1911, said that the Republicans were wasting their time voting for Senator Depew, and that it was better to combine on some independent Democrat. Still another praised William F. Sheehan and condemned Edward M. Shepard. It also accused Mr. Osborne of trying to dictate to the Democratic caucus. Still another, printed on Jan. 18, 1911, accused Mr. Osborne of trying to disrupt the Democratic Party.

"Is this the Mr. Osborne whose name was suggested to you by Francis Lynde Stetson?" asked Mr. Bowers.

"The same man," the witness admitted.

Still another editorial said that it was absurd for William F. Sheehan to withdraw from the contest in the interest of harmony, as he had a majority of votes. The editorial contained this statement: "We thought Mr. Murphy a boss worthy of the name. Why should he apologize for Mr. Sheehan's candidacy?"

"Is the Charles F. Murphy referred to here the same one mentioned in the alleged libel?" Mr. Bowers wanted to know.

"The same," replied Mr. Barnes softly.

Another editorial stated the proposition that a member of a political organization who was elected to office and became an insurgent practically obtained his office under false pretences.

"Was that your view during the Senatorial election?" asked Mr. Bowers.

Mr. Barnes studied the ceiling a full minute, and then said:

"Did I believe it? I certainly did."

"You believe that when a man accepts a nomination for any office he takes upon himself the obligation to stand by the principles of the party and to do as the majority determines?"

"As a general principle, of course," said Mr. Barnes.

Mr. Bowers tried to get the witness to admit that a legislator had no right to take independent action on any question that the party had agreed upon, but the witness fenced a while and finally said that the general principle that had been stated before applied.

Mr. Bowers asked the witness about his interview with Elon R. Brown, when Mr. Brown came to him with the request that Mr. Barnes favor the candidacy of John N. Carlisle. The witness said he received requests of a similar nature almost every day. Mr. Bowers thought he had tripped him there and wanted to know if the witness meant that he received requests concerning legislation. Mr. Barnes replied that he received requests regarding many matters.

Mr. Bowers dragged the witness back and forth over the question of his conversations with Colonel Roosevelt after he became Governor. Mr. Barnes would not admit that he knew of any differences between Colonel Roosevelt and Senator Thomas C. Platt.

"On one occasion," the witness said, "Colonel Roosevelt told me that he was going to try and get along with Senator Platt and do his duty as Governor. He seemed to assume that it would be impossible for him to get along with Platt."

Mr. Bowers took the witness back to his conversation with Colonel Roosevelt at Albany, when the subject of campaign contributions was mentioned. Mr. Barnes would admit only that he had told the Colonel that Anthony Brady had contributed largely to the Democratic Party fund, and that this was the cause of the Republicans losing Albany County in 1898.

He admitted that Mr. Brady owned thirty shares of stock of the Albany Journal Company, and that in 1894 Mr. Brady had bought $5,000 of the Journal Company bonds. He said these constituted all the business relations he had ever had with Mr. Brady.

Inquires Into Printing Contracts.

Mr. Bowers then took up the letter Mr. Barnes wrote to Colonel Roosevelt in 1899, in which he said that the establishment of a State printing plant would ruin him financially.

"Why did you object to State printing?" asked Mr. Bowers.

"Because it would be very detrimental to the business of The Albany Journal, as well as to the other printing houses in Albany," replied Mr. Barnes. He also said he opposed it because it meant the raising of prices and wages.

"Did you have any interest in any other printing establishment in Albany besides The Journal at the time?" asked Mr. Bowers.

"None whatever," the witness said.

"How about Lyon?"

"Oh," said the witness, "Mr. Lyon and I were owners of the State printing contract for 1899."

"Who did the printing?"

"The bid was awarded to James A. McCarthy of the Press Knickerbocker."

"How did you come to get it?"

"I bought it."

Mr. Ivins objected to Mr. Bowers going any further into the printing business, and Justice Andrews, without giving a ruling, announced an adjournment until next Monday morning.

VAN NORDEN NOTE SUIT ON.

Executors Want Warner M. to Pay $1,288,000 at Once.

Trial of the suit by Theodore L. and Cora L. Van Norden, as executors of their father, Warner Van Norden against their brother, Warner M. Van Norden, for $1,288,000, which they assert he owes to the estate, was begun yesterday in the Supreme Court before Justice Bijur and a jury. The claim is based upon five notes the defendant is alleged to have given to his father for money advanced.

The late Mr. Van Norden died on Jan. 1, 1914, leaving seven wills. The first was made in 1870 and the last Dec. 19, 1912. The principal change was to cancel notes held by the testator against his son Warner, amounting to about $800,000, and with the understanding that this amount was to be paid to the testator's son Thomas, and to his daughter Cora, whenever Warner found it convenient. Mr. Warner's estate was was about $8,000,000.

The court proceedings yesterday were brief and then the trial went over until Monday. In his answer Warner Van Norden said that four of the notes sued for had been satisfied, and that the fifth, for $400,000, was given by him to his father without consideration. To explain how this came about, he said that he intended leaving the country for an indefinite period, and that his father wanted something which could be used as collateral, in case it became necessary for him to attend to some of his son's busines. He also said that the amount of the notes, for which it was alleged he was indebted to the estate was, therefore, only $800,000, and that this sum, as provided for in his father's will, need only be paid at his convenience. Mr. Van Norden then told of having turned over large amounts of securities to his father and said the late Mr. Van Norden owed him $230,100 on money collected for him.

Exceptions were taken by the plaintiffs to these statements. Theodore L. Van Norden said that the late Mr. Van Norden had frequently aided the defendant when the latter was in financial difficulties and that in the matter of the Van Norden Trust Co. the help he gave to the defendant represented a large amount of money. The exceptions contained the statement that when the defendant was president of the 19th Ward Bank his father had to help him to the amount of $750,000 to keep him out of serious trouble. The exceptions also said upon information and belief, that while the defendant was president of the Van Norden Trust Company he became involved to the extent of about $10,000,000 and that his father saved him from bankruptcy by buying his securities at prices above their market value. The situation of the defendant, it was said, was then so desperate that he promised to refrain from indulging in speculation, but broke his promise and operated through the making to others of loans that were for his own use.

The plaintiffs said that they believed that the defendant, by denying his obligations and liabilities to the estate, had elected not to accept the provisions of his father's will and that this repudiation also released them from regarding that part of the will which permitted the defendant to pay the notes charged against him when he found it convenient. So they insist that he be compelled to pay the notes now.

TRINITY RECTOR SEES WORLD COMMUNION

Dr. Manning Believes After the War There Will Be an Impulse Toward Democracy.

MISSIONARY OPPORTUNITY

Yearly Report of Parish Shows It Owns 359 Dwellings Occupied by 889 Families.

A world brotherhood will be developed by the European war, according to the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, who in the rector's annual statement in the 1914 Year Book and Register of the Parish of Trinity Church, issued yesterday, announces that a deputation will go at the close of the struggle to the churches of Europe and the East to ask their participation in a world conference of Christian communions. After the conflict there will be a "mighty impulse toward democracy," says Dr. Manning.

"The war has drawn together the East and the West, and broken down the old barriers of race to a degree which we cannot yet fully realize," says Dr. Manning. "The situation will offer to the Church a wholly new missionary opportunity. It will be for her to bring the world to the feet of Christ. As never before men will ask: 'To whom shall we go?' The Church must be ready to give the answer, or she may miss the greatest opportunity given to her in the whole course of her history."

Dr. Manning condemns the proposed legislation to tax the property of churches and other public institutions. Trinity Parish, according to the rector, "pays taxes on every bit of the property from which it derives revenue and which is not actually used for religious or charitable work, the same as other parishes." Trinity Parish paid to the city last year $188,337 in addition to what was paid directly by its lessees, while the total amount available from its endowments was $425,952.

Dr. Manning asserts there is probably no other parish in the world which holds proprtry of such great value solely for religious purposes and for the good of the community without deriving any revenue from it, and mentions the two churchyards at Trinity and St. Paul's churches, and Trinity and Cemetery at 155th Street and Broadway. If the city should tax these churchyards, he says, it manifestly would be impossible for the parish to hold them. The church "would be compelled to sell them or to use them for business purposes, and their loss would be incalculable from religious, civic, aesthetic and historic standpoints."

"The popular notion as to the inexhaustible wealth of Trinity Parish again receives a rude shock from the financial statement which shows a large deficit," says Dr. Manning, who explains that while the net income of the parish is large, its work is still larger.

"The free will offerings of the people of the parish during the year amounted to $109,827. Among the items in the long list of expenditures are $305,485, for maintenance of churches and schools, and $26,446 for gifts and allowances to churches and for charities outside the parish. The assessed valuations upon Trinity's productive property upon which taxes are paid is $15,403. Trinity's liability for notes payable has increased $100,000 during the year, and now amounts to $4,000,000, incurred mainly for the erection of new buildings and improvements."

Trinity Corporation own altogether 359 dwelling houses, and at present there are only ninety-seven on the church's land, which do not belong to the corporation, as compared with more than 200 in 1907. Th ehouses owned by the church are occupied by 889 families, an average of 2.5 families in a house. The tenants are for the most part Americans, Irish-Americans, with a few Germans, Italians, Jews, and Scandinavians.

"Not only are no saloons, gambling places, or immoral resorts permitted in the houses owned by Trinity," says the Year Book, "but there are also no rag shops, junk shops, stables, or bakeries."

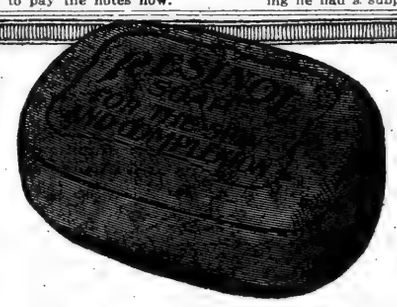
The parish statistics show there were 9,453 public services in the parish during the year, of which 3,038 were celebrations of the Holy Communion. The number of communicants now enrolled is 8,944. There were 399 baptisms, 408 confirmations, and 301 marriages. In the Sunday schools there was an enrollment of 3,182 children and 345 officers and teachers.

SCANLON'S DEFENSE WEAK.

Gives Wrong Date for Subpoena in Effort to Prove Alibi.

Counsel will sum up this morning in the case of Harry Scanlon, on trial before Justice Scudder in the Queens County Supreme Court on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Clara Ellert in Cassidy's Democratic Club house in Long Island City on Dec. 18, 1913. The prisoner's mother and sister testified yesterday that Ellert called on them on April 1, 1914, and offered to have the case settled for $500. Ellert denied this. Scanlon in his own defense said he served a subpoena in Astoria on the day of the alleged assault. The subpoena itself was produced in court and it bore date of Dec. 19.

Policeman Simong testified that on the day of the alleged assault he sat in a rear room of Kleefeld's Hotel in Court Square with Scanlon, Mrs. Ellert, and another woman, and that the same party was together the next day, Dec. 19, when Scanlon left them, saying he had a subpoena to serve.



Keeps complexions clear and healthy

WHEN you wash your face do you realize that it is not enough to remove the dirt—that your skin needs a soothing, healing influence to keep your complexion fresh and free from blemish?

¶ Ordinary toilet soaps do not assert this influence. Many of them contain free alkali which tends to dry the skin and destroy its delicate texture. Even the best of such soaps can only clean, they cannot heal and protect the skin. Resinol Soap, besides being an absolutely pure toilet soap, contains the same soothing, healing, antiseptic balsams as Resinol Ointment.

¶ That is why Resinol Soap does for the skin what cosmetics are supposed to do—it insures not only a clean skin, but a healthy skin, and a fair, clear complexion.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. For free trial, write to Dept. TT, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Four Plead Guilty In Government Oleomargarine Cases.

Four men involved in the swindle of the Government by the sale of oleomargarine by which it asserts it lost $1,500,000 in taxes, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Augustus N. Hand in the Federal District Court. Two of them, officials of the Frederick D. Oetjen Manufacturing Company of 339 Washington Street, Charles H. Noelte, the President, and Frederick D. Oetjen, the Secretary and Treasurer, pleaded guilty to defrauding the Government by the failure to pay the internal revenue tax, while the other two, who were employes, George M. Hermes and Joseph Lichtenstern, admitted that they had manufactured oleomargarine and sold it as butter.

The criminal charge against the defendants takes in their dealings in oleomargarine since 1908, which are said to amount to $3,000,000, and in addition to the criminal proceedings the Government has brought a civil suit against the defendants for the unpaid taxes in the last two years, which amount to $612,000.

The defendants will be brought up for sentence on Monday, May 24, and are liable for both imprisonment and fine. Three other employes were indicted for the sale of oleomargarine as butter. Of these Paul Wittmer and Frank James were too ill to appear in court yesterday, while the third, Harry D. Smith, has died since he was indicted.

TRY MRS. WALTERS MONDAY.

Justice Brady Disregards Prosecution's Plea for Delay.

Supreme Court Justice Brady, in the Bronx, yesterday set Monday as the date for the trial of Mrs. Ida Sniffen Walters, charged with murder of her two children, the son and daughter of Lorlys Elton Rogers. Justice Bartow S. Weeks will preside at the trial.

District Attorney Francis Martin protested against setting the date of the trail for Monday. He said he was not ready and that there was no precedent in putting a woman in Mrs. Walters's condition on trial.

Abraham Levy, counsel for Mrs. Walters, said she demanded to be tried at once, and was in perfect physical condition.

Columbia Seniors Award Prize.

Walter W. Dwyer, a senior at Columbia, was awarded the Charles S. Rolker prize yesterday by unanimous vote of his classmates. The prize is $50 and is given annually to the student who, in the opinion of his fellow senior classmates, has taken the foremost part in student activities during his four years at college. Dwyer was the only candidate and therefore received the prize by unanimous vote.

MONTIMAGNO'S TRIAL BEGUN

Girl May Reveal Plot to Murder Giamari, Tammany Captain.

Details of a plot whereby Michael Giamari, a Tammany Captain in the Second Assembly District, was marked for death will be disclosed before Justice Davis in the Criminal Term of the Supreme Court, where Gaetano Montimagno is on trial for the murder, Assistant District Attorney Brothers asserted in his opening address yesterday. One of the chief witnesses, Mr. Brothers said, would be a young woman, a sweetheart of one of the three men indicted for the murder.

Although Montimagno is charged merely with being the gunman, the prosecution will show the whole conspiracy, which it is alleged was formed by Rocco Carnivale and Frank Fenalmore, two political opponents of the Foley political faction, of which Giamari was a member. Joseph and Antonio La Salle, who were convicted of murder in the second degree for the killing of James Minott, will also tell of the conspiracy, it is asserted.

"The La Salle brothers," Mr. Brothers said, "have made a complete confession. The substance of it is that after the murder of Minott, Joseph La Salle found shelter in Carnivale's home in Brooklyn. The conferences were held there at which the murder was planned. Carnivale even went to the extent of engaging a room in Cherry Street from which Giamari's movements were watched. We will show that Montimagno was instructed how to kill Giamari and was assured that he would be in no danger after the assassination."

Joseph Rose, a truck driver of 130 Allen Street, was the first witness. He testified that he was standing only 100 feet from Giamari when he was shot on March 8, at the corner of Madison and Chestnut Streets. He testified that he heard a shot, saw Giamari fall into the street and then watched Montimagno fire two shots into his back. He said Montimagno went into a saloon and came out a few moments later without an overcoat, which he had been wearing. Rose then called a policeman and had the defendant arrested.

TWO QUACKS PLEAD GUILTY.

Diagnosed Ailments That Investigators Never Suffered From.

Nicholas Metaxas, 59, of 137 East Twenty-sixth Street, and George I. Ironmenes, 36, of 78 West Ninety-second Street, two of the men caught in the police raid upon alleged fake medical museums a month ago, pleaded guilty yesterday in Special Sessions to practicing medicine without a license. They were continued on bail until May 21, when they will be sentenced.

Samuel M. Auerbach, an investigator for the State Labor Department, said that on March 29 he paid Metaxas $3 for a diagnosis for an ailment which he never had. Aristides Geannelis, another investigator, swore to the same effect concerning Ironmenes.

Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, U. S. N., Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, speaking at the annual dinner of the Navy League of the United States, in the Hotel Ansonia last night, gave as his definition of an adequate navy "one that is adequate to defeat the navy of a possible enemy." To spend money in building a navy that is inadequate, he said, amounted to nothing more nor less than throwing money away.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, another speaker, urged upon the people of the coutnry the necessity of drilling it into the heads of Congressmen that the kind of a navy we need was the navy that was recommended by naval officers, men trained as experts in naval affairs, and whose judgment was worthy of being followed by the people.

Dr. Lyman Abbott paid his respects to the pacifists and said that while he respected them as individuals he had no respect for their opinion with reference to national defense. President Wilson's note to Germany Dr. Abbott pronounced one of the noblest and finest documents in American history.

Need More Ships and Men.

General Horace Porter, the President of the league, said that we needed more sailors, more battleships, more submarines, more auxiliaries, more aeroplanes; in fact, more of every type of vessel that was needed to make the American Navy the well grounded adequate arm of defense that the country's needs demanded it should be. The only thing the navy had a superabundance of, said General Porter, was water.

The toastmaster was Colonel Robert M. Thompson, President of the Naval Academy Alumni and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Navy League. He also spoke for greater naval preparedness and he said that if the fleet went out to meet another fleet, which proved to be a superior one, the defeat of that fleet would not rest on the shoulders of the men of the navy, but on the people of the United States who, in sending it to its destruction, would be guilty of murder.

At the speakers table in addition to the speakers already named were Rear Admiral Henry T. Mayo, commanding the First Division, and Rear Admiral Walter McLean, the commander of the Fourth Division of the Atlantic Fleet; Rear Admiral Nathaniel R. Usher, Commandant of the Navy Yard in Brooklyn; Perry Belmont, Acting Mayor George McAneny, Allison V. Armour, S. Stanwood Menken, head of the National Security League, A. B. Humphreys, Isaac N. Seligman, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, and Magistrate William McAdoo, who during the second Cleveland Administration, was Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

General Porter, as President of the league, started the speech making.

"There arises a great lump of patriotic pride," he said, "as we gaze at the fleet in the Hudson, and see from the stern of each the Stars and Stripes. But that navy of which we are so proud is not enough. We want more ships, battleships, destroyers, submarines, colliers, and more men. The only thing the navy has a superabundance of is water. I am glad that no cheap politician has as yet been able to curtail that.

"The only trouble with the pacifists is that they want everything subordinated to treaties. I was a delegate to the Hague Convention and we drafted twelve treaties, and all of them were signed by the leading nations of the world. And every one of those treaties is now a mere 'scrap of paper.'

Navy as Peace Guarantee.

"The navy is the surest guarantee we can have of peace. Logically speaking, the navy is the very greatest force for peace. There has been some criticism with reference to the efforts being made to have military training introduced as a part of the courses in our colleges and schools. A misfit statesman once told me that we needed no army and no navy, as nobody would attack a nation with so many millions of people as we have, and so on. I replied that when the world entered the sheepfold he is never worried about how many sheep there were in that fold.

"We must realize that in the next war defense will be by guns, as in the past, and will not be waged by tongues. What we want is not an unarmed war, but an armed peace."

General Porter then presented Colonel Thompson as the toastmaster of the evening. In the beginning of his speech Colonel Thompson referred to the responsibility of the people in seeing to it that the naval arm of the national defense was adequate and made the statement that if the fleet met defeat because of inadequacy the responsibility would rest on the people.

"Should that day come," he said, "and it may possibly come, the result will not be one whit worse than we deserve. The wise thing to do is to issue $500,000,000 in bonds for the cration of an adequate navy and trust the expenditure of that money to the experts of the navy, and put upon them the great patriotic duty of devising and preparing the navy we ought to have. The navy is only adequate when it is able to hold the navy of any other power for a year or eighteen months, for by that time we will be able to receive with a hospitable grave any enemy who dares attack us, but none will then attack us.

"The lessons of the past year should bring home to the mind of every American the necessity of action, and of immediate action. We have seen solemn treaties disregarded; we have seen every rule and canon of civilized warfare forgotten, and the old rule of 'let him take who has the power and let him keep who can' has again become the rule of action; and in the face of this there are men who will do everything they can to obstruct such preparation as it may be in our power to make; men whose desire to be in the limelight overcomes all feeling of patriotism; men whose minds are so evilly constructed that they can only see evil in the acts of others; men who accept pay to prostute their talents to hold the country defenseless in the midst of dangers which threaten her from all sides.

Dangers from Attack.

"No man can tell the day or hour when we may be called upon to defend ourselves from attack; and this great city of New York which has long been the gateway through which the millions of Europe have come to this country to escape from the overcrowded conditions of their own homes to the comparative ease and plenty of ours, may be the city to be first attacked. Everyone knows that it is today practically defenseless, and at the mercy of any fleet that could overpower ours and might choose to attack it. In twenty-four hours the destruction here would far exceed the cost of such a navy as would make war with us unthinkable and impossible.

"The ordinary mind staggers when it is called upon to think in terms of hundreds of millions but remember that the people of this country paid more for Ford cars last year than they paid for the navy that the fire losses in the country for twelve months amounted to four times as much as the cost of the navy, and that three-fourths of this cost might have been saved by prudent planning.

"Is there no way of stirring up the public spirit? Have the temptations of luxury and of sloth bound our minds and our arms so that we cannot nobly dare and nobly act? I cannot conceive it. I believe that at bottom we are the same men who under the inspiration of a great idea sprang to the defense of their country and gave their all in its defense.

"Today we are asked to give a mere fraction, a mere tithe of our wealth, to the navy, and the representatives in Washington whose business it is to administer the affairs of the nation are recreant to their trust, cowards and traitors, if they fail to do what is necessary to protect us from the evils which are now cursing Europe.

"Is there any one here who believes that the belligerents of Europe would dare act toward us as they have acted had they not known that we were powerless to resent or resist their acts?

"It is idle to talk of the great power of moral ideas. When war is in the air 'the strong man armed keepeth his house, and weak men suffer such pains as men inflamed by rage and anger see fit to visit upon them.

"Let us not be another China. Let us, no matter at what cost, put ourselves in position to maintain our self respect, and the respect of the rest of the world."

Admiral Fletcher, who was presented as "the beau ideal of what an officer should be," was the next speaker. As the Admiral stood up, the crowd cheered for a full minute.

"The officers of the Fleet," he said, "appreciate the good and proper motives of the Navy League in its propoganda of educating the people to make proper preparation for the protection of our interests. Owing to our isolation the necessity of an adequate defense is not brought home to our people as it is to the people across the water. Owing to this condition the people have been dulled into a sense of security, and a certain false sentiment has arisen. We find that our boys are being taught, in some instances, that it is wicked to be a soldier or a sailor, and that it is a crome, almost murder, to fight in a battle. This is something that should be combated.

"We all know that the cheapest navy that we can build is one that is adequate to defeat the navy of any possible enemy. To have an inadequate navy is to throw money away. The fleet now in the Hudson is made up of battleships, destroyers, submarines and auxiliaries and all are needed in the making of a complete fleet. Battleships alone are inadequate for they may become the prey of submarines or mines. The various types are needed, one to protect the other. Next Tuesday the Fleet will pass in review before the President of the United States as it passes out to sea, and when we are gone we of the fleet will ever hold in remembrance the kindness of New York so generously extended to us during this visit."

Reason Not Sufficient.

"I thought," said Dr. Abbott, the next speaker, "that the time was near when an appeal to reason in controversies between nations would be sufficient. I thought that national consciences would be sufficient to settle all questions and that we would have a world supreme court. But the era of peace is farther off than we thought.

"This is a serious time. The first and fundamental function of Government is to protect person and property. If it does not do this it has no right to be called a Government. To protect people and property we have the police for criminals at home, and the army and navy for criminals abroad. If there were no criminals at home we could disarm the police, and if there were none abroad we could disarm our fleet. But there are criminals both at home and abroad. If the individual is not afforded protection by Government at home it is his duty to arm himself. If he is not protected by the navy abroad then he must go armed and every merchantship must be in a position to fight with pirates. I respect the people who argue for disarmament. But I do not respect their opinions. Disarmament would land us in international anarchy.

"My voice is not for war. We do not want war. But we want to be prepared to meet war if it comes upon us. I believe that the Presidential note which has just been transmitted to Germany will rank among the best and noblest messages from the occupants of the White House in our history. I hope the message will not prove in vain.

"If the story of the Lusitania should be allowed to work through the censorship of the German press to the hearts and minds of the German people, whom we honor and love, although we abhor the power that oppresses them and hopes to oppress the world, then the note will not have been in vain. If not, what then? War! If we can find no other way to protect our ships I hope that we shall find it this way. That we ask the nations of the world to joint us in opposing that nation which tramples under foot international law and the rights of man. We must plant the seed of international brotherhood with swords at our sides. We must have an adequate army and navy to fulfill our duty to ourselves and to the world. When law is enforced by the common conscience of mankind, then we may beat our swords into plowshares and our spears into pruning hooks. Those who would do it before are working not for peace, but for universal chronic war."

Appeal to Congressmen.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, who spoke next, said that he could say with absolute sincerity that the Navy League was on the threshold of a usefulness greater than any it had ever been called upon to perform in its history.

"If we believe," said he, "in the system of American representative Government we must hold our representatives in Congress responsible for their acts in Congress. If we believe that Congress should provide an adequate means of defense we should appeal to our Representative in Congress to give us that defense. We are confronted with the fact that the people do not realize what adequate national defense means. They must be educated to know what it does mean.

"As a boy I was taught that we won a glorious victory in the War of 18.2 and that our cause was marred by no defeats. Yet I have since learned that the only reason we escaped with a whole skin was due to the grace of God and the genius of Napoleon Bonaparte. This is the third time in my memory when the people have taken a real interest in the navy. The first was when as a boy I saw the White Squadron in New York. The second was the Spanish war.

"When we employ a lawyer we trust him to handle our case. When we employ a naval officer let us trust to his judgment. I have come in contact with many classes of people in my life, but I want to say that as a body of clean, right thinking, honorable men, I have never known a body to equal the officers of the United States Navy.

A PLEA FOR UNIVERSAL PEACE

WAR AND WORLD GOVERNMENT

By Dr. FRANK CRANE

Author of "Footnotes to Life," etc.

Cloth, $1.00 net

This new volume includes Dr. Crane's editorials upon the subject of war. At first only a protest against the immense stupidity of war, its cruelty and causelessness, his articles gradually take on a more positive tone, becoming an ardent plea for World Government.

ENJOYABLE NOVELS

MERRY—ANDREW

By KEBLE HOWARD

Author of "Lord London." etc.

Cloth, $1.35 net

The spirit of Dickens seems to pervade the story of this young college man's career in London, with its wolves in sheep's clothing, and its divers temptations. It is the constancy of the girl at home and the proverbial "silver spoon" that bring the hero at last to his desired goal.

The Highgrader

By William MacLeod Raine

A Colorado mining story of rare and vivid charm. Jack Kilmeny, though a man of high ideals, vigorously defends the stealing of high-grade ore by the workmen on the score of simple justice, arguing that the men do not receive a fair return for their labor. The devotion of the heroine to the man whose need of her was so poignant crowns a clean and inspiring love-story. Illustrated. Net $1.25. Postage 10c.

28 MORE BODIES FROM LOST LINER

PICKED UP OFF FASTNET

A. L. Hopkins, Head of Shipbuilding Company, and J. F. Stackhouse Identified.

MORE NEW YORKERS FOUND

But the Bodies of A. G. Vanderbilt and Other Well-Known Americans Are Still Missing.

QUEENSTOWN, May 14.—A handful of bereaved persons tonight by candle light at the Cunard pier endeavored to identify twenty-eight bodies of victims of the Lusitania disaster, which were landed here after dark by a British torpedo boat and the tug Stormcock. Several of the bodies were identified, among them those of Commander J. Foster Stackhouse, the British explorer, and A. L. Hopkins, President of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company.

The bodies of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Elbert Hubbard, and other well known Americans, who perished when the steamer was torpedoed, were not among the twenty-eight.

A baby less than three months old was among the bodies brought in. Another body was that of a beautiful young woman, who wedding ring showed that she had been married only two days before the Lusitania sailed. Letters found on her body indicated that her maiden name was Anna Hill and that she resided at 18 Fordham Avenue, Toronto.

QUEENSTOWN, May 14.—The bodies of twenty-eight victims of the Lusitania disaster reached here today. A British torpedo boat unexpectedly put in bringing the bodies of twelve victims of the disaster which had been picked up between fifteen and twenty miles southwest of Fastnet. The bodies were those of seven men, four women and one boy.

The body of A. L. Hopkins, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, was quickly identified, as were the bodies of one of the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Crompton of Philadelphia, Mrs. William Crichton of New York, Surgeon J. F. McDermott of the Lusitania and George Tiberghien, a Greek saloon passenger. Three of the bodies appear to be those of members of the crew of the Lusitania.

The tug Stormcock followed the torpedo boat in, bringing sixteen more bodies—eleven men, four women and one boy. Among the first of these to be identified was Robert Edward Dearbergh, of 117 West Fifty-eighth Street, New York, and G. L. P. Vernon, of London and New York.

Others identified were Commander J. Foster Stackhouse, the explorer; William Colbert, of 4 West Eighteenth Street, New York; R. A. Brund of Montclair, N. J.; M. N. Pappadopoulo, a Greek whose life was saved, and Martin Van Straaten of London.

The American Consulate has taken charge of a body believed to be that of Mrs. Annie B. Taylor of Dorchester, Mass., who was a second cabin passenger on the Lusitania.

The body of Mrs. J. M. Young of Hamilton, Ont., has been identified among the Lusitania's dead. It is being embalmed, and will be sent back to Hamilton.

F. B. TESSON AND WIFE LOST.

A notice of the death of Frank B. Tesson, who with his wife, Mrs. Alice Tesson, was lost in the Lusitania disaster, appears in THE TIMES this morning. Mr. Tesson, whose home was at 503 Riverside Drive, booked passage at the last moment, intending to go to Paris on a buying trip for the Wanamaker stores. Neither his body nor the body of his wife has been recovered.

Mr. Tesson was 47 years old and was born at Lacrosse, Wis. He had been with John Wanamaker for fifteen years, and for the last seven years had been head of the shoe department of the New York store. Mr. Tesson was a charter member and Vice President of the Wanaker Board of Trade and Vice President and Treasurer of the Anastomick Footwear Company of 116 East Thirteenth Street.

Committee Says Immediate Relief Is Necessary.

The Mayor's Committee for the relief of the Lusitania sufferers reported yesterday that it had now received $10,252.50. That is $3,552.50 more than the contributions already published. These have been sent in as a response to a letter issued by the committee, in which it is stated: "The committee has met and carefully considered all the information obtainable up to this time, and is clear in its opinion that the urgency of the situation is very real. In a case of this kind, of course, it is not only relief, but immediate relief, that is requisite." The letter was signed by Cleveland H. Dodge, Chairman.

CAN'T MOURN FOR LUSITANIA.

German Paper Holds That Warning Was Enough.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 14.—The Times says German newspapers continue their remarkable defense of the sinking of the Lusitania. The Münchner Neuste Nachrichten, remembering the Kaiser's feelings after the destruction of Louvian, declares: "It was doubtless with a bleeding heart that the German submarine commander fired his murderous weapon."

Count Reventlow says that the warning advertised by Count von Bernstorff showed quite unparalleled humanity. Never, he declared, in any war did a belligerent show such scruples, totally inconsistent with his own military interests.

The Hamburger Nachrichten says: "We Germans conduct no war against peaceful human beings, least of all against women and children. All the world knows how our brave soldiers in the enemy's country have shared their last loaf with women and babes; how they have given support to women and played with children.

"But we will not be hypocrites and mourn over the disaster. Germany took all care while there was still time and gave insistent warnings against voyaging in this auxiliary cruiser. All the most distinguished newspapers of the United States published the great, column wide advertisements of the German Ambassador. Nothing but deliberate blindness or unbridled pride could run such a risk and drag even women and children into it. It is too late now; complaints no longer avail."

SAILINGS FOR WAR ZONE.

The Cunarder Etonian Leaves Boston with a Large Cargo.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 14.—The Cunard liner Etonian left this port today for Liverpool filled to her capacity with grain, food products, and general merchandise. Captain Davies, it is understood, will select his own route. Double watches will be maintained, and the Etonian's arrival will probably be timed so that she will pass the danger zone at night.

Special to The New York Times.

The Djursland, Danish, for Esbjerg, with a cargo of 32,862 sacks of cottonseed cake, valued at $134,680.

The Nordamerika, Danish, for Valencia, with a cargo of 162,000 bushels of wheat, valued at $267,300.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 14.—The only ship to clear from here today was the Larchmore, British, for Liverpool, with a cargo of grain.

LUSITANIA INQUIRY OPENS NEXT WEEK

Many Survivors, Including Americans, Offer to Testify Before Lord Mersey.

A PART MAY BE SECRET

Witnesses Will Show Ship Was Not Armed or Convoyed—Criticism of Crew and Equipment.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 14.—Every phase of the sinking of the Lusitania will be investigated by the Court of Inquiry of which Lord Mersey is the head. The Court will begin its hearing by the end of next week. Already fifty survivors have offered themselves as witnesses, one-third of whom are Americans now in London.

The Board of Trade under which the inquiry will be prosecuted has depositions now of thirty prospective witnesses who go into such details as the fact that the Lusitania was not armed and was not convoyed by British craft; others tell of the failure to have drills on the Lusitania to show the use of life preservers and lifeboats. Depositions of Americans unable to stay in London will be read at the hearing. It is expected that the inquiry will take at least two weeks and that a part of the proceedings which may turn on the measures taken by the Admiralty will be secret.

Lord Mersey's associates will probably be members of the Board of Trade. He will be the dominating figure and general confidence is expressed here as to his ability, owing to his previous experience.

Among witnesses to appear before the Court or give deposition is Uno Merriheina of West 134th Street, New York, a traveling agent for an American automobile company, who had a thrilling experience. Mr. Merriheina said one point to be made was the fact that the Lusitania's life rafts were fastened tight to the decks and could not be loosened for use of the passengers.

"On the entire trip over," he said, "there was no drill to show passengers how to use the life preservers or to get into the boats. No one knew how to adjust life preservers except by instinct. The ship's crew didn't seem to know how to get the lifeboats out. I talked with several of the crew on the way over and they said it was their first trip with the Lusitania and that no instructions had been given as to what to do in the event the Lusitania was torpedoed. The fact is there was the utmost confidence among the crew that nothing could ever happen to the Lusitania. I asked what the crew expected to do if the ship was torpedoed and got shrugs of shoulders.

"When the Lusitania was torpedoed I was in the dining saloon. I rushed to the deck to find the utmost confusion, the crew apparently not knowing what to do. Several other passengers with myself saw a dozen or more life rafts on deck and tried to get them off, but every one was screwed down tight by huge bolts capped with nuts that had rusted into the bolts. I tried to unscrew the nuts to loose the rafts without avail. Not one raft so far as I know got off. None of the crew appeared to know how to release them. My idea is that for the safety of future passengers explicit instructions ought to be given on every liner between America and England at this time so everyone will know what to do if an emergency comes."

Representatives of the American embassy will attend the inquiry and report to Washington.

EXPECT NO WIRELESS FROM TRANSYLVANIA

First News Likely to Come Upon Her Arrival at Liverpool or Glasgow.

On account of anxiety for the safety of relatives or friends traveling on steamships nearing the war zone the Cunard agents yesterday received numerous telephone calls regarding the Transylvania, which sailed Friday, May 7, with 879 passengers. In reply to these inquiries the agents said: "We do not expect to hear from the Captain of the Transylvania until her arrival at Liverpool or Glasgow, which will not be before Sunday or Monday. The Captain, John Black, left New York with instructions to proceed to Liverpool first and then to Glasgow. If he should deem it advisable to go around the North of Ireland to Glasgow direct we should not hear of the change until the ship arrived at the port; in case of sudden change passengers would be sent to Liverpool by train. It has been the custom of the Cunard Captains to send a wireless to Liverpool when they get in touch with the Irish coast, but this rule has been abandoned since the Lusitania was sunk."

The agents of the American Line said the Philadelphia would arrive off the Irish coast tonight, but they felt no anxiety, as their vessels never had carried any contraband, a fact will known to the German Government officials on this side of the water. The Philadelphia is due at Liverpool Sunday afternoon.

Steamships sailing today for the war zone are: St. Louis, (American,) for Liverpool; Penrose, (British,) for Bordeaux; Kansas City, (British,) for Bristol; Saxonia, (British,) for Liverpool, and Galileo, (British,) for Hull.

525 SAIL ON CYMRIC, BUT NO AMERICANS

White Star Liner Carries Only British Subjects and Russians to Liverpool.

GREAT CROWD AT THE PIER

Drills in Life Saving to be Held on Board—Cargo of Arms and Other Contraband Articles.

The White Star liner Cymric sailed at 12:30 P. M. yesterday for Liverpool, with 98 cabin and 427 third-class passengers. About 1,000 persons went to the pier to see their relatives and friends start on the voyage, which leads through the "war zone." With the exception of seventeen Russians in the steerage, all the persons were British subjects.

Scores of photographers and moving-picture operators took pictures of the scenes on the decks and the pier before the gangaway was lowered. Captain F. E. Beadnell, who arrived at 12:15 o'clock from the Custom House, received quite an ovation from the officials of the line and friends, who shook his hand and wished him good luck. Richard Edwards, the purser, formerly of the Baltic, received so much advice "to take care of himself" that he looked very thoughtful as the Cymric started to move out. As the people on the pier waved some of the crew sitting on deck forward started the old seafaring song, "Fear Not, But Trust in Providence, Wherever You May Be."

The officials of the White Star Line took every precaution to see that the life preservers, boats, and all life-saving apparatus was in first-class condition and good working order before the Cymric sailed. Several wooden life rafts were bought and put on board yesterday morning.

After the Cymric gets outside Sandy Hook printed notices will be posted in all parts of the ship, informing the passengers that a daily lifeboat drill will take place in which they are asked to take part. They will be taught how to adjust the life belts properly and assigned to seats in the lifeboats, which will be swung out from the davits, and a certain number will be lowered a few feet to see that the blocks and falls are all in working order.

It is understood that the object of this drill is to do away with the lack of interest shown by passengers on board ship regarding the measures to be taken in case of an accident. Steamship Captains and officers assert that hundreds of lives would be saved in emergencies if passengers would put on their life belts before they go on deck to see what has happened.

In addition to 15,000 tons of general cargo the Cymric carried 140 motor trucks and a quantity of munitions of war. The ship's manifest, filed at the Custom House and sworn to by Captain F. E. Beadnell an hour before sailing, contained the following articles:

156	Coils of sheet copper.
98	Reels of copper wire.
4,301	Cases of cartridges.
3	Cases of pistols.
1,750	Shells.
1,152	Empty projectiles.
10	Cases of firearms.
36	Cases of percussion fuses.
6,505	Cases sheet brass.
698	Cases of brass rods.
2,042	Plates of spelter.
1,562	Cathodes.

It was explained that the projectiles shipped on the Cymric were harmless because the tubes containing the black powder at the pointed ends are hermetically sealed and cannot be exploded until the fuse is inserted. The fuses were shipped in separate cases.

Ammunition and arms are carried by all British ships from New York as merchandise in the ordinary business of the steamship companies as common carriers. It is a fact that in the event of any British steamship company refusing to take these contraband goods on board it could be compelled to do so by the Admiralty or cease to fly the British ensign.

THE ADRIATIC SAILS.

White Star Liner Is Bringing 309 Passengers for This Port.

The agents of the White Star Line received a cable message from Liverpool yesterday announcing that the liner Adriatic had left that port at 2 o'clock in the afternoon for New York with forty-three first, 101 second class and 165 third class passengers and mails.

She had been reported as having sailed from Liverpool on Wednesday evening, according to schedule, but it seems she was delayed by a strike of the dockers.

"Stand by the President"

This is what a million people said on Saturday morning last when they woke up and found that the Lusitania had gone down.

Whatever race, creed, color or politics we belong to, every native-born citizen, every naturalized citizen, every person seeking for naturalization, must nail up the American flag and take his stand for it on the basis of the President's message to the world, making plain our position in the forefront of civilization, for these principles:

1—Opposing the disposition and action of any nation, under any circumstances, to attempt to control the waters of any of the oceans in denial of the equal rights of the United States.

2—Insisting upon the disavowal, as an adopted method of war, of such acts as the sinking of any merchant ships carrying American citizens in the pursuit of business or happiness.

3—Insisting upon adequate reparation for American lives lost and American property destroyed.

4—Demanding that submarine warfare on merchant shipping shall cease.

It is in these strong terms that the President has spoken, and the President speaks for the Nation.

In This Great Hour of Our Nation's History

we certainly mean to stand by the President and to this end we make the respectful suggestion, under the shadow of the Old Hall where the Declaration of Independence was signed, that the last half of the statement following this shall be signed and sent to the executive of the Nation at Washington. He will feel stronger if a million men and women of the cities, towns and villages all over the United States send him the assurance of their support. It cannot hurt anything, and it may help to strengthen him in his arduous work.

Do it today!

A Pledge of Support to the President

We, American citizens, whether native or foreign born, without regard to political party, race, creed or religion, do hereby pledge ourselves, in the words of the Declaration of Independence, "Our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor," to support the President of the United States, in any decision or action he may find it necessary to take in the present state of National and International affairs, to uphold the honor of our country, in defense of and for the protection of, the lives of all or any of our fellow citizens, and hereby we give our signatures.

FRENCH OFFENSIVE IS MAINTAINED

Germans Lose Strong Positions Near Angres, Southwest of Lens.

BRITISH ASSAULTS FAIL

Germans Repulse an Attack Near Ypres and Advance on the Menin-Ypres Road.

LONDON, May 14.—The advance of the French in the Lens-Arras region has been impeded by torrential rains. Nevertheless, Paris reports that the French offensive has been continued today by the capture of strong German positions southeast of Angres, while progress has been made on the southern and eastern slopes of the Loretto hills, and at Neuville St. Vaast.

The British have again attacked unsuccessfully near Ypres, and have sustained heavy casualties, according to the German official report, which also records gains in the direction of Hooge, in the same general region.

The communiqués of the French War Office follow:

(Night Report)—To the north of Arras the condition of the ground has rendered operations difficult. Our offensive has, however, been continued.

At the southeast of Angres we have attacked from both sides of the road of Aix Noulette-Souchez, and taken to the north of this road a strong German trench extending on a front of one kilometer (about two-thirds of a mile) to the south of the road, a forest which has been organized for defense, and behind this forest a trench of the second line.

Found 400 German Dead.

We have found on the ground in this vicinity 400 Germans who were killed.

More to the south we have continued the clearing of the slopes east and south of Nôtre Dame de Lorette.

We have taken additional houses at Neuville St. Vaast.

According to the testimony of prisoners, our artillery has inflicted extremely heavy losses on the enemy.

The number of officers made prisoners since Sunday is about one hundred. The number of guns captured is twenty, including eight heavy ones. In addition we have taken one hundred machine guns and bomb throwers.

The Germans made an attack upon us this morning at the wood of Ailly. They obtained a momentary footing in our first line, but were forced back by a counter-attack. We captured about one hundred prisoners.

The day has been quiet on the other parts of the front.

French Maintain Gains Near Arras.

(Afternoon Report)—It has been raining without stop since yesterday morning. Last night, in spite of the handicap of a difficult and slippery terrain, we occupied several German trenches to the southwest of Souchez, and we have maintained on the rest of the front, from Loos to Arras, all the gains recently made by us.

In the Valley of the Aisne we yesterday destroyed four German blockhouses and leveled several trenches.

Repulses of various allied attacks are thus described in the official statement issued in Berlin:

Strong British attacks against our newly acquired front at Ypres yesterday failed with heavy losses to the enemy. On the Menin-Ypres highroad we gained further territory in the direction of Hooge.

In the district southwest of Lille the enemy attacked yesterday in only a few places, and then after heavy preparatory artillery fire. All these attacks were repulsed.

In the Loretta hills and to the north of Arras the day passed comparatively quietly, and there were no important attacks by the enemy.

Carency Losses 700, Berlin Says.

Our losses during the capture of Carency by the enemy amounted to between 600 and 700 men.

A further attempt on the part of the enemy to recapture from us a section of the trench we had taken to the northwest of Berry-au-Bac again resulted in failure.

Between the Meuse and the Moselle the advance of the enemy in the forest of Le Prêtre broke down in front of our positions under our fire.

The occupants of a French biplane, which was forced to land at Hagenou, were captured.

PRAISE FOR MISS ADDAMS.

Witness for Peace Who Yet Will Be Heard, Says Daily News.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, May 15.—In an editorial headed "A Witness for Peace," The Daily News says:

"Courage and faith never have been wanting in the noble career of Miss Jane Addams, and they rarely have been more conspicuously displayed than in the peace campaign, of which Thursday night's meeting in Kingsway Hall was an incident. It is open even to those who hate way sincerely, as Miss Addams does, to doubt whether at the present moment it is possible to talk of peace to advantage, yet the value in these dark days of a witness of Miss Addams's sincerity and conviction is not to be questioned, and she has at least the consolation of knowing that in the long run the victory of the ideas of which she seems now to be so lonely a champion is assured. In the heat of battle of nations they may be scouted by almost all; when all is done a far sadder and, let us hope, a wiser world will turn again to international co-operation as the real hope of civilization."

TRIED TO STOP NAVY SHIP.

British Cruiser Apparently Mistook Collier Jupiter for a Merchantman.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 14.—Apparently the British warship patrol along the New England coast is being rigidly maintained. In the early hours of last Thursday the United States naval collier Jupiter, in command of Lieut. Commander Charles S. Kempff, with a cargo of coal for the U. S. S. Brooklyn in Narragansett Bay, while making the passage from New York, and when a short distance off this port, was signalled to stop by a British cruiser, which a short distance off steamed rapidly toward her. The Jupiter disregarded the signal, whereupon the speed of the Britisher was increased, and a blank shot was fired across the bows of the collier. Then the searchlights of the cruiser were played upon the Jupiter, after which the English warship steamed away.

A report of the occurrence was forwarded to the Navy Department.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—So far as could be ascertained from official circles tonight no report has been received by the Navy Department on the attempt of a British cruiser to stop the collier Jupiter. The Jupiter reached Newport yesterday. She might easily be mistaken for a merchant vessel.

BRITISH SEIZE CARGO.

Hold Up Swedish Steamer Augusta from New York with Nickel Plate.

LONDON, May 14.—The Swedish steamer Augusta, from New York April 19 for Copenhagen, by way of Kirkwall, was diverted by the British authorities to Leith, Scotland.

There she was ordered to discharge fifty tons of nickel plate, which is now in the hands of a prize court.

KING OF ITALY RETAINS CABINET

Cabinet produced an extraordinary sensation throughout the country. At Genoa, Florence, Naples, Palermo, and elsewhere, as well as in Rome, its receipt was followed by angry demonstrations.

In Rome a riotous crowd made its way this morning to the Piazza Montecitorio, where the Chamber of Deputies is situated, and forced an entrance into the building by smashing the windows. The outbreak spread, assuming almost a revolutionary character, and the entire city has been occupied by the military.

Dispatches from Milan says that the moment the news of the Government's resignation became known the popular indignation began to show itself. A large crowd rushed through the city, and there were frequent conflicts between groups holding opposing political opinions, some of whom resorted to firearms. The police made strenuous efforts to maintain order, but the troops had to be called out to help them.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 14.—The news of the resignation of the Cabinet came like a thunderbolt upon the whole of Italy and caused an immense revulsion of feeling. Wrathful demonstrations have occurred at many points, and it is feared that the lives of former Premier Giolitti and his friends are in danger.

The greater portion of citizens here deeply deplore that the leading politicians are unable at this supreme juncture to refrain from party quarrels.

The fact that so many Senators and Deputies accepted the hospitality of Prince von Bulow when it was known that his mission here had for its chief object the influencing of the leaders of public opinion is strongly condtmned.

ITALIAN BANKER WARNED.

Told Not to Return to Italy on British or Italian Ship.

An Italian banker who arrived in New York recently on a financial mission for his Government received a cablegram from Rome yesterday instructing him to return on a Spanish steamship via Lisbon and Cadiz. The dispatch also warned him not to travel on a British or Italian steamship to the Mediterranean via the Straits of Gibraltar.

In discussing his cablegram with one of the steamship agents yesterday the banker said that it probably referred to the chances of Italy going to war with Austria and also might indicate that the Germans had shipped their submarines by rail through Austria to Trieste and intended to start their commerce-destroying campaign on the Mediterranean Sea.

URGE PUNISHMENT OF GERMAN RULERS

British Public Men Demand That Their Personal Responsibility Be Proclaimed.

ALIENS ASK OUR AID

Internment Preferred to Deportation—Many Give Themselves Up, but Camps Are Not Ready.

LONDON, May 14.—The riots which occurred earlier in the week have given place to condemnation by public men of the German Emperor and his advisers who are charged with the responsibility for the actions which have aroused public anger. The demand is made that the British Government publicly proclaims the personal responsibility of members of the German Government for "the outrages perpetrated by German officers or their agents during the present war."

A resolution in this sense was moved at a public meeting in Chelsea tonight by Lord Charles Beresford and was seconded by Lord Robert Cecil. It was unanimously passed.

Lord Charles Beresford urged that all German property in the British Empire be confiscated, and that all rich Germans, whether naturalized or not, be interned until British "prisoners in Germany are treated as honorable prisoners of war." Lord Robert Cecil said he had been told that Emperor William did not approve of what had been done, but the speaker declared that if the German Emperor disapproved and allowed these things to go on he was ten times more guilty and must be punished; this must be one condition of any peace.

Lewis Harcourt, British Secretary of State for the Colonies, speaking at a meeting on the waterfront tonight said that Germany "stood at the bar of the world a naked and unashamed monster, simulating humanity, but in fact a reversion to prehistoric barbarism."

Germans and Austrians again besieged the American Consulate today, but instead of demanding protection for themselves and their property, they sought the aid of the American officials to prevent their being repatriated in consequence of the decision of the Government announced yesterday by Premier Asquith. Most of the callers at the Consulate were either over or under internment age. Many were women with their children.

These persons explained that for years their homes had been in this country and that their deportation to Germany or Austria would be regarded by them as a greater calamity than internment here.

The American Consul General, Robert P. Skinner, took their statements, but was unable to promise any action in their behalf further than the transmission of their requests to the proper authorities.

Eighty Germans and Austrians were stricken from the membership roll of the Iron and Steel Institute today by unanimous vote of a meeting held in London.

Large numbers of persons affected by the Government's plan are surrendering themselves hourly rather than await arrest under the internment order. Their immediate disposition is puzzling the police, as the camps in which they are to be placed are not yet ready for use.

BATHED UNDER SHELL FIRE.

Turkish Guns Disregarded by Australians at the Dardanelles.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LEMNOS, (via Kavala,) May 9, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—Australian troops are playing football on the Gallipoli Peninsula to keep themselves in form.

The Captain of a vessel which has just returned from the straits gives some idea of the firm foothold the Allies have gained as well as of the spirit of the troops.

"Last Thursday," he says, "after a fierce attack by the Turks, a body of Australians was driven from the advanced trenches and forced to retire to the shore. As soon as the party had dug itself in securely in this new position the men who could be spared calmly undressed and took a long-desired dip in the sea at the point where the cliffs stop. The enemy continued to pepper the trenches freely, but by working in relays every man succeeded in getting a bath, which they all tremendously enjoyed."

DIDN'T DEFEND WINDHOEK.

German Policy in South Africa Merely to Keep British Troops There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAPE TOWN, May 14, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The announcement that the Union forces had occupied Windhoek without resistance occasioned little surprise here. The actual campaign has been in progress only a little more than two months, but has been brilliantly conducted by Generals Botha and Smuts in the main operations and by General van de Venter in an auxiliary movement from the southeast.

It has long been evident that the Germans were outgeneraled as well as outnumbered, from the fact that they abandoned position after position admirably adapted by nature and prepared at great labor and expense for a stubborn defensive. The ingenuity displayed by the Germans in the use of land mines and poison was equalled only by the extarordinarily good fortune of the Union troops in escaping the traps.

In one instance a large artillery force and a considerable number of mounted troops crossed a pass near Aus, where a mine had been laid, before it was exploded by the spare mules following the column, the casualties being almost nil.

On entering Aus, a trooper found a bottle of whisky apparently intact. His more cautious comrades persuaded him not to drink it, and when the bottle was opened its contents were found to have been poisoned, the original cork and capsule having been replaced so as to make it appear that it had not been tampered with.

Across a waterless desert and through mountains for hundreds of miles, the railway had to be rebuilt, as the main forces proceeded.

All the Union forces behaved magnificently in a most arduous, but unexciting campaign.

The excuse given to the German population for the policy almost amounting to non-resistance, so far as real military measures are concerned, is apparently that the Union's conquest will be nullified by the success of Germany in Europe. The most remarkable stories are told of news supposedly received at Windhoek from Europe by wireless. A captured doctor firmly believed that the German fleet commanded the sea, and that all communication between England and South Africa had been cut, and he was astounded when a London newspaper, barely a month old, was shown to him.

It is now believed that the German forces have retired northward. Probably their object is merely the prolongation of the campaign in the southwest as long as possible to prevent the reduction of the Union forces, which would release thousands of South Africans who are anxious to fight in Europe.

MOB CLEARS TOWN OF GERMAN SHOPS

Serious Disturbances in Tottenham, England—Better Order in London.

MANY ALIENS SURRENDER

Sent to Ships—Public Men Urge Personal Responsibility for German Rulers.

LONDON, Saturday, May 15.—Although the country has been calmed by the Government's decision to deal with aliens, considerable sporadic anti-German rioting again took place yesterday. In some parts of London last night, Peckham, Nunhead and Tottenham among them, a number of German shops were attacked. Less pressure on the police resources made it easier to deal with the rioters.

Serious disturbances also are reported from Rotherham and North Shields among other places. In Rotherham the rioters were mostly women and youths, but hardly a single German shop in the town escaped wreckage. By night the streets were crowded with thousands of rioters who were carrying away provisions of all kinds from the looted shops. At North Shields many shops were attacked but there was no looting.

The police throughout the country have been busy all day gathering subjects of hostile countries of a military age and dispatching them to concentration camps. Many hundreds voluntarily surrendered and were sent off in batches, 500 going to Southend to be placed aboard steamers which have been fitted up for the purpose. The only difficulty the authorities are faced with is that of finding room, as the suddenness with which the Government came to its decision following the riots gave no time to prepare new camps.

As all subjects of enemy countries have been registered since the commencement of the war and have been compelled to report priodically to the police there is no difficulty in locating them. Some, however, with large businesses must have time allowed to arrange their affairs. In most cases the business has been transferred to Britishers or neutrals, but some alien business men closed their premises immediately. One result of this was felt in the east end of London, where the majority of the small bakers are Germans, the people this morning finding themselves deprived of their usual supplies.

A greater task will be that of arranging for the repatriation of women and children and men over the military age. Many of the latter have resided in England a lifetime and have no other home, and are pleading as an alternative to be interned with the younger men.

Illness thus far has proved the only excuse accepted by the authorities for relaxation in the orders, but it is believed that leniency will be shown those who have been residents of this country for a long time.

RUSSIANS SMASH AUSTRIAN LINE

the purpose of reconquering the necessary points they had lost previously.

In Galicia, after the abortive German attempt to surround the Forty-eighth Division of the Russian Army, the German action during the last nine days has had the character of frontal attacks against the Russian fortified positions, which have been successfully repulsed by the Russians. It is true that the Russian losses are very heavy, but it is true also that the losses of the German-Austrian Army are enormous. Wishing to boom their success, the Germans multiplied by many times the number of Russian prisoners taken by them, a great part of whom were wounded, as the Russian troops, gradually retreating, had no means of taking them from the field of battle.

The boom about the great victory in Galicia seems to be intended to raise the spirits in Germany and to restrain Italy from the decisive step she is now about to take.

GERMANS BEFORE PRZEMYSL.

Berlin and Vienna Claim Continued Success in Galicia and Poland.

BERLIN, (via London,) May 14.—The following statement was issued today by the German General Staff:

The battle at Shavli, in Courland, Russia, did not come to an end yesterday.

North of the Niemen River, on the lower Dubysa, we took eighty prisoners.

In a night advance west of Przasnysz parts of the Russian First Turkestan Army Corps succeeded in penetrating, after several unsuccessful efforts, into our foremost trenches. By evening, however, the enemy had again been everywhere driven back, with heavy losses, including 120 prisoners.

Southeastern Arena.—The advance guards of the armies under General Mackensen are before Przemysl, on the left bank of the lower San. Joining this army on the right and the left, the Teutonic allies continue their pursuit of the Russians, on one side in the direction of Solinadod-Romily and on the other in the direction of Kolanines and Kielce.

The Russians have been unable to maintain their positions from Kielce to the Pilica or to Inowlodz, and they are beating a hasty retreat toward the east.

VIENNA, (via London,) May 14.—The following official War Office statement was given out here tonight:

The retreat of the enemy in Russian Poland continues, influencing also the sectors of the former Pilica front.

From the east of Piotrkow to the upper Vistula the retreating enemy is being pursued by the Teutonic allies under Generals von Woyrich and Dankl. The allied troops have gained a footing in the hilly district northeast of Kielce.

In Mid-Galicia the Russians are retreating across the San before the army of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand. From the district of Dobromil, Stryl, and Sambor the enemy is retreating in a northeasterly direction before the vanguards of the army under Generals Borovich and von Boehm-Ermolli. Our troops have reached the heights southwest of Dobromil, Stryl, and Sambor. Allied troops, under General Linsingen, are advancing across Turka and Skole and joining the general advance.

The battle in South Galicia continues. Strong Russian forces have advanced across Obertyn to the north of Sniatyn and Mahala.

RUSSIANS CAUGHT NAPPING.

Gigantic Preparations for Galician Drive Passed Unperceived.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, May 8, (Delayed Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—I am able today to give some information received from a reliable military source with regard to the events leading up to the Austro-German success in Galicia. These details explain how the offensive movement was carried through and prepared in a manner to take the Russians by surprise. It is at the same time a most impressive argument in favor of a Secretary in War, the most important factor in this success.

It is pointed out that the success of the Germanic move is the more surprising because it not only necessitated time to concentrate such large forces as have been concentrated in West Galicia, but because these movements were such by their nature that they could be easily discovered, and it was even a surprise to the General Staff that it succeeded in such measure.

The offensive was naturally preceded by a thousand minor movements as well as by movements on a large scale. News depots, bureaus, and telephone and telegraph stations had to be established on a line parallel with the front of battle. New and numerous hospital stations had to be prepared, especially on the railway lines which insure good connections toward Germany and Hungary, and new food depots had to be installed on the same lines so as to insure provisions for the new army as well as munition depots with ample supplies. The new allied armies required even the appointment of new commanders. A great number of heavy guns and other artillery were placed in position two weeks before the offensive began. Train after train brought guns of all calibres from all directions to the Vistula and Carpathian fronts, including long range Skoda guns and steel mortars, the latter having mostly been constructed since the war began, and an immense number of German Krupp guns. Meanwhile troop trains brought up Germans and Austro-Hungarian troops and hundreds of other trains were packed with bridge materials and pontoons which were necessary to the crossing of the Dunajec and Biala. Engineers were ready at the front by the end of April in order to reconstruct the railway lines behind the army advancing toward the east. Aviation and motor stations were also established.

It is obvious that the movements of all these trains, &c., must have taken a long time, and yet it is clear nothing had been observed by the Russians on the southern section along which the army advanced later. Between Tarnow and Gorlice more than a thousand guns were brought up and placed in position with an immense amount of all kinds of munitions. Even such difficulties arose as supplying two kinds of small arm ammunition to the German and Austrian troops, these having different rifles and using consequently different ammunition. New provision and munition depots were built and fitted and a perfectly organized administration put up. Thousands of wagons and trucks with provisions and great herds of cattle were driven up, and all in the greatest secrecy. Everything had been done at night.

The secrecy of these preparations was the chief feature of success, for the movement only promised success in the event of the Russians not having time to bring up reinforcements in their usual rapid way. These preparations began the very day after it became obvious that the Russian offensive in the Carpathians was slackening.

It is asserted that the Russian forces engaged in the battle were eight army corps, while the Germanic armies were twice as strong and had four times as many guns and a greater number of heavy batteries to support the attacks. This is only a semi-official statement and much credit cannot be attached to it. The German artillery in fact was much stronger than one would imagine from that statement, and this great strength in guns made it possible to drive the Russians out of their fortified positions.

SHELLING ASIATIC FORTS.

Turks on the Dardanelles Replied Vigorously Up to Monday.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

IMBROS, off Gallipoli Peninsula, May 10, (Ditpatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—In the last few days the Dardanelles operations as seen from this point of vantage have become much less spectacular. The firing seems directed to a large extent against the Asiatic side of the waterway, but the position of the land forces, to judge by the localities shelled by the ships, does not seem greatly altered. A stubborn and continuous struggle seems to be in progress between the British and the Turks on the southern slopes of Tree Peak.

Sailing between Tenedos and Imbros, across the offing of the Dardanelles entrance, on Saturday, I could see the warships heavily shelling positions beyond Krithia Peak, five miles inland from the western promontory of the peninsula. As I watched, the whole of the Turkish position was ringed by huge columns of smoke and earth, caused by the bursting of shells from the men-of-war.

Firing was also proceeding far up the straits, and on Saturday night I witnessed a particularly violent bombardment, to which reply was made by the Turkish batteries on the heights beyond Erenkeui, on the Asiatic side.

Yesterday was the quietest day since the operations began exactly a fortnight ago. Save for an occasional boom silence settled down on this war-racked area. During the night, however, gun flashes were again illuminating the sky.

Today's operations presented some interesting features. The fact that the Turks are concentrating their fire toward the narrows is a good indication of the progress the Allies have made. I could plainly see the shells sending up great spouts of spray in the waters within the narrows around Nagara, and on one occasion four of those white columns rose in a row at the same instant. These shells appeared to come from far up on the Asiatic side.

This was a little after 1 o'clock today, and at the same time the Queen Elizabeth was engaged in firing repeated broadsides at the slopes of the valley that runs across the peninsula, roughly from Gaba Tepe to the shores of the strait, opposite Nagara. She must have done tremendous damage, for at all times all the hillsides seemed one mass of bursting shells.

A little before 2 o'clock one of her shells caused a great explosion at a point a little above Nagara, but on the western side of the strait.

All day there has been firing from the ships and the Asiatic side inland from a line drawn between Chanak and Erenkeui. Occasionally the Turks in Asia have landed a shell on the European side.

The Turkish position beyond the Narrows appears to be a strong one.

Operating economy in large buildings

Never more important than now

The savings which can be accomplished through the introduction of modern methods in operating and in purchasing supplies, will frequently turn a losing into a paying building investment.

We are specialists in every department of building management, operating for a fixed sum annually or on a percentage basis.

We specialize in operating private electrical plants. The purchase of coal and other supplies for a large number of buildings enables us to obtain very low prices for our clients.

Where desirable, we deliver coal and remove ashes at night, thus avoiding any public nuisance.

We control patented appliances for economical boiler operation.

We are furnishing steam for heating and a number of other purposes in one of the largest buildings in the city, having more than 17,000,000 cubic feet of contents, for less than $17,000 yearly.

Our clients, Messrs. Gimbel Brothers, The American Surety Co., The Columbia Trust Co., Central Branch Y. W. C. A., The Rhinelander Real Estate Co., The Art Color Printing Co., Ludwig Baumann & Co., permit us to refer to them.

FIND BOGUS CONSUL IS A PAROLED THIEF

"Lieut. Commander Wenberg" Is Called to the Astor, Only to be Arrested.

$250 DINNER BILL UNPAID

His Gold Lace Uniform Second Hand and His "Official" Escort Sailors on a Lark.

"Lieutenant Commander Ethan Allen Wenberg," for three days "Consul General for Rumania," is going back to Elmira Reformatory today. He left there in March under parole and when H. B. Rogers, parole officer of the reformatory, read in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday of the dinner the "Consul General" gave Thursday night in honor of Vice President Quinonez of San Salvador at the Hotel Astor, he thought it about time the young man was going back. The charge on which "Wenberg" is held is for swindling the Astor out of $250, the cost of the dinner, and a taxi cab company out of $300 rent for a motor.

"Wenberg" is known to the Elmira authorities as Ethan S. Weinberg, of 71 Maujer Street, Brooklyn. In 1910 he was arrested for impersonating a consular officer. At that time his name was Ethan Allen Weinberg. He dropped an "i" for his latest escapade. "Wenberg" admitted in the Tombs last night that he was "Weinberg." After he has served the eighteen months he owes at Elmira, he probably will be the involuntary guest of the State Department.

Distinguished officers of the visiting fleet were invited to the dinner the "Consul General" gave in honor of Vice President Quinonez. When neither they nor Dr. Quinonez attended and reporters inquired, early yesterday morning, Dr. Quinonez, who is in America as a delegate to the meeting of the Pan American Commission in Washington next week, called on the telephone Collector Malone, who is Chairman of the committee for the entertainment of the delegates, and told him about "Wenberg." "Wenberg," Dr. Quinonez said, had told the Vice President that he had been sent by Mr. Malone as an escort for him. Dr. Quinonez had placed confidence in "Wenberg" until the dinner fiasco.

Placed in the Tombs.

Mr. Malone told Dr. Quinonez that "Wenberg" was an impostor and later when the "Consul General" called up the Astor to wish Dr. Quinonez happy dreams he was told an important message awaited him. About four o'clock he arrived, still in his magnificent uniform of gold lace. Under orders from Collector Malone "Wenberg" was detained at the hotel. Yesterday at noon, following a conference between Mr. Rogers and representatives of Mr. Malone, "Wenberg" was asked if he would go quietly to a private sanitarium. The next thing he knew he was in the Tombs.

When he got into trouble for professing to be a United States Consular agent in 1910, "Wenberg" or "Weinberg" was sent to Bellevue for observation. He was allowed to go free but was arrested again in January, 1912, on a charge of larceny and sent to Elmira. He was paroled in June, 1913. On January 5, 1914, he was arrested for violation of his parole in having with him in a vaudeville act a female minor. He went back to Elmira and in March of this year he was paroled again.

Detectives of the Prison Association found yesterday that the "Consul General" had leased an office at 2 Rector Street and had had his name and bogus title painted on the door. It was also found that the "bodyguard" which accompanied the "Consul General" all over Manhattan on Thursday were three sailors who had yielded to the prospect of an unlimited automobile ride. The limousine he rode in for three days he hired on the claim that he was an agent of Collector Malone. The rent of the car was $50 for twelve hours; the "Consul General" had it three days and nights. Asked by the detectives about his gorgeous gold lace uniform, he said yesterday that he bought it two years ago in a second-hand shop because he thought he might some time have use for it.

At his home in Maujer Street, Brooklyn, yesterday, Weinberg's father said his son had not had the uniform in two years. He did not share the opinion that his son was demented, but thought the young man stood very much in need of the treatment he would get at Elmira.

The detectives said that the young woman who had left a good job to be the companion of the "Consul General" was out yesterday looking for work.

Admits His Mistake.

"Wenburg" admitted that he had made a mistake about being an aviator here in the Balkan war, as a recognition of which he said he had been sent to the Rumanian Embassy in Paris as military attaché. He said at the dinner that on May 4 he had been named Consul General at New York. This story and his gold lace deceived the Astor managers, the taxi people and Dr. Quinonez. On Monday, after recognition had been refused him on board of a battleship in the Hudson, he went away, put on his gold lace uniform and returned, when he was received with due honors and arrangements were made for his formal reception yesterday.

Roberto Aguilar, secretary to Vice-President Quinonez, said yesterday that the San Salvador delegation had no reason to believe "Consul General Wenburg" was an impostor when he first presented himself, but twenty-four hours before the dinner they began to lose faith in him. "Wenburg" had told the Vice President that all arrangements had been made for a bigger dinner in his honor next week at which were to be present all the commanders of the fleet, the Vice President of the United States and the Cabinet officers. He stated that President Wilson had declined his invitation because of a previous engagement. It was when he told the Astor managers of this proposed dinner, that he was able to get credit for the affair of Thursday night.

When Weinberg impersonated a consular official several years ago the State Department took no action because it believed the offender demented. Several months ago "Ethan Allen Wenburg" began to annoy the department by frequent notifications, by mail and telegraph, of his appointment as Consul General. Inasmuch as such notification was due from Rumania and not from New York, no formal notice was taken of it. The reflection upon the entertainment committee for the delegates and upon Vice President Quinonez, the guest of the United States Government, has started an investigation and if Weinberg is not taken in charge by the Federal authorities today before he is returned to Elmira, it is believed he will be arrested when he finishes the eighteen months he has left to serve at the reformatory.

DEMOCRATS SEEK FUNDS.

State Committee Wants 5,000 Sustaining Members at $10 Each.

The Democratic State Committee, feeling the urgent necessity of strengthening its exchequer, has sent out during the last few days hundreds of letters inviting the faithful to become Associate Members of the State Committee. They want to get 5,000 persons to pay $10 a year, which, it is reckoned, would give the State Committee the funds required to carry on its political work all the year round without embarassment.

This idea has been borrowed from the Republicans. Some time ago William Barnes, when he was State Chairman, suggested that the State Committee should enroll 5,000 sustaining members, who would contribute annually $10 apiece. This struck William Church Osborn, Democratic State Chairman, as a bright idea and he proceeded to adopt it.

Some checks have been received already in response to the Democratic appeal, and many more are expected. The new associate members are not to receive any voice in the management of the State Committee, but they will be put on the list for the distribution of literature, and will also have sent to them a handsome certificate of membership.

TAXI DRIVER SLAIN BY HIS PASSENGERS

Charles Gromest of Hoboken Deserts His Car to Flee and Is Shot Down by Two Fares.

CAUSE OF MURDER UNKNOWN

A well-dressed man wearing a blue suit and a new straw hat, and carrying a small black valise, climbed the stairs leading from the Hudson tunnel to the street outside the D., L. & W. Railroad station in Hoboken about 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Charles Gromest of 126 Washington Street, Hoboken, was standing beside his taxicab. The man with the satchel entered the cab, gave a low-spoken order, and a few seconds later was being driven down River Street. A few blocks away from the station the passenger ordered the cab stopped, and another man entered the taxi. This man, like the first, was afterward described as wearing a blue suit.

It was nearly an hour and a half later that the cab drew up alongside the curb at the Boulevard Loop, Weehawken. Gromest got out quickly and ran up the stairs leading over King's Bluff. At this point there is a flight of concrete steps set in the hillside, and leading up the bluff about 150 feet to a point where the land dips toward the Hudson River and the railroad tracks. The chauffeur got up the first flight to a little platform about fifteen feet above the street level. Then the door of his cab opened and both passengers got out and started climbing the stairs after Gromest. The latter looked back, saw them coming, and quickened his pace.

He reached the second platform, fifteen feet above the first, when his pursuers drew revolvers and fired at him. Stumbling forward, the chauffeur half fell to the landing. Then he scrambled to his feet and continued his upward flight. The pursuing pair fired again, and this time Gromest crumpled up, fell, and rolled off the landing place, a dead man. His passengers, their revolvers still in their hands, stepped out of the way as their victim rolled down to the street. Then they bounded up the stairs and disappeared over the rise toward the railroad tracks.

A minute after this happened a road inspector ran into the Weehawken Police Headquarters, 200 yards from the scene of the tragedy, and told those in charge what had happened. Then began a search for the murderers, which continued all night. Several persons, two of them women, were found who had heard the shots, and through the railroad men the police were able to follow the fleeing murderers until they disappeared in West New York. Detectives learned that the fugitives had gone down the other side of King's Bluff and had arrived at the railroad tracks in time to swing on board a freight train bound for the freight yard.

A railroad inspector, idly speculating as to the reason for their hurry, saw the pair drop off the freight train at the entrance to the tunnel and get on board a moving train going north. Another man noticed them get off this train at Seventeenth Street, climb the hill, and disappear in the direction of West New York. There the trail ended.

From the contents of the black valise abandoned in the cab the police were able to piece together a theory to fit the crime. In this bag they found two stockings half filled with cartridges, a piece of lead pipe wrapped in a newspaper, a bottle of chloroform, another containing nitroglycerin, two black caps, a blackjack, wire, twine, and two silk "get-away" shirts. The shirts were mostly fronts with the collars so arranged that they could be pulled on quickly.

The police have incomplete descriptions of the fugitives. They are said to be about 5 feet 7 inches tall, both heavily built, and both dressed in clothes of dark blue material. Some say they wore straw hats, and others that they wore derbies.

The police theory is that the pair got into an argument during the ride and from their conversation the chauffeur obtained an inkling as to their profession. He probably refused to proceed further and got out, intending to inform the police. They pursued, and, fearing that he was getting away from them, opened fire and shot him down.

Gromest was a man of excellent reputation. He was well known in Hoboken, where he had some reputation as a fighter. He was 38 years old and a veteran of the Spanish-American War.

$755 FOR AN AUTOGRAPH.

Thomas Dekker's Signature Leads in the Thacher Sale.

The high price of $755 was paid by George D. Smith at the sale of the late John Boyd Thacher's collection of autographs in the Anderson Galleries yesterday for an autograph document, signed, Thomas Dekker, the dramatist. It is dated Jan. 18, 1598, and is a receipt of £3 advanced by Philip Hynchlon to be repaid by the next moneys paid by the manager. It is also signed by two of his players, Thomas Downton and Richard Jubye. On the reverse is a cancelled autograph receipt of George Chapman for an advance by Hynchlon on a comedy, "The World Ronnes Upon Wheeles," witnessed by Dekker and Downton. It is one of the missing fragments of Hynchlon's "Diary." Shakespear, Burtage, Alleyn and others, then known as "Lord Strange's Company of Players," acted in 1592 at the Rose Theatre in Brukside, newly erected by Hynchlon.

Mr. Smith obtained for $82.50 a short autograph letter, signed, of Robert Cecil, Lord Salisbury, the rival of Raleigh and Essex. It is a very interesting letter on Queen Elizabeth, and is among the rarest of English autographs. A short letter of Thomas Chatterton, written the year before he poisoned himself at the age of eighteen, also went to Mr. Smith for $40.

L. M. Thompson paid $19 for a fine letter of the Earl of Chesterfield. A letter of Lord Robert Clive, written during the period in which he established British military ascendancy in India, was knocked down to Mr. Smith for $25. Mr. Thompson gave $56 for a document signed by Sir Edward Coke, the great jurist. A long letter of Samuel T. Coleridge, mentioning "Remorse," a tragedy, brought $11. Mr. Smith paid $32 for a letter of Captain James Cook, navigator, and $35 for the signature of Archbishop Thomas Cranmer. He gave $40 for a document signed by Stephen Day, first printer in the American colonies, dated Oct. 30, 1652, and $55 for a power of attorney, signed by Daniel De Foe, and dated Sept. 29, 1703.

A letter of Charles Dickens to J. P. Harley, comedian, went to Mr. Thompson for $41, as did a letter of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, for $10.50. A letter of Donizetti, the composer, brought $14, and the signature of John Dryden $28. Mr. Thompson gave $34 for a letter of the Earl of Elden, and Mr. Smith $27.50 for a letter of George Eliot, signed "M. A. Lewes."

The total for the day was $1,763.70, and for the sale of Part V. $4,264.

RARE BOOKS BRING $3,581.

Balzac and Whitman Favorites in American Art Galleries Sale.

Books from the libraries of James F. Thompson, an English gentleman; the late Alexander Bryant, and William C. Oastler were sold at the American Art Galleries yesterday for $3,581.

Henry Malkan paid $150 for a limited edition definitive of "The Works of Balzac," printed on Japanese paper. J. P. Horn gave $145 for "The Complete Writings of Dickens," large paper edition. Mr. Malkan obtained for $120 "The Collected Writings of Eliot," laid paper edition; for $135 the "Works of Hugo," edition de bibliophile, one of 250 copies on Japanese paper; for $62.50 the La Salle edition of "The Works of Parkman," and for $150 the author's manuscript edition of "The Complete Writings of Whitman."

D. T. Valentine's "New York Manual for 1848" brought $42.50. Captain James Cook's "Collection of Voyages," including the first edition of John Hawkesworth's "Narrative," went for $40. "The Waverley Novels," Edinburgh, 1829-1829, was bought by Mr. Malkan for $52.50.

WARSHIP VISITORS RESCUED IN RIVER

Five Thrown Into Water When a Steamer Hits Dock Commissioner Smith's Launch.

BOATS RACE TO THEIR AID

Crowds on Ship and Shore See Patrick Fitzgerald Save Superintendent C. A. Manley.

Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, his wife and their daughter, Margaret, Mrs. E. T. Holmes, Miss Mildred Holmes, and Miss Williams, a sister-in-law of the Commissioner, accepted Captain H. McL. P. Huse's invitation to ride ashore in a steamer of the battleship Wisconsin yesterday afternoon after Mr. Smith had paid a visit to Admiral Fletcher, and the party were just alighting at the pier at Eightieth Street and the Hudson River when they heard yells and calls for help.

In the river the launch which carried the Commissioner's party out to the Wisconsin had been struck by the People's liner Rensselaer on its way to Albany, and Dock Superintendent Charles A. Manley, Captain Thomas Quigley, Patrick Kelly, the engineer, and Patrick Fitzgerald and Thomas Wood, the crew, were struggling in the water. Manley had gone out to the Wisconsin to bring the Commissioner's party ashore and had started to follow when Mr. Smith accepted the invitation of Admiral Fletcher's Chief of Staff to return in a navy boat.

The Commissioner's party scrambled hastily ashore, and while Mr. Smith ran to a telephone and called an ambulance from Knickerbocker Hospital, Captain Huse backed the steamer out and started to the rescue. Already another steamer had put out from the Wisconsin, the Rensselaer had stopped and launched a small boat, and Police Launch 4, with Sergeant Bannon and Policemen O'Shaughnessey and Walker, had shot out from the pier alongside which it had been lying.

Bluejackets aboard the warships and thousands of persons along Riverside Drive watched the racing boats as they dashed at full speed toward the five men struggling in the water. Manley cannot swim and Fitzgerald, who knew it, had gone at once to the assistance of his superior. He was holding Manley afloat while Quigley, Kelly, and Wood sustained themselves.

The police boat was the first to reach the men, and the single swimmers were drawn into it after they had caught life buoys which the policemen hurled to them. It was Bannon who first realized that Manley could not swim and that Fitzgerald was holding him up, and he dived overboard at once.

With Bannon's help Fitzgerald kept Manley up until the other policemen swept the launch around to them, and then they were taken aboard just as Captain Huse's steamer came up. The Captain had Mr. Manley transferred to his craft and hurried him to the Wyoming, while the launch carried the others to the pier, where Dr. Padula was already awaiting them.

On the Wyoming, Surgeon C. N. Oman attended Mr. Manley, and after a time he was carried ashore in the steamer and sent to his home, 162 McDonough Street, Brooklyn, in a private ambulance. Mr. Manley had been suffering with heart trouble for some time, and it was feared the shock would be serious for him. The others were sent to their homes after Dr. Padula had treated them. None was seriously hurt.

TWO CRUISERS SENT TO AWE THE YAQUIS

Raleigh and New Orleans Ordered to Guaymas to Protect Americans from Indians.

SEVERAL MEXICANS KILLED

Unrest Among Indians Said to be Due to Failure of Leaders to Turn Over Land Promised.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Two American warships, the cruisers Raleigh and New Orleans, have been ordered to Guaymas, on the west coast of Sonora, to investigate and report the facts as to the attack made by Mexican Yaqui Indians on a colony of Americans, including women and children, near Esperanza, south of Guaymas. The Yaquis have gone on the warpath in a movement which is independent of the Carranza and Villa factions.

The preliminary report to the State Department from Consul Hostetter, at Hermosillo stated that the Yaquis had taken control of the valley at Esperanza and two Americans were reported to have been killed. A later report said no Americans had been killed, but spoke of appaling conditions, and on the basis of these messages the cruiser Raleigh was dispatched from La Paz and the New Orleans was sent from Manzanillo on the west coast to the vicinity of Guaymas. Admiral Howard, Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet, has directed the commanders of these vessels to get the facts and look after American interests.

Reports from American Consul Simpich, at Nogales, said that William Stockers, a prominent ranchman, had been wounded in the attack by Yaqui Indians south of Guaymas, and that John Wilson and W. A. Fay had been killed. Another American, J. J. Donovan, is among the missing.

The dispatch said 400 Yaqui Indians were on a raid and that about fifty American colonists, assisted by 200 other Americans, had made a stand.

General Sosa has started from Guaymas with 200 soldiers and will be joined by 100 more at Corral, and those with the garrison in the valley will make 500, sufficient to drive off the raiders.

The State Department announced that the American consulate at Nogales had repeatedly warned Americans to stay out of the disturbed region.

NOGALES, Mexico, May 14.—The Pueblo of San Jose de Gracia, 153 miles south of here, was attacked last night by 250 Yaquis, who are known as "Bronchos" or wild Indians. Eight women and many men, all Mexicans, were killed.

American colonies in the Yaqui valley sent further appeals to Governor Maytorena today for help.

ON BOARD U. S. S. COLORADO, OFF SAN DIEGO, May 14.—Admiral Thomas Howard, commanding the Pacific Fleet, has dispatched the United States cruiser New Orleans to Guaymas, Sonora, from Manzanillo, Colima. Disturbances recently reported, however, have been at inland points where aid could not be sent.

At Guaymas the troops were reported mutinous on Tuesday because of the low purchasing power of the current money. Quiet was restored by the action of the commandant in securing supplies from the merchants and selling them at reduced prices to the soldiers.

The unrest among the Indians is said to have been caused by the alleged failure of the authorities to fulfill promises to restore lands which the Indians claimed. Among these lands are named the Yaqui River valley, now controlled and operated by an American corporation.

VILLA THREAT TO ZAPATA?

Letter Said to Have Been Found on a Captured Spy.

Special cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, May 14.—A spy captured at Acamoaro en route to Mexico City is said to have carried a letter from Villa to Zapata containing Villa's threat to put Zapata to death. Villa blames Zapata for the loss of the battle of Celaya, and claims that Obregon was defeated until reinforcements arrived. Villa says he will return to Mexico City after the next battle, in which he is confident he will defeat Obregon and will show Zapata and all others that Villa is still the greatest man in Mexico. He calls Zapata a coward, who fights only for his own gain and promises a public execution of Zapata and other leaders who have received assistance from him.

General Carranza has agreed to the request of Special Agent Silliman to forward mail to and from Mexico City via Puebla.

SPAIN WANTS OUR COAL.

King Suspends the Import Tax—Scarcity in France, Too.

MADRID, May 14.—The Spanish Government is so much concerned over the scarcity of coal that the Cabinet is willing to guarantee the payment of orders placed in the United States by opening a credit in New York to the amount of at least 1,000,000 pesetas ($200,000). This deposit will be maintained so long as necessary.

The object of the Government is especially to enable smaller concerns, those comparatively little known in the financial world, to have their American orders filled promptly. The cash thus deposited is to be used only in the event of purchasers failing to pay.

Something like a coal famine exists throughout Spain, and large orders are being placed in the United States by Spanish companies. A royal decree promulgated today suspends the import duties on coal and the transport taxes which were discriminatory against America.

Joseph E. Willard, the American Ambassador to Spain, and C. William A. Veditz, the commercial attaché of the American Embassies at Madrid and Paris, had an audience today with King Alfonso concerning transport duties. They convinced His Majesty that it was unjust to tax English coals the equivalent of 10 cents a ton transport dues and American coal 40 cents a ton. The King, with the approval of the Cabinet, thereupon suspended all charges on coal imports.

The British Government has prohibited the export of coal and coke; the order having become effective yesterday. Spain cannot get fuel from Germany, hence she must turn toward the United States for coal. Last year Spain imported about 3,000,000 tons of coal.

English coal, which sold at 70 pesetas ($14) a ton at the outbreak of war, now brings 100 pesetas ($20) a ton. Spanish coal, which sold at $7 a ton wholesale, now brings more than double that price.

PARIS, May 14.—Coal is scarce in France. This country in normal times annually uses 60,000,000 tons of coal. From 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 of that amount formerly came from Great Britain, 6,000,000 tons was purchased from Germany and 4,000,000 tons was imported from Belgium.

The French production was normally 40,000,000 tons, but this year it will probably be less than 25,000,000 tons. The French requirements are considerably less than this amount, but nevertheless imports from the United States are necessary. The greatest difficulty is that of sea transportation.

POULTRY MEN LOSE APPEAL.

Highest Court of State Decides They Must Go to Jail.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 14.—The members of the so-called "Poultry Trust," who were convicted of conspiracy in New York City, must serve their sentences of $500 fine and three months in the penitentiary under a decision handed down by the Court of Appeals today affirming the ruling of the New York courts. The trial was conducted before Judge Otto Rosalsky, and thirteen of nineteen defendants were convicted. The verdict was unanimously affirmed by the Appellate Division, First Department.

Those convicted were Irving V. Dwyer, Arthur G. Dwyer, Charles Westerberg, William W. Smith, Charles R. Jewell, James N. Norris, William H. Norris, Charles T. Hawk, Charles Thatcher, Clemen Bishop, Samuel Werner, Solomon Frankel, and Charles Werner. Those acquitted were Pauline Jacobs, David A. Jewell, E. Muray Posey, Joseph Cohen, and Abraham Kassel.

The action of the Court of Appeals in affirming the conviction of th poultry dealers, is the first of its kind rendered in the United States in a case where a penitentiary sentence was imposed. Prison sentences have been imposed in other juridicticns under the Federal or State law, but the judgments have been reversed upon appeal.

The men who are out on bail will be re-arrested as soon as the District Attorney's office is notified officially of the Court of Appeals' decision. One of the men, Soloman Frankel, has died since his conviction.

The men were indicted in March, 1910, chcarged with conspiring to commit acts injurious to trade and commerce, in that the yconspired together to prevent competition, and acquire and maintain a monopoly in the purchase and sale of "kosher killed" live poultry, which constituted practically 90 per cent. of all the live poultry sold in this city.

Their trial lasted three months, ending on Aug. 16, 1911. They were represented by William Travers Jerome.

JARMULOWSKY TO PAY ALL.

East Side Banker to Settle Claims in Full by Installments.

Depositors to the number of 1,000 protested vigorously yesterday at the hearing before Stanley Dexter, the official referee, in the Federal District Court, when it became known that the offer made by M. & L. Jarmulowsky, private bankers of 165 East Broadway, had been confirmed by Judge Mayer. Meyer Jarmulowsky was present. The depositors hustled him and shook their fists in his face, but he was protected by the Deputy Marshals until he had left the building.

The composition, which has gone through, calls for a payment of 100 cents on the dollar, of which 15 cents will be payable in sixty days, 10 cents annually for five years, and then 35 cents in cash. Mr. Dexter held that this offer was for the best interests of all parties, and was actually the only way of cleaning up the bankers' affairs. In this he had the support of the lawyers concerned in the case, Morris Hilquit, ex-Governor Sulzer, and Koenig, Goldsmith & Sittenfield.

CHINA DISCLAIMS CONCORD WITH JAPAN

Forced to Accept Ultimatum, but Will Join in No Attack on the Open Door.

NOTICE TO OTHER POWERS

How Japan Used Cajolery, Pressure, and Finally Threats, Told in "Frank Statement."

PEKING, May 14.—The Chinese Government, in its "plain, frank statement" criticising the Japanese Government for its course in connection with its recent demands upon the Oriental republic, after setting out the original concessions granted by China [as already given in THE NEW YORK TIMES,] says:

"It was hoped by the Chinese Government that, in view of the great concessions made by China at conferences held up to this time, the Japanese would see a way of effecting an amicable settlement by modifying her position on certain points in regard to which it had become manifest China would encounter almost insuperable obstacles to making further concessions.

"The Japanese Government, however, suspended negotiations until April 26, when they surprised the Chinese Government by presenting a new list of twenty-four demands and requested that China accord their acceptance without delay, adding that it was their final proposal. At the same time the Japanese Minister stated that Japan would restore the leased territory of Kiao-Chau at an opportune time in the future if China agreed to the new list of demands without modification.

"This Kiao-Chau offer, however, was in no sense a new proposal, as it was advanced at the first conference. But the new list introduced four new demands concerning inner Mongolia. In deference to the wishes of Japan the Chinese Government gave the revised list the most careful consideration, and being sincerely desirous of an early settlement offered new concessions in a reply presented on May 1, agreeing to three of the four articles relating to inner Mongolia."

After relating the details of the new concessions, the statement continues:

"Having made these concessions, which virtually brought the views of China into line with those of Japan, and explained in a note accompanying the reply how difficult it was for China to make further concessions, the Chinese Government hoped Japan would accept their reply, thus bringing the negotiations to an amicable conclusion. Japan, however, expressed dissatisfaction with China's reply, withdrew the conditional offer to restore Kiao-Chau, and intimated that if China did not give full compliance with the twenty-four demands Japan would have recourse to drastic measures.

"Upon receiving this intimation China, inspired by a conciliatory spirit and desirous of avoiding a rupture in the relations between the two countries, made a supreme effort to meet the situation. She represented to Japan she would reconsider her position and make another attempt to find a solution satisfactory to Japan with respect to the articles China had declared could not be taken up for consideration, but to which Japan attached importance. Even on the evening of May 6, after the Japanese Minister had notified China the ultimatum had arrived in Peking, China, in the interests of peace, still exerted efforts to save the situation by offering to meet Japan's wishes. Her overtures again were rejected, and thus was exhausted the means at the disposal of China to prevent an impasse.

"As to the allegations in the ultimatum against China, the Chinese Government hopes the foregoing outline of the negotiations constitutes a clear and dispassionate reply. In considering the nature of the course they should take with reference to the ultimatum, China was influenced by a desire to preserve the Chinese people as well as the large number of foreign residents in China.

"China was compelled to comply in full with the terms of the ultimatum, but in complying China disclaims any desire to associate itself with any revision which thus may be effected upon the various conventions and agreements concluded between various other powers in respect to the maintenance of China's territorial independence and integrity, the preservation of the status quo and the principle of equal opportunity in commerce and industry for all nations in China."

FRENCH STUDENT ARRESTED

Charged with Attempting to Strangle American Woman.

PARIS, May 14.—A high school student, whose name is withheld by the police because of his family connections, was arrested last night on a charge of attempting to strangle Mme. Brandt, reputed to be a wealthy American, when she resisted his attempts to rob her apartments in the Rue de la Pompe.

The youth was frightened by Mme. Brandt's screams and fled, running into the arms of a policeman just outside the door. The police believe he was the dupe of older associates who planned the robbery and other arrests are expected.

PRAYERS FOR CONSTANTINE.

Greek Monarch's Illness Is Taking a Normal Course.

LONDON, May 14.—An Athens dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the illness of King Constantine is taking its normal course. Prayers for his recovery were offered today in all churches. His Majesty is said to be suffering from an attack of pleurisy which developed from a cold.

At the Greek Legation in Paris it was announced that the latest bulletin issued by King Constantine's physicians said his general condition was satisfactory and that his fever was "relatively moderate."

SEES WORLD POWER BEHIND PEACE COURT

John Hays Hammond Declares Belligerents Will Accept Offer When the War Is Over.

CONGRESS PLANS OUTLINED

United States Will Be Urged to Take Lead—Public School Propaganda Suggested.

CLEVELAND, O., May 14.—The World Court Congress held its concluding session tonight, with its delegates voicing the opinion that the latest movement toward world peace, as expressed in the congress's idea of an international court of justice, had been launched and was bound to be successful.

"There are many who are inclined to believe the movement visionary," said John Hays Hammond, Chairman. 'These do not comprehend the information at the disposal of the men forstering the idea of a world court, which will have a 'punch' because it will make arbitration obligatory and not optional.

"Assurances have come from all sides, including representative men from the nations now at war, that support of the plan for a world court is sure to ensue, once the carnage in Europe has ended. These assurances are authoritative.

"While the congress has been in session, we have received pledges of intended support to our plan from individuals and organizations all over the country. It is certain that public opinion in the United States will crystallize speedily into a determination that will make this country a leading signatory to a league of nations."

Future Plans of Congress.

The future plans of the congress were outlined in an address late this afternoon by Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks. They include:

The winning over of public opinion in this country and abroad through the press and through the holding of conventions and conferences.

The formation of a committee to secure action pledging this country to the plan for a world court of justice.

The outlining of a formal plan for a world's court by a commission selected from the Committee of One Hundred of the congress.

Dr. Frances E. Clark, President of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, said:

"The schools of America furnish a vast audience for a wise propaganda of this sort. We should teach in our public schools this plan for the promoting of peace through a world court, for whether our country will be a jingo, fire-eating nation, with a chip on its shoulder for every fancied insult, leading the world in armaments and implements of destruction, will depend upon the young people of today."

A resolution, the only one presented to the congress, was adopted at tonight's session, continuing the Committee of One Hundred, which launched the present congress, with power to act in all future matters.

"It is the desire of this congress that persistent effort shall be made to realize the project of a world court," said the resolution, "for it is clear to the world that existing institutions for the prevention of war need strengthening and enlarging."

Work to Begin at Once.

"The Committee of One Hundred will at once start work to secure action by our Government in the matter," said Mr. Hammond at the conclusion of the congress. "We hope to enlist the Government to the extent that it will make the first advance looking forward to an agreement among nations."

John Mitchell and General Ballington Booth were to have been speakers at tonight's session, but wired that they would be unable to attend. Mr. Mitchell because of pressing business and General Booth because of illness in his family. Dr. John Wesley Hill of New York was the principal speaker.

The time and place of the next session will be determined by the Committee of One Hundred. The present organization is to be permanent.

THE APPEAL TO GERMAN PRIDE.

The Germans have with remarkable plainness of speech criticised the recent shortcomings of their diplomats. But diplomacy that could not prepare a just and true answer to President WILSON'S note would, indeed, be woefully incompetent. The way is made not only plain, but easy. We may expect Germany to "disavow the acts of which the "Government of the United States "complains" because they are not to be defended. We have full warrant for the belief that she will "make "reparation so far as reparation is "possible for injuries which are with-"out measure," for, completely reversing the policy announced in the war zone declaration of Feb. 4, she has recently made known to us her willingness to assume responsibility for harm done to neutral commerce and to make compensation. That she will "take immediate steps to "prevent the recurrence of anything "so obviously subversive of the "principles of warfare" may with equal confidence be assumed, because the contrary assumption would imply that Germany has cut loose from all restraints of law, that she has made brutality her ally and will kill and destroy whoever comes in her way, friend and foe alike, until the world cowers before her and acknowledges her sway. That is too preposterous for anybody's belief. To announce such a determination would array the whole world against her, and the world in arms. Even if she were in dire present peril of utter defeat and overthrow she could not go to that extreme of madness.

What could she hope to gain by such a damning admission? To compel the United States and all other nations within the area of war's disturbance to take up arms against her would certainly not help her to victory. And the moral loss would be beyond all measure. Her place in the future would be that of a nation intensely disliked, distrusted, shunned, and put under perpetual bonds to keep the peace. The great German people could escape that fate only by driving their present rulers into banishment, by destroying imperialism and militarism root and branch, and by disclaiming approval of the savagery in spirit and in act that had brought them to ruin under the world's denunciation. The Hohenzollern dynasty will not thus write its own doom.

President WILSON'S note is an appeal to German pride. To German minds it calls vividly into view the nation's high traditions, its great past, its achievements as a leader in the ways of civilization; it forces them to take thought about the things that brought Germany to a place among the foremost in all that wins the world's admiration. It simply asks her to say where she stands, whether she is still the Germany honored among nations, or whether she has become a new Germany rushing headlong into dishonor and barbarism, whether she holds to her high ideals or has reverted to the ideals and the practices of the fifth century. Mr. WILSON has left her but one answer, a reasonable compliance with his demands.

There remains the use of submarines against merchantmen, which as the President declares cannot be continued "without an inevitable "violation of many sacred principles "of justice and humanity." It may well be doubted whether Germany will not reserve that point. To accept the President's position there, after having assented to what precedes it, would be to yield everything, and that would be a novel experience in diplomacy. We may well take it for granted that assurances will be given of the utmost diligence to avoid putting in jeopardy the lives or the rights of United States citizens. That is the least that could be done or said, but it is [illegible] that Mr. WILSON in this respect speaks not alone for the interests of the United States, but for "many sacred principles of justice and humanity," for law, for usage, for civilization itself. Germany could not clear herself of the charge of inhumanity by promising to take care that no further injury be done to us, there would remain the question of the interest of other neutrals, and she would still be in contempt of her own traditions. It might be hard for her to agree to make no further use against trade vessels of means of attack which by their very nature exclude that provision for the safety of passengers and crew which the law of nations demands, but it seems to us that it ought to be still harder for her to avow an intention to disregard law. Besides, the operations of her submarines, conspicuous as they have been made in the war news, and attended with no little success, have been but little more than an annoyance to England. They have not in any measurable degree advanced the objects for which Germany has made war. From that point of view they have been as ineffective as her Zeppelin raids.

Germany's gain by a frank and full compliance with the terms of Mr. WILSON'S note would be instant and immense. She would at once regain much that she has lost in the world's respect by the manner in which from the beginning she has carried on the war. She would thus give token of a determination to hold her place in civilization, there would be no more allusions to her as an outlaw nation. Her loss by refusal of compliance would be not less immediate, and it would be appalling. The neutral nations would then understand their duty.

THE LOST GARTERS.

The most noble and chivalric Order of the Garter, which has claimed a place in the daily chronicle of events because of the expulsion from it, by the British Sovereign who is its head, of his imperial and royal blood relations, the German Kaiser, Prince HENRY of Prussia, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, and the Duke of Cumberland, together with the Austrian Emperor, the King of Württemberg, and the Grand Duke of Hesse, is strangely associated in history with the Black Death, a plague which killed many English people in the fourteenth century. There is a legend, accepted by Bishop STUBBS as a fact, that EDWARD III.'s great festival, at which the Order originated, was held while the ravages of the Black Death were most terrific. Black Death is abroad in Europe now in a terrible form when the world is suddenly reminded of the existence of the ancient Order by the expulsion of some of its most distinguished members, and the removal of their special banners from over their stalls in St. George's Chapel at Windsor. The Garter is the most ancient of England's orders of knighthood, and the most exclusive. In recent years the extraordinary worth of a mere baronet has been recognized by the bestowal of the ribbon upon Sir EDWARD GREY, who is very much a man of the hour, but the other British members are highly favored Dukes, Marquises, and Earls, in addition to King EDWARD III.'s successor in the twentieth century, his eldest son, and the Queen and Queen Mother, as it were, ex officio. The Czar, the Emperor of Japan, and the Kings of Norway, Rumania, Spain, and Sweden remain to help maintain the royal dignity of the Order.

King GEORGE is not to be blamed for expelling enemies of his country from his most renowned Order, even if some of them are grandchildren of his own illustrious grandmother. As punishment, however, it will seem futile. The world is not thinking much just now of ancient orders of chivalry, or indeed of royal rulers when they are not directing the movements of armies and navies.

THE GERMAN-AMERICAN MYTH.

A genius for history, especially their own, ought to save the German people from certain grievous errors of assumption as to what may or may not be expected of the German-American element in the population of this country. The national ego of Germany is a wonderful thing, no less for what it represents as an ideal of unity than for what of tribal vanity, pride of separate origin, and local sovereignty was sacrificed to attain it. Not only is Germany today a State of twenty-six political divisions, (kingdoms, duchies, and grand duchies,) but many names are still in common use which refer to distinctive parts of the old Holy Roman Empire; there are others, such as Swabia, East Friesland, Lusatia, and Voigtland, which once had real territorial significance. She is a confederation of many parts, whose constituent people have subordinated their complex hereditary differences to an enlarged conception of an efficient and irresistible whole. And now the same people, who have carried that ideal of national unity so far and who boast of it so much are supposed to think that a large number of themselves, having voluntarily transferred their formal allegiance to another State, would not transfer also their spirit of loyalty, which, as one can see, is loyalty not to a place or a region, but to all the other people with whom you have cast your lot. They have supposed, moreover, that the progeny of these expatriated Germans, in the new land, would be loyal not to the people there but to those in the land of their parents' birth. That is for the Germans, under stress of emotion, to misunderstand and to belittle an ideal that has helped to make them great.

We do not misunderstand it so. There is no German-American element in our citizen population that would become "enemy" or "alien" under any conceivable circumstances. It is a pure myth. According to the 1910 census there were in the United States 2,500,000 persons of German birth. How many of them were naturalized the census takers did not learn. Perhaps one-half of them are citizens. Then there is a native-born population of German descent, (one or both parents German,) counted as 5,700,000. That is the second generation. To express the German-American population, the German born and the native born of German parents are added together, and the number, by the last census, was 8,200,000. By the same method of calculation the Irish-American population is 4,500,000; the English-American, 2,300,000; the Italian-American, 2,100,000, and the Russian-American, 2,750,000.

The German-American, therefore, is the largest single body of hyphenated population. But the mistake is to introduce the hyphen at all, especially as to the second generation. Only native-born Germans, of whom there were 2,500,000 in 1910 against 2,800,000 in 1900, may be called German-American; all the rest are American, whose loyalty was never transferred. It began here. The point we wish to emphasize is that so far from being a body which in the event of a crisis between the United States and any other nation would estrange itself or could by any outside or anti-American appeal be estranged in any degree, it is, because of considerations that bear upon Germany herself, a great weight for peace at the present time.

Everybody can understand how our German-born citizens and even their children would naturally sympathize with Germany in a war against the other peoples of Europe. We can understand how as between Germany and the Allies the blood relation, to the second generation, would pull the feelings. But if it should ever become necessary for them to make another kind of choice that spirit of loyalty which the German may very justly be proud of would determine the matter at once—for German-born citizens without doubt, and for their American-born progeny without question. The exceptions would be negligible. The Imperial Government's inevitable sense will enable it to see that German-Americanism in this country is a powerful factor for peace between the United States and Germany. For Germany to appeal to it in any other way would be very dangerous for Germany. The results would be bound to react upon her. She would alienate a very large body of natural sympathy and find in its place united Americanism. It is significant that so long as it was a question of siding with Germany against the Allies, German-American opinion in this country was very freely expressed, but that since nearer questions have been raised even the most ardent of pro-Germans have begun to emphasize the impossibility of a divided American household.

The economic relations existing between Germany and the United States are such weighty reasons for peace as would have seemed, until the world had lost its reason in war, utterly to forbid the thought of any alternative. The merchandise trade amounts to more than $500,000,000 a year. American securities are listed on the Berlin Boerse. German investors are large holders (how odd it seems!) of Bethlehem Steel stock, which has been rising on the war orders placed here by the Allies. The Deutsche Bank, through a branch in Wall Street, is a very large dealer in American investments. The German people's foreign investments in fixed securities and active business combined are perhaps 24,000,000,000 marks, ($6,000,000,000,) of which at least one-sixth might be taken as their investment in the United States alone.

RAILWAY RATES AND RISKS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that the Cummins law does no more than its language declares, that is, forbids railways to make contracts limiting their liability for loss or damage. It does not of itself make lawful the higher rates which had been authorized by the Commission in cases of unlimited liability. Neither does it authorize the railways to raise their rates. In fact, it is necessary to ask the courts what the Cummins act means and does. In the Commission's opinion, the charge for transportation is not altered by the annulment of the contract limiting risks. If risks are to be increased according to values, there is created a new question, the suitable addition to rates to compensate for the enlarged risk. The Commission will consider a suitable addition to rates on account of risks.

The practical effect to the railways depends more upon the amount of the addition than upon the method of reaching it. The Commission declares that there is nothing to show "any "intent or purpose on the part of Con-"gress to affect in any degree the ex-"isting rate charged by carriers for "transporting property"; then it proceeds to do what Congress did not intend by starting a process of raising rates by "a graduation of rates in ac-"cordance with the declared value of "the property transported." The new rates are not to be raised uniformly 10 per cent., the difference between the two old rates, but they are to be raised, it would seem. Thus a law designed to reduce rates in specific cases has raised rates in numerous cases, how numerous or how much cannot be known until after the devious procedure is completed.

Hereafter Senator CUMMINS probably will apply to the Commission if he wishes to alter the rates or conditions of transportation, or more probably he will let his constituents attend to their rate business themselves. It is a good plan for others to follow. The rate question will best be dealt with by the Commission alone.

A NOTEWORTHY MAGAZINE.

Subjects of great immediate interest, discussed from strongly individual points of view with force and lucidity, in the Magazine Section of THE SUNDAY TIMES tomorrow will include the new ideals that possess Italy in the present crisis, which form the subject of an article by ex-Mayor GEORGE B. MCCLELLAN, Professor of Economic History at Princeton, and Japan's policy with China, which FREDERICK MCCORMICK treats of from his own observations, reaching conclusions that may be considered disturbing. Major LANIER, who has seen service in the Philippines, will contribute an article on our Far Eastern possessions in which confirmed anti-imperialists may find comfort and food for much thought. The routine of life aboard a big American battleship, the manufacture and use of torpedoes, and other topics of similar import will be described by competent writers, and while Dr. NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER'S views of neutrality as a means of strengthening this country as a world power will be set forth in a report of an interview, an international lawyer will discuss the present status of international law. JOYCE KILMER will contribute a striking poem on the sinking of the Lusitania and Dr. VAN BUREN THORNE will write of a new treatment for inoperative cancer which promises to be a boon to humanity.

In other words, the Sunday Magazine will deal with important and timely subjects, and the writers will all be recognized specialists. There are two or more sides to every question. Each of these writers will present his own side clearly and with the direct force that makes what is written readable.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Document Without One Flaw.

There will certainly be in one part of Europe a considerable number of people for whom what may be called the substance of the President's "note" to the German Government will not be entirely satisfactory, and there are some in this country who, for the same reason—the difficulty of the task it imposes on them—will be of like opinion. Nobody anywhere, however, can find in its form, in its use of language as a means of expression, the slightest excuse for adverse criticism. What the President intended to say he said, but it is only on the second reading that one realizes, or even notices, the careful skill with which each word in the "note" was chosen and placed to produce exactly the purposed effect.

On ordinary occasions the President, contrary to common report and in spite of having been a "schoolmaster" for so many years, does not speak or write with attention at all meticulous to verbal niceties, and not infrequently he uses phrases inelegantly constructed or of a grammatical propriety at least dubious. In this instance not only did he feel the need of producing a perfect State paper, but he proved his competence by producing one that probably came as near to deserving that characterization as does any to be found in the archives of any nation.

By using a microscope there is to be discovered here and there what might possibly have been bettered. For example, as the President courteously fell in with the foreign custom of putting plural verbs after the word "Government," he should not, or at any rate he might not, have referred to the Imperial German Government's navy as "its navy." But that is indeed a trivial inconsistency, and the question as to whether collective nouns are singular or plural is to be answered according to the personal preference at the moment, and not by any standard of right and wrong.

The last sentence in the "note," quite apart from its grave significance, repays study, so wonderfully adroit is its formation. The use in it of "will" instead of "can" results in a combination of suavity and firmness—in the making inoffensive of a warning that is practically a threat—that would have been unattainable by any writer not at once fully aware of the seriousness of his undertaking and thoroughly able to meet all of its demands.

Here, Also, a Song Can Excite.

When Mme. MARTHE CHENAL, last Winter, sang the "Marseillaise" on the stage in Paris, she created, night after night, in the hearts and minds of her crowding auditors, an emotional storm of patriotic enthusiasm that demanded—and received—the use of all the descriptive powers possessed by the foreign correspondents in the French capital. They regarded her performance, probably not without reason, as a really important part of the military "situation," and gave her more than a little credit for helping to arouse the fervent devotion and readiness for self-sacrifice that marked the French people.

Mme. CHENAL has a voice and presence, and though something of her effectiveness was due to an adroit use of costume and scenery, the critics agreed that still more of it was the result of the utter sincerity with which her appeal was made.

Over here few of us are "Latin," and we are not participants in a great war, but nevertheless our emotions are at least ready to be stirred in much the same way as were those of the Parisians. More than that, Miss GERALDINE FARRAR, at the Metropolitan Opera House Thursday night, both proved our readiness to be moved and her own ability to repeat, in this same field, if occasion should arise, the triumph won by the French singer. "The Star-Spangled Banner" is not, it must be confessed, in either words or music, a means as well calculated as in the "Marseillaise" to inspire patriotic devotion, but it has merits, both intrinsic and from association, of no poor quality, and Miss FARRAR made them count to a degree that has a significance either ominous or reassuring, according to one's view of the future and its possibilities.

Are College Boys Now Different?

Some of us whose lingering in academic shades was done a good many years ago are deeply mystified—and, to tell the dreadful truth, are more than a little disquieted—by the news, coming now from one American college after another, of students who gather in great numbers and draw up and sign petitions to the President that half implore and half command him on no considerations to let this country be dragged into war.

There is something queer about these proceedings—something that seems to hint a change in college boys that has hitherto passed without notice.

Of course it is a fine thing to be wisely calm, and fine, also, to love peace and hate war, but—well, the college boys of other days were not given to demonstrations of just this sort. There was about them a certain pugnacity, a certain instinctive eagerness to get into any convenient trouble that took the form of combat, no matter what the kind. This was not wise, and it was not in all or even in many ways commendable, but it was Youth, while petitioning for peace, with a perilous implication in many cases of "at any price," that is, or used to be, Old Age.

So there be those who are wondering rather anxiously what has happened to put old heads on young shoulders. Those who thus wonder try to like the change, but they simply can't do it, and they suspect "acceleration" of some kind when heroes of the gridiron and the diamond and the track raise the noble but incongruous cry of "Safety first!"

FROHMAN.

A Tribute to His Memory from Francis Wilson.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To those of us who waited and hoped for intelligence of Charles Frohman's safety, the blow of his death is a sad one, indeed. It was hoping against hope, truly, that he might be rescued for, with the detriment of his lameness, he never had an equal chance with the others. Of one thing we may be proudly certain, and that is that he met the end courageously, calmly, for no man lived who accepted success or defeat with greater equanimity.

He was a real soldier in his recent painful illness and though constantly racked with pain, he uttered no word of complaint save for the bad luck that kept him on his back when he wanted to be on his feet. "They had all rung down the curtain on me," he said later on, seated in his office, "but I am here yet, and I propose to stay awhile."

Dear "C. F.," it has been such a little while. Scarcely compensatory for the suffering you had just gone through. Henry Arthur Jones has said beautifully what "C. F." meant to the entire English dramatic and theatrical world, that it is now mourning the loss of a true friend; and that may be repeated with emphasis as applied to American dramatists and actors.

"A business transaction with him became necessarily a deed of friendship." His word was his bond, and in a business relation of nearly ten years there was not a scratch of the pen between us and this, I find, was so in a majority of cases of those with whom he dealt.

In the particular world in which he lived it is not too much to say that Charles Frohman, "C. F.," as we called him, was the most highly respected and best loved man in America. This he attained by his integrity, his eminent fairness, his tact and consideration. He understood and appreciated the actor and made allowance for the much derided "temperamental strain" that manifests itself at rehearsals and at critical performances.

But though he understood and appreciated the genuine article, he was swift to detect and punish the pretender. Calling upon him recently in the interest of a professional association desiring his co-operation, he quite frankly declared his affection for the actor and cautioned me to be careful that both parties involved should be treated equitably. He knew the fallibility of human judgment and quite frankly admitted his misjudgment of plays that had and had not succeeded. He was gleeful in his contemplation of the Croesian fortune awaiting the individual who could "pick 'em every time."

It is safe to say that no dramatist ever felt that he "might have done better," once "C. F." had agreed to produce his play.

Charles Frohman was a man of very loveable qualities. He was swift to see and swift to decide. He had great courage and, finest of all, a delicious sense of humor which bore him through many difficulties. He had a good deal of native shrewdness and splendid courage. He was pleasantly frank and honest—surprisingly modest and generous—and the world is better for his having lived in it. Auf wiedersehen, C. F.

Red Men's Game.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reporting the decision of the Court of Appeals holding that the game laws of New York must be observed by Seneca Indians in seeking to enjoy the perpetual right reserved by that tribe to hunt and fish without restriction over lands ceded to Robert Morris by treaty with the United States, you add that the decision of the Court of Appeals settles the question.

Permit me to correct this error. Some TIMES readers will have an interest in the Six Nations people, and will regret to believe that the treaty rights of these Indians to fish and hunt Indian fashion, fish with spears if they wish, (a method quite as sportsmanlike as baited hook,) may be taken away by the arbitrary act of New York authorities. This case involves a Federal question in which State courts have no final word. I shall make every effort, as counsel for the Senecas, to have the case reviewed by the United States Supreme Court. The Senecas are confident that that court will do again what it has had occasion to do in the past—see to it that treaty rights of the Six Nations people—and these reserved fishing rights have been enjoyed for a century or more, unquestioned and uninterfered with until now by New Yorkers—are protected even as against the great State of New York.

A Demand for Small Boats.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the colossal death list of passengers on the Titanic and Lusitania, I hope, as an old ocean voyager, that the International Mercantile Marine is not contemplating 35,000-tonners for their proposed four new ships. Handy boats of 18 to 20 knots and not over 15,000 tons, something of the general design of the newest Atlantic Transport boats, but faster, to cross in seven to eight days, carrying one class of passengers only, would meet the requirements of most people. I should also think, if a Government subvention is sought to aid in building them, that our naval authorities would look on them with greater favor because of their availability for transport work.

Let the new boats have plenty of one-berth cabins and cut out the mahogany and cut-glass fittings. Serve simpler, better-cooked meals and—coffee fit to drink. Keep the general price of passage well under the $100 mark, fly the American flag, and these boats would be money-makers from the start.

JINGOISM VS. VAPORIZING.

Dr. Cooley Finds That Issues Are Becoming Beclouded.

Vassar College, May 13, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Surely these are days of discouragement in more ways than one; in the field of war discussion, for example. Is it possible that two such prominent men as Hudson Maxim and Dr. Merrill, in a debate on national defense, have no more helpful suggestions to offer than those reported in your issue of today? So "German militarism (according to Mr. Maxim) is the greatest economic institution in the world," and the true policy for the United States is that of "blood and iron!" Obvious, once you take the Munchausen attitude. The rate at which militarism is using up the past, present, and future capital of Europe does indeed witness to its economic bearings. Can it be that any sane man among us still regards war as a thing good in itself (at times), and not a dire disaster to be avoided at any cost short of dishonor or a worse war in future?

On the other hand, it is discouraging to hear such jingoism confronted with what seems to be, in the last analysis, a program of mere talk. Dr. Merrill makes some excellent proposals as to desirable American efforts in behalf of "moral and human considerations" among nations; but they appear to have little enough bearing upon our national safety. National outlay, in their behalf, is recommended in preference to "any amount of military and naval expenditure." But this latter expenditure goes toward safeguarding our homes, our lives, and our liberties, for which purpose apparently Dr. Merrill has only some new talking-shop device. Is it possible that any of us still believe that the least of military aggression is to be tamed by a mere display of sweet reasonableness? The young lady who once ruled Luxemburg tried that method one evening early in last August, and found it wholly futile.

Another discouraging utterance is that of Professor Wrong of Toronto University in your issue of May 8. He says—and as though journalistically inspired—"It is disappointing to have to admit that the peace will determine nothing in regard to armaments." If the Allies are successful "the treaty of peace will, it is likely, be limited to two things, national boundaries and the indemnities to be paid by the vanquished side"; that is, the usual ending up of a bloody scramble for advantage. If this is a true expression of Great Britain's purpose, it will be well for us to know it. She has claimed to be fighting the battle of popular government and civilization. If in fact, what she is after is merely to keep a buffer State between herself and Germany, and Antwerp from being turned into a pistol aimed at her head, it is likely to abate our sympathy with her and her allies very materially. We understand that motive, of course; but we also understand Germany's desire for better seaports and more scope in the world.

THE MASSACRE AT JAFFA.

What Germans Must Have Thought of Napoleon's Ruthless Militarism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In my last letter in re the Lusitania there was an inaccurate historical statement. The killing of prisoners by General Bonaparte—not then known as Napoleon—occurred before, not after, his repulse at Acre. They were captured at the storming of Jaffa, March 6, 1799, and were mostly Albanians and Arnouts, the rest Turks. They had been besieged in some old caravanseries and had surrendered to Eugene Beauharnais and another of Bonaparte's aides de camp. It was never contended that more than a part of the 4,000 had broken parole. They were all shot four days after surrender. The military exigencies were strong. The army could not spare a detachment to take them back to Egypt; if set free they would join the garrison of Acre or the clouds of Arabs which hung on the flanks of the little force engaged in a desperate venture; to push across desert places with 4,000 additional mouths to feed and water probably would wreck the adventure.

Upon this Alison thus comments: "The massacre of Jaffa is an eternal and ineffaceable blot on Napoleon's memory; and so it is considered by the ablest and most partial of his own military historians. The plea of expedience can never be admitted to extenuate a deed of cruelty."

But Alison was an Englishman. Will not some one who has more leisure than I have hunt up the comments of German historians, military and other, on the transaction? Especially would one like to see the published deliverances of the German patriots who a century ago raised their country from the dust into which she had been trampled under the heel of the Continental despot, and, under the glorious inspiration of Koerner's martial lyrics, joyously laid down their young lives at Lutzen and Bautzen, at Dresden and Leipsic. Members all of the Tugendbund, (the League of Virtue.) One of them I knew—Dr. Francis Lieber—and have heard him in a lecture room of Columbia University express himself as to "military necessities" in reference to the "massacre at Jaffa." He expressed himself with no uncertain sound.

What Does "Not Armed" Mean?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is my recollection that Dudley Field Malone, Collector at New York, made a statement recently to the effect that the Lusitania carried no armament on her last trip. I understand from some of his inspectors that guns having a bore of three inches or less are not considered as armament by the Customs Department. R. M.

New York, May 13, 1915.

Collector Malone was not at his home last night, but an officer of the Customs Service said that "guns having a bore of three inches or less" were considered as armament, and that the Lusitania carried no guns of any size. He repeated Collector Malone's statement and said that the Lusitania was not armed with guns having a bore of three inches or less or more.

An Important Difference.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The article which appeared in your paper yesterday morning (May 12) did not quote me correctly. What I said to your reporter was that Americans should not sail on ships belonging to belligerents. I did not say that I justified the sinking of the steamship Lusitania, and therefore ask you to kindly correct this statement in your next issue.

THE NO-FAITH DOCTRINE OF GERMANY.

Two Ways Only in Which This Country May Aid the Civilization of the White Race to Prevail Against It.

By CHARLES W. ELIOT,
President Emeritus of Harvard.

Cambridge, Mass., May 13, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The sinking of a great merchant vessel, carrying 2,500 noncombatant men, women, and children, without giving them any chance to save their lives, was in violation of long-standing conventions among civilized nations, concerning the conduct of naval warfare. The pre-existing conventions gave to a German vessel of war the right to destroy the Lusitania and her cargo, if it were impossible to carry her into port as a prize; but not to drown her passengers and crew. The pre-existing conventions or agreements were, however, entered into by the civilized nations when captures at sea were made by war vessels competent to take a prize into some port, or to take off the passengers and crew of the captured vessel.

The German Government now alleges that submarines are today the only vessels it can employ effectively for attack on British commerce in the declared war zone about the British Isles; since the rest of the German Navy cannot keep the seas in face of the superior British Navy. Germany further alleges that the present British blockade of German ports is conducted in a new way,—that is, by vessels which patrol the German coast at a greater distance from the actual harbors than was formerly the international practice; and hence, that Germany is justified in conducting her attack on British commerce in a novel way also. In short, Germany argues that her military necessities compel her to sink enemy commercial vessels without regard to the lives of passengers and crews, in spite of the fact that she was party to international agreements that no such act should be committed.

The lesson which the sinking of the Lusitania teaches is, therefore, this: Germany thinks it right to disregard on grounds of military necessity existing international conventions with regard to naval warfare, precisely as she disregarded the agreed-upon neutrality of Belgium on the ground of military necessity. As in the case of Belgium she had decided many years beforehand to violate the international neutrality agreement, and had made all her plans for reaching Paris in a few weeks by passing through Belgium, so on the sea she had decided months ago that the necessity of interfering as much as possible with British commerce and industries warrants her total disregard of the existing rules of naval warfare, and has deliberately contrived the sinking of merchant vessels without regard to the lives of the people on board.

Again, when Germany thought it necessary on her quick march toward Paris not only to crush the Belgian army but to terrify the noncombatant population of Belgium into complete submission by bombarding and burning cities, towns, and villages, by plundering and shooting noncombatants, by imposing heavy fines and ransoms, and by holding noncombatants as hostages for the peaceable behavior of all Belgian citizens, she disregarded all the conventions made by the civilized nations within seventy years for mitigating the horrors of war, and justified her action on the ground that it was a military necessity, since in no other way could she immediately secure the safety of her communications as she rushed on Paris. The civilized world had supposed that each nation would make war only on the public forces and resources of its antagonist; but last August Germany made ferocious war on noncombatants and private property.

The sinking of the Lusitania is another demonstration that the present German Government will not abide by any international contracts, treaties, or agreements, if they, at a given moment, would interfere with any military or naval course of action which the Government deems necessary.

These demonstrated policies and purposes of the German Empire raise the fundamental question—how is the civilization of the white race to be carried forward? How are the real welfare of that race and the happiness of the individuals that compose it to be hereafter furthered? Since the revolutions in England, America, and France, it has been supposed that civilization was to be advanced by international agreements or treaties, by the co-operation of the civilized nations in the gradual improvement of these agreements, and by the increasing practical effect given to them by nations acting in co-operation; but now comes the German Empire with its military force, immense in numbers and efficient beyond all former experience through the intelligent use for destructive purposes of the new powers attained by applied science, saying not only in words, but in terrible acts: "We shall not abide by any international contracts or agreements into which we may have previously entered, if at the passing moment they interfere or conflict with the most advantageous immediate use of our military and naval force." If this doctrine shall now prevail in Europe, the foundations of modern civilization and of all friendly and beneficial commerce the world over will be undermined.

The sinking of the Lusitania, therefore, makes perfectly clear the nature of the problem with which the three Allies in Europe are now struggling. They are resisting with all the weapons of war a nation which declares that its promises are good only till it is, in its own judgment, under the military necessity of breaking them.

The neutral nations are looking on at this tremendous conflict between good-faith nations and no-faith nations with intense anxiety and sorrow, but no longer in any doubt as to the nature of the issue. The sinking of the Lusitania has removed every doubt; because that was a deliberate act in full sight of the world, and of a nature not to be obscured or confused by conflicting testimonies or questions about possible exaggeration of outrages or about official responsibility for them. The sinking of the Lusitania was an act which outraged not only the existing conventions of the civilized world in regard to naval warfare, but the moral feelings of present civilized society.

The neutral nations and some of the belligerent nations feel another strong objection to the present German way of conducting war on land and sea, namely, that it brutalizes the soldier and the sailor to an unprecedented degree. English, French, and Russian soldiers on the one side can contend with German, Austrian, and Turkish soldiers on the other with the utmost fierceness from trenches or in the open, use new and old weapons of destruction, and kill and wound each other with equal ardor and resolution, and yet not be brutalized or degraded in their moral nature, if they fight from love of country or with self-sacrificing loyalty to its spiritual ideals; but neither soldiers nor sailors can attack defenseless noncombatants, systematically destroy towns and villages, and put to death captured men, women, and children without falling in their moral nature before the brutes. That he obeyed orders will not save from moral ruin the soldier or sailor who does such deeds. He should have refused to obey such orders and taken the consequences. This is true even of the privates, but more emphatically of the officers. The white race has often been proud of the way in which its soldiers and sailors have fought in many causes—good, bad, and indifferent; because they fought bravely, took defeat resolutely, and showed humanity after victory. The German method of conducting war omits chivalry, mercy, and humanity, and thereby degrades the German nation and any other nation which sympathizes with it or supports its methods. It is no answer to the world's objection to the sinking of the Lusitania that Great Britain uses its navy to cut off from Germany food and needed supplies for its industries, for that is a recognized and effective method of warfare; whereas the sinking of an occasional merchant ship with its passengers and crew is a method of warfare nowhere effective, and almost universally condemned. If war, with its inevitable stratagems, ambuscades, and lies must continue to be the arbiter in international disputes, it is certainly desirable that such magnanimity in war as the conventions of the last century made possible should not be lost because of Germany's behavior in the present European convulsion. It is also desirable to reaffirm with all possible emphasis that fidelity to international agreements is the taproot of human progress.

On the supposition that the people of the United States have learned the lesson of the Lusitania, so far as an understanding of the issues at stake in this gigantic war is concerned, can they also get from it any guidance in regard to their own relation to the fateful struggle? Apparently, not yet. With practical unanimity the American people will henceforth heartily desire the success of the Allies, and the decisive defeat of Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Turkey. With practical unanimity they will support whatever action the Administration at Washington shall decide to take in the immediate emergency; but at present they do not feel that they know whether they can best promote the defeat of the Triple Alliance of Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Turkey by remaining neutral or by taking active part in the conflict. Unless a dismemberment of Austria-Hungary is brought about by Italy and Rumania or some other Balkan State entering the war on the side of the Allies, it now seems as if neither party would acknowledge defeat until exhausted or brought to a sudden moral collapse. Exhaustion in war can best be prevented by maintaining in activity the domestic industries and general productiveness of the nation involved in war and those of the neutral nations which are in position to feed it, and manufacture for it munitions, clothing, and the other supplies that war demands. While remaining strictly neutral, North and South America can be of great service to the Allies. To be sure, as a neutral the United States will be obliged to give some aid to Germany and her allies, such for example as harboring the interned commercial fleet of Germany; but this aid will be comparatively insignificant. The services which the American republics can thus render to the cause of liberty and civilization are probably more considerable than any they could render by direct contributions of military or naval force. Kept free from the drain of war, the republics will be better able to supply food, clothing, munitions, and money to the Allies both during the war and after the conclusion of peace.

On the whole, the wisest thing the neutral nations can do, which are remote from the theatres of war, and have no territorial advantages to seek at the coming of peace, is probably to defend vigorously and with the utmost sincerity and frankness all the existing rights of neutrals. By acting thus in the present case they will promote national righteousness and hinder national depravity, discourage, for the future, domination by any single great power in any part of the world, and help the cause of civilization by strengthening the just liberty and independence of many nations—large and small, and of different capacities and experiences—which may reasonably hope, if the Prussian terror can be abolished, to live together in peaceful co-operation for the common good.

SUFFERING IN SAMOA.

The Cyclone-Swept Island Destitute of Food Supplies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the midst of all the relief work that is being done for Europe the American Red Cross has not forgotten the needs that may lie within our own border. A serious cyclone occurred in January on one of the Samoan Islands, and an appeal was made through the Navy Department to the Red Cross to be of some assistance. An interesting report has just been received from Governor Poyer, the Governor of American Samoa, dated March 26, which I quote:

"The Secretary of the Navy has advised me by radiogram that the Red Cross Society has made a contribution of $2,000 for the relief of the people of Manua Islands of American Samoa. I desire, as Governor, to express to the society the very great appreciation of the people of this colony for this contribution. The inhabitants of the islands which have been completely devastated by the recent hurricane number 2,180. They are about seventy miles away, and are wholly dependent upon us for care and food supplies. Soon after my arrival here, the U. S. S. Princeton left on a relief trip with stores. I made the trip to make a personal inspection of conditions. The contrast between the appearance of this island, with its dense, luxuriant tropical growth, and the desolate, bare appearance of the Manua Islands is impressive and pathetic. All houses had been totally destroyed. Cocoanut trees by the thousands were uprooted, and food plants and practically all vegetation torn from the ground and blown away. There was so little left that there was not enough to plant for a new crop, and fresh plantings had to be sent from this island.

"I am further advised by the Secretary that Congress has made an appropriation of $10,000 for relief measures. This will make available a total of $12,000. It is estimated that it will be about eight months before a new crop of food products will mature and the people be again self-supporting. This will allow us to expend an average of about 2.4 cents per day per person. The people of this island are contributing generously of their own native food."

GIRLS AS ANIMALS IN SOCIETY CIRCUS

Yonkers Misses and Matrons Impersonate Bears and Clowns in Street Parade.

MAYOR HEADS PROCESSION

Freaks a Feature of the Benefit for St. John's Riverside Hospital in Armory.

More than 500 persons took part yesterday in the Society Circus parade in Yonkers, which had in it about 100 society girls and matrons of this city dressed fantastically—some as clowns, bears, and Yama Yama girls, before the circus began at the Tenth Regiment Armory in Nepperhan Avenue.

Some of those in the parade were made up as animals and created much merriment as they passed along the streets. The parade was headed by Mayor Lennon and Chief of Police Wolff.

The circus is given by all the social organizations of Yonkers, and is for the benefit of the Children's Pavilion of St. John's Riverside Hospital. It will close on Saturday night.

After parading through the principal streets of the city with brass bands the procession ended at the armory. There side shows, fortune teller booths and freaks of all kinds were on exhibition, including Maud the Hee Haw, the Lady and the Lion, Buffalo Bill, and Alkali Ike.

In front of a booth was a pretty society bud who sold kisses at 10 cents each. On the inside those who paid the fee, instead of meeting a pretty girl, were confronted with a big, husky man.

This is the first year of the society circus, and it will be a permanent event to be held each May.

COACH LIBERTY'S FIRST RUN

Miss Alexander's Party Goes to White Plains—Miss Hollins Tools.

Miss Harriet Alexander engaged the coach Liberty yesterday for its first day's run from the Biltmore to the Gedney Farms Hotel in White Plains, N. Y., and was hostess to a small party. Miss Marion Hollins tooled the coach from the starting point, and Morris Howlett was on the box. Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Miss Janetta Alexander, Miss Mary C. Alexander, Francis R. Appleton, Francis Roche, and Schuyler Parson, Jr., were the other members of the party.

The route of the coach was up Fifth Avenue to Central Park, along the boulevard to Williamsbridge, where a change of horses was made, and through Mamaroneck to Gedney Farms, where luncheon was served. The return trip was made over the same route, finishing at 6 o'clock.

The coach is to make a daily run, with Morris Howlett and C. Davies Tainter alternating at tooling the coach.

AUSTRIAN OFFICE IN LENOX.

Ambassador Dumba Leases Manatuck Farm, Near Stockbridge.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, May 14.—Austrian Ambassador and Mme. Constantin Theodor Dumba have taken a lease of Manatuck Farm, the country place of Mrs. Lemuel Bolton Bangs of New York, a mile and a half north of Stockbridge, on the Lenox Road. The Ambassador will establish the embassy in Lenox, and has leased the Field cottage as the headquarters. Most of the staff will be at the Curtis Hotel for the season. Mrs. Bangs will go to Murray Bay, in the Thousand Islands, to pass the Summer.

Mrs. Frank K. Sturgis has arrived at Clipston Grange for the early Summer. In July Mrs. Sturgis will go to Newport for two months.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Paterson, who passed the Winter in Augusta, Ga., arrived at Blantyre tonight for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Mellen have opened their country place, Council Hill, in Stockbridge.

Miss Symphorosa Bristed, who has been in town since Mr. and Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed opened Lakeside, arrived at the Bristed country place today.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Blagden have arrived in Stockbridge for the season.

Mrs. Joseph S. Whistler, who was in Bermuda for the Winter, has come to Plumsted, her country place.

The Misses Kate S. and Maud Buckingham arrived today at the Curtis Hotel. They are to open their Bald Head Farm.

Mrs. Joseph N. Pew of Philadelphia, Thatcher M. Adams of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Bliss, touring, with the Misses Ellen Farnsworth, Isabel Stearns, and Mary Clavel of Boston, are at the Curtis Hotel.

A LINE TO MOUNTAIN TOP.

Asheville Tourists Can Visit Mount Mitchell by Logging Railroad.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 14.—Railroad service to the top of Mount Mitchell, the highest point east of the Rocky Mountains, will be inaugurated over the logging railroad, beginning next Tuesday. The railroad will carry passengers to Mitchell Ridge, about three-quarters of a mile from the top of the peak, and a good trail leads from the road to the peak.

This throws open another historic point in Western North Carolina to the tourist, making easily accessible a peak that heretofore has been reached only by hard climbing or riding a mule or horse from Black Mountain or some nearby point. The ability to make the trip in one day will doubtless attract hundreds of tourists who will wish to take advantage of the chance to visit the highest point east of the Rockies.

Those desiring to remain over night at the peak will be accommodated at the rustic inn near the summit.

A Dance at Baltusrol Golf Club.

A subscription dance was held last night at the Baltusrol Golf Club, Baltusrol, N. J., and was preceded by several dinners at the club house. Mrs. Charles E. Van Vleck, Jr., of Short Hills had as her guests at dinner Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Kane, Mr. and Mrs. William Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kerr, Miss Carola Williams, Theodore Crane, and John Elliott.

Among those at the dance were Mrs. Richard A. Peabody, Miss Constance Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Browne, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Mapes, Mrs. Edward McVickar, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barclay, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Onativia, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Symington, Mr. and Mrs. S. Oakley Vander Poel, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Van Liew, Mrs. Parker Page, Miss Lois Page, and Miss Constance Morgan.

T. B. Barry's Musicale Tonight.

Thomas B. Barry, the son of Major Gen. Barry, will give a musicale, followed by dancing, this evening at his apartment, 300 West Forty-ninth Street. The artists will include Paul Leyssac, who will recite French poems, with piano accompaniment; Arvid Paulsson, who will give Swedish character impersonations; Mana Zucca, who will sing, and pianologues by Augusta Glose. The guests invited include many from Governors Island, where General Barry was stationed before he went to the Philippines as commanding officer, and some of the officers on the visiting battleship

MISS WANAMAKER TO WED.

Daughter of Rodman Wanamaker Engaged to Gurnee Mann.

The engagement of Miss Marie Louise Wanamaker, the daughter of Rodman Wanamaker by his first wife, who was a Miss Henry, to Gurnee Munn, a son of Mrs. Charles A. Munn of Washington, D. C., has been announced.

Miss Wanamaker was introduced last year by her aunt, Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton of Philadelphia. She is a granddaughter of John Wanamaker and of Charles Ferdinand Henry of Philadelphia. Miss Wanamaker's elder sister married Arturo de Hereen, a son of Count Hereen, in Paris several years ago. Her stepmother was formerly Miss Violet Cruger, the daughter of Mrs. J. Frederic Tams by her first husband, Eugene Cruger.

Mr. Munn's brother, Charles A. Munn, Jr., married Miss Mary Astor Paul of Philadelphia, and his sister, Miss Gladys Munn, became the bride of Charles M. Amory of Boston. Ector O. Munn is another brother. The Wanamakers have a villa at Tuxedo.

MISS CLARK'S BRIDAL PARTY.

Plans for Her Marriage to Clinton G. Abbott on May 18.

The plans for the wedding of Miss Dorothy Clark, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hawkins Clark, and Clinton G. Abbott, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lowe Abbott, have been completed. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock on Tuesday, May 18, in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, West Sixty-ninth Street, and the Rev. Dr. Nathan Seagle will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Henry Evertson Cobb of the Collegiate Dutch Reformed Church.

Miss Clark will have her young sister, Miss Lois Clark, as her maid of honor, and the Misses Grace B. Rogers, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noah C. Rogers, and Grace Abbott, a sister of the bridegroom, are to be the bridesmaids. Mr. Abbott will have his brother, Clarence Abbott, as his best man, and the ushers selected are Maunsell S. Crosby, Charles E. Morrison, Edward Phillips, Jr., and J. Dunham Townsend.

The ceremony will be followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents, 21 West Sixty-eighth Street.

James-O'Brien Wedding on June 8.

The marriage of Miss Rosalie O'Brien and Dr. Henry James of this city, a son of the late Nathaniel James of Baltimore, will take place quietly on Tuesday, June 8, at the home of the bride's parents, ex-Justice Morgan J. O'Brien and Mrs. O'Brien, 729 Park Avenue. Miss O'Brien will have her cousin, Miss Mercedes Crimmins, a daughter of John D. Crimmins, as her only attendant, and Dr. James's brother, Samuel W. James, is to be his best man. There will probably be no ushers, as relatives only are being asked to the ceremony.

SOCIAL LIFE IN NEWPORT.

Sir Arthur and Lady Herbert Are Visiting Mrs. T. Shaw Safe.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 14.—George Peabody Eustis of Washington is at his new home here inspecting improvements.

Lispenard Stewart arrives at White Lodge next week.

Elisha Dyer and Paul A. Andrews have returned from New York for the week-end.

Mrs. Harriet F. Brownell and Miss Alice Brownell of Providence are occupying their Summer residence.

Mrs. Andrew C. Dulles and Mr. and Mrs. Ettore R. Fontana of Philadelphia are at Rosevale for the Summer.

Mrs George A. Huhn and Miss Huhn of Philadelphia are occupying the Cadwalader cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish plan coming to Crossways June 20.

Sir Arthur and Lady Herbert of England arrived tonight to visit the latter's sister, Mrs. T. Shaw Safe.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas O. Selfridge of Washington will arrive at their Jamestown residence this month, as will Rear Admiral and Mrs. Seaton Schroeder and the Misses Schroeder.

Captain and Mrs. Hugh L. Willoughby of Philadelphia will have as guests for the Summer Mr. and Mrs. Hugh L. Willoughby, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. James K. Clarke of Philadelphia.

The Ledges is ready for Mr. and Mrs. Howard G. Cushing of New York.

Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss is expected tomorrow for the Summer.

Mrs. Thomas J. Emery of Cincinnati will arrive at Mariemont tomorrow.

Mrs. John Rodgers, Jr., entertained a card party this afternoon.

Mrs. John Nicholas Brown and her son returned from California today.

The Misses Edith Bangs and Katherine E. Bullard of Boston are at the Muenchinger King.

The clubhouse of the Newport Golf Club opens tomorrow.

CONCERTS AT SING SING.

Prison Orchestra to Play at a Program of Songs on Monday.

A series of weekly concerts are to be held at Sing Sing Prison by Warden Thomas Mott Osborne. On Monday night Mrs. Condé Nast will appear in a program of songs, assisted by David Hochstein, the violinist, and Richard Epstein, at the piano.

In order to permit all of the 1,700 prisoners to hear the concert, it will be repeated to an audience of two shifts. The prison orchestra, of twenty pieces, will also play. Translation in French, Italian, and German of the words of the songs are to appear on the printed programs.

Greek Play in Yale Bowl Today.

A large delegation will go from New York to New Haven today to see the first performance of the Greek drama, "Iphigenia in Tauris," to be given under the direction of Granville Barker in the Yale Bowl. The New Haven railroad has provided extra cars to accommodate the crowd, the majority of whom will leave about noon. The performance will begin about 4 o'clock and will end about sundown, according to the ancient custom.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The date for Clayton Hamilton's lecture on "The Little Theatre—How Can It Grow Up?" to the subscribers of the Washington Square Players is Sunday afternoon, May 23, instead of tomorrow, as previously announced.

So many requests have been received by the Garrick Producing Company for an evening performance of "Candida," which will be revived by Arnold Daly in the Park Theatre Tuesday afternoon for a series of four matinees, that it is probable one will be arranged. This will depend on whether Dorothy Donnelly, who will play her original role of Candida, can obtain her release from "The Song of Songs" for one night.

Dr. Anselm Goetzl, one of Andreas Dippel's conductors, has been engaged to conduct the orchestra that will play during the Summer season for the movies in Madison Square Garden.

NEW CANCER CURE CALLED A SUCCESS

Brilliant Results Obtained at the Polyclinic Hospital in Some Thirty Cases.

PLAN FOR FREE TREATMENT

Austrian Chemist's Discovery Also Tried Out at the General Memorial Hospital.

Dr. S. P. Beebe, Professor of Experimental Therapeutics at Cornell University Medical College, presents in today's issue of The New York Medical Journal a preliminary report of a treatment for inoperable cancer. The results of its administration have been so marked that he says he has "not seen heretofore such consistent improvement, of the character mentioned, follow in the type of patients cited by the use of other known remedies." Dr. Beebe is widely known as an authority on cancer and its treatment.

The tests of this remedy have been carried out at the General Memorial Hospital at 106th Street and Central Park West, an institution devoted exclusively to the treatment of cancerous affections, and at the Polyclinic Hospital at 345 West Fiftieth Street. The use of the remedy at the General Memorial Hospital received its first publicity in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Feb. 19 last.

The Medical Record of March 6 last published a letter signed with the names of four members of the Medical Board of the General Memorial Hospital, of which Dr. Beebe's is one, denying nearly all of the statements contained in the article in THE TIMES. It was stated in THE TIMES, for instance, that "it is the opinion of those watching the effects of the new serum that it has already superseded the use of radium and X-rays." To this the letter in The Medical Record replied: "No such opinion is held by any member of the board regarding any treatment ever employed at this hospital."

THE TIMES erred in calling the remedy a serum, but it is evident from Dr. Beebe's report that at least one member of the Board does consider the new treatment superior to radium and the X-ray treatment.

The letter in The Medical Record further stated: "The article imputes to us the belief that recurrences after disappearance of cancer under radium treatment are frequent and sometimes more malignant than the original disease. We disclaim any responsibility whatever for this opinion, and are not prepared to express judgment on the ultimate effects of radium."

Times Statement Justified.

Once more, the remarks of Dr. Beebe in his report can only lead to the conclusion that the original statement in THE TIMES is justified by the views now expressed by at least one member of the Board.

Recent investigations by both the Harvard Cancer Commission and the Crocker Cancer Research Fund of Columbia University have shown that radium's chief value is in superficial growths and that radio-activity from this element does not reach far enough to destroy the more remote cells in deep-seated cancer.

The new remedy has been used at the Polyclinic Hospital without any other accessory treatment, such as X-rays, radium, vaccines, toxins, or sera, and the results have been much more brilliant than those obtained at the General Memorial Hospital, where various forms of treatment were used in conjunction with it.

It was learned last night that upward of thirty cases of inoperable and incurable cancer had been treated at the Polyclinic Hospital with the remedy under the joint supervision of Dr. Beebe and Dr. J. Wallace Beveridge, and that not a death from cancer had occurred in the institution since the remedy was introduced there. One patient died of Bright's disease, and he was fatally ill with it when he entered the institution. The majority of these patients have already been discharged as recovered, but the physicians hold that sufficient time has not elapsed to show whether an actual cure has been effected in any of them.

The new treatment as used at present is a liquid extract derived from several drugs of vegetable origin. It is administered with the hypodermic needle, and has been used both by injection into the minor mass itself and subcutaneously into the arm as formerly, (and in nearly all of the cases at the General Memorial Hospital,) it was used as a local application in the form of a plaster or poultice and taken internally either as a liquid or as a pill.

Discoverer is an Austrian.

The discoverer of the remedy is Alexander Horovitz, Ph. D., an Austrian chemist and biologist, who carried on his preliminary studies in his native country. He has been carrying on experimental work for the purpose of improving the method of treatment for the last year, under the direction of Dr. Beebe and Dr. Beveridge. The result has been that the subcutaneous method of treatment has been evolved.

A country-wide plan for the free treatment of cancer patients is being worked out. Three of the largest hospitals in this city are to be the centres of treatment here, but if the selection has been made it could not be learned last night. Other hospitals in all of the larger cities in the United States will be kept supplied with the remedy for free treatment. S. M. Noyes, Treasurer of the Wheeling Steel Casting Company of Wheeling, W. Va., will supervise the distribution of the remedy to the various institutions selected. He will have an office at 7 East Thirty-eighth Street. It was said last night that Mr. Noyes had undertaken this work purely as a humanitarian project.

In common with other students of cancer, Dr. Beebe recalls that other widely-heralded remedies have ultimately failed, and hence he writes with great reserve.

He first gives the details of three cases of superficial cancer treated outside the hospital. One of six years' standing healed completely in eight weeks. A second, which apparently had been retarded by over-exposure to X-rays, healed in two and a half months and remains healed, a period of six months having elapsed. A third, of eleven years' standing, healed in six weeks and remained healed.

Composition of Remedy.

The second group was treated at the General Memorial Hospital. It comprised several of the worst possible recurrent and inoperable cases, all incurable. The majority of them died, some of hemorrhages as the result of the denudation of large bloodvessels. These cases were all treated with other remedies besides that devised by Dr. Horovitz. One of these cases was treated with radium, "which produced a markedly beneficial effect, with almost complete healing over the surface of the growth. But, unfortunately, a few weeks later the tumor recurred, growing with unusual rapidity, in spite of the heretofore useful methods of treatment."

The sufferings of these patients were greatly modified by the treatment, and in a majority of them there was a marked regression of the tumor mass.

The Polyclinic cases were "in somewhat sharp contrast" to the General Memorial Hospital group of cases. They were treated entirely by hypodermic injection of the extract. They included patients with malignant sarcoma, starting in an operative scar on the back due to the removal of a kidney, inoperable recurrent carcinoma of the breast, and carcinoma of the bladder. The latter died of Bright's disease. The others have recovered.

The remedy is made from the following substances: Menyanthes trifoliate, Melilotus officinalis, Mentha crispa, Brassica alba, Anemone hepatica, Viola tricolar, Anthemis, Frustus colocynthidis, Lignum quassiat, Urtica dioica, Radix rhei, and Hedge hyssop.

Two years ago Dr. Horovitz asked Dr. James Ewing, Professor of Pathology at Cornell Medical College and Chairman of the Medical Board of the General Memorial Hospital, and Dr. Beebe to investigate the treatment. They were not impressed with it, however, until repeated examinations of patients were made.

It is said that the remedy attacks the growths in a uniform manner, no matter where they are located.

MRS. BOWEN WINS A CUP.

Victor in Jumping Contest at Capital Horse Show—Other Winners.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Visitors to the Capital City Horse Show saw the best exhibition of the week when the championship contests for hunters, saddle, and harness horses were run off with great eclat at the close of the program.

In the entries, Mrs. William F. Hitt again took a blue ribbon and purse for Judge W. H. Moore of New York. She drove a pair, with the second honors going to W. A. Lieber of Bryn Mawr.

Mrs. Hitt, Mrs. Sinclair Bowen, Mrs. Allen Potts, Miss Helen Buchanan, and Miss Mildred Greble all participated in the exhibition for hunters. Mrs. Hitt, riding her own horses, took two purses with blue and yellow ribbons, respectively, in the ladies' hunter. In the jumping contest for horses owned by members of the Riding and Hunt Club, Mrs. Bowen took the cup presented by John O. Evans, on Colonel Thompson's Doctor Fiz. Colonel Thompson's Toronto took second place in this class. Mrs. Allen Potts took another ribbon with Acme, while several additional blues and reds were taken by the McLean stable, by the Stronia Farm horses and by the Homewood stables.

Although the withdrawal of the Oakland Farm horses entered in the name of the late Alfred G. Vanderbilt was a loss to the show, the large number of entries from the Pabst Stock Farm in Wisconsin, the Gerald T. Hanley horses from Providence, R. I.; the Ivers horses of New Bedford, and the large stable of John L. Bushnell from Springfield, Ohio, made this one of the best exhibitions Washington has ever known.

The attendance today was remarkable for the large number of army officers and their families as well as for representatives from all the Virginia Hunt Clubs. Colonel and Mrs. Robert M. Thompson entertained a large party of friends, as did Rear Admiral and Mrs. Brownson, General James A. Buchanan and Miss Buchanan, Rear Admiral and Mrs. W. H. Emory, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Richardson Clover, General and Mrs. A. Johnson, Pay Director and Mrs. Francis Nash, Colonel and Mrs. Charles Treat, Colonel Wilder, Captain William Mitchell, Captain Guy Cushman, Major General and Mrs. George Barnett, Captain Duncan Elliot, Captain Edward St. J. Greble and Miss Mildred Greble, Captain Philip H. Sheridan, Captain Sidney Haight, and Commodore and Mrs. Archibald A. Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry White, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sothern, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Seaton Schroeder, Mrs. James W. CENSUS OF CITY SAFES.

Commissioner Starts Three Novelties in Police Work.

A general order was sent to all precinct commanders yesterday to compile a list of all buildings containing safes, and in what part of the building they are located; also a list of alleyways and unguarded windows and vacant lofts. It is the purpose of Commissioner Woods to have all safes placed where they can be under the eyes of patrolmen from the street, and to keep a record of firms employing private watchmen.

The Commissioner has asked the Civil Service Commission that a rating in examinations be given for good marksmanship and good police work. Once a week the policemen will practice shooting in the various armories.

Next Monday morning twenty patrolmen from various precincts will assemble at Police Headquarters, and for thirty days will be instructed in methods of detective work. They will accompany the various squads and will observe the older detectives at work in the mornings, and in the afternoons will hear lectures given by Inspectors Faurot and Cray and Captain Dunn.

MASS MEETING FOR FRANK.

Big Gathering Planned in Minneapolis for Sunday Afternoon.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 14.—A public mass meeting to ask the Governor of Georgia to commute Leo M. Frank's death sentence to life imprisonment will be held in this city Sunday afternoon.

Prominent speakers will tell of the trial of Frank and of the many injustices to which it is alleged he was subjected because of the high racial feeling in the South. Dr. S. N. Deinard will preside.

WHITMAN'S PRUNING A JOKE TO WAGNER

Taxpayers' Alliance Demands That Governor Veto Direct Tax Bill

OR CALL SPECIAL SESSION

Assemblyman Smith Joins Senator in Urging Increased City Representation in Legislature.

Robert F. Wagner, Tammany minority leader of the Senate, last night characterized Governor Whitman's pruning of the State financial bills as a "sorry joke."

"And so he has trimmed them a million and a half—a million and a half off seventy million," he said. "A million and a half is one-tenth of the increase of appropriations over last year; it's one-twelfth of the unnecessary direct tax the country legislators put over. A million and a half the Governor has cut. That's amusing; Glynn cut $11,000,000. You taxpayers sit down and figure it out how much that $1,500,000 will reduce your tax rate."

The former acting Lieutenant Governor was speaking at a mass meeting of taxpayers of the Bronx under the direction of the Taxpayers' Alliance, composed of forty organizations, at McKinley Square Casino, 169th Street and Boston Road.

"I have been as near Governor as I probably will ever be," continued Senator Wagner, "but I would like to be Governor just long enough in the year of our Lord 1915 to get at those appropriations. I would prove to the people of the State that I could obviate the necessity for the direct tax of $20,000,000 without impairing one bit the efficiency of the State Government. It can be done, I tell you. Make your protests so strong that they cannot be ignored."

At the conclusion of the meeting a resolution was adopted calling on the Governor to veto the Direct Tax bill. An alternative request was that he cut the appropriation bills to a point where a smaller tax would suffice and that he then call a special session of the Legislature to pass a measure for a reduced direct tax. The Governor may veto the Direct Tax bill, but he may not change any of the provisions.

Calls It a Piece of Politics.

"This whole thing of appropriations beyond all record," said Senator Wagner, "this proposition of a direct tax is all a big piece of politics to make the administration look big next year when the treasuries of departments to be filled to overflowing with cash this year will not need much replenishing. Hence there will be a small appropriation total and the Republicans will point to it and say, 'Just see what we have done.'

"This program is based on the claim that this year's big appropriations were occasioned by the Democrats' last year not appropriating enough."

"That's a lie," he shouted at the top of his voice. "That's a lie, and the men who spoke it at Albany knew it was a lie when they said it. It's a big political plot, that's all, and New York City must foot the bill—must foot the bill to make the political fortunes of the Republican country legislator. I don't wonder that they disregard New York City's pleas when these things happen and the voters down here turn around and elect Republican Assemblymen. That's not the way to better matters."

Senator Wagner attacked the city administration when he said that the high State tax was the harder for the taxpayers to pay because of the great $200,000,000 budget of the city, which owed its size in part to the extravagance of the administration of Mayor Mitchel, he asserted.

"This is the highest direct tax ever levied in this State," went on Senator Wagner. "And it isn't necessary, while the others were. It means a 10 to 15 per cent. increase in taxes for all of you, and I have only to refer you to the records of the Controller to show that it will be confiscatory in many instances—instances where the property just carries itself now."

Smith Defends Comments.

Minority Leader Alfred E. Smith of the Assembly followed Senator Wagner with a list of figures to show that the Democrats did not leave any deficiencies, by which the Republicans justified the high appropriations and the direct tax, and gave his ideas of how the Governor could trim the appropriations to make the direct tax unnecessary.

He joined Senator Wagner in a plea for representation in the Legislature according to population, which would give New York City control of the Legislature. Mr. Smith said New York City would never get a square deal until it is rid of control at Albany by expert up-State politicians. It is no question of party, he said.

"It's the country against the city," said he, "and the men who ran the last Constitutional Convention were from the country. They put in a provision that no two counties separated by a river should ever control the Legislature. They didn't mention New York City, but it was all the same. Here's the result of all this. Putnam County gets a legislator for its 8,000; I represent 63,000. The votes in Albany are all the same. Can you justify that—you can't unless you are a country legislator. And New York City can't win, except with the votes.

"When you start an argument for New York in the Legislature the door is blocked with country legislators, who don't care to listen. They get a call from Painted Post, or Horse's Neck that the pet cow is missing. And New York gets a lemon. When they want anything like a bridge over Mud Creek the bugle sounds and they come along and vote. Reason don't count—'pork' does.

Pokes Fun at Country Members.

"When Mayor Mitchel wanted to go to Albany to protest against New York City's paying 75 per cent. of up-State 'pork,' and getting not one cent here, like the lion tamers of old the country fellows said, 'Sure. Let him come.' They were willing to buy a drink down at the Ten Eyck, or to slop over eight ways in telling us what good fellows we were, but when it came to changing the tax law, they stuck their thumbs in their vest armholes, and with that affable manner acquired in youth when they sat around the grocery stove and discussed the Government of the State, told the Mayor there was nothing doing.

"Something has got to be done to prevent the squandering of State money of which New York City pays 75 per cent. and gets almost none in return. Get back of the Constitutional amendment for fair representation at Albany and the problem will solve itself."

The meeting was opened by Edward Pollak, Registrar of Bronx County. Ex-Senator A. J. Griffin was elected Chairman. In his speech he referred to the direct tax as a "stupendous outrage against New York City." He is a delegate to the Constitutional Convention and pledged his vote for representation at Albany according to population instead of the present apportionment, under which the city cannot control.

CHARITIES.

WE have the equipment, system, environment, all that is required to do efficient work, except money enough to meet the bills.

Every available inch of space is now being used. Lack of means may result in keeping beds empty, thus denying a chance of life to some man whose family is deprived of the wage earner; some woman whose children have had to be placed in institutions; a child who might be cured, at the right time, but be, ever after, a public charge, if denied.

Gifts, large or small, will give hope, perhaps life, to some one who sorely needs a helping hand NOW. Send what you can to Wm. M. Cruikshank, Treas., 59 East 59th St.

GEORGE H. TILDEN DIES.

Nephew of Late Samuel J. Tilden Expires in the Murray Hill Hotel.

George H. Tilden, a nephew of the late Samuel J. Tilden, died yesterday at the Murray Hill Hotel, in his sixty-sixth year. His home was in Pittsfield, Mass., and he had been stopping at the hotel for the last three days. Heart disease was the cause of his death.

Mr. Tilden was born in New Lebanon, N. Y., and was a son of the late Henry A. Tilden. After attending the old Mills School in Williamstown Mr. Tilden went abroad, where he finished his education at one of the German universities. Then with his brother, the late Samuel J. Tilden, he succeeded to the drug manufacturing business of their father in New Lebanon and for years directed it successfully. In 1886 he retired from the firm and removed to Pittsfield.

Mr. Tilden inherited a large portion of the estate of the late Governor Tilden, and is survived by his widow, who was Miss Emily Mosher of Troy, N. Y., and by three sons and two sisters, one of whom is Mrs. C. D. Sabin of the Hotel Plaza.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

In Memoriam

COLTON.—Rt. Rev. Charles H. Colton, late Bishop of Buffalo, and formerly pastor of St. Stephen's Church, New York. Solemn requiem mass at St. Stephen's Church, East 28th St. on Monday, May 17th, at 9 o'clock. Friends are respectfully invited.

COURTNEY.—In loving memory of Mrs. Mary A. Courtney, who departed this life May 15, 1912.

RIEMER.—In sacred cherished memory of a dearly beloved son, brother, Irving Riemer, who died May 15, 1912.

TESSON.—Frank B. Tesson, charter member and Vice President of the Wanamaker Board of Trade, fifteen years a member of the Wanamaker Business Family and seven years chief of the shoe store, John Wanamaker, New York.

You are gone, dear friend, and yet you are here. You have passed through the troubled waters of the earth, only to find peace and everlasting life in the world beyond. You are gone from us, and yet you are with us—in memory, in inspiration, in spirit.

Duty called and you responded instantly and bravely.

God, in His wisdom, called, and you went to him without fear.

The outstanding quality of your noble character is faith; faith in your daily work, faith in your daily life, faith in yourself, faith in your fellow-workers, faith in humanity, and faith in God.

You were patient. You were kind. You were helpful to those about you. You were loyal. You were a man.

You were a worker. You ennobled work. And work ennobled you.

You were a friend. You understood the hardships, the foibles, the weaknesses of man, and you ministered unto them.

You judged not. You criticised not. You explained your views, you gave your opinions, and then trusted to the infinite Wisdom to settle the question rightfully.

Yours is a beautiful passing. With your beloved wife, who shared with you your business cares, you pass on to greater responsibilities, greater triumphs, greater service.

It is for us who remain, not only to mourn your going, but to remember your self-sacrificing life and to profit by it. It is for us to draw more closely together in our own labors, in our own business intercourse, in the daily mingling of our own lives, that we too may reach the high state of human co-operation which you so efficiently wove about you in your own circle of endeavor.

THIS MINUTE

of the Wanamaker Board of Trade, New York, adopted by resolution at a special meeting Friday, May 14, 1915, is our pledge that in this first loss of a member and a brother we find renewed inspiration in the work and service to which and for which he gave his own life.

RESOLVED.

That this minute be spread on our records as a loving tribute and that a copy be engrossed and forwarded, with our sympathy, to the mother of him whose memory we shall forever cherish.

TESREAU PITCHES GIANTS TO VICTORY OVER REDS—DODGERS LOSE—BOXING

TESREAU TRAILS REDS' FLAG IN DUST

Big Jeff Allows Few Hits and Giants Win Third Game from Herzog Nine.

That team of foreigners which represents Cincinnati was again quelled by the Giants yesterday at the Polo Grounds, the plans and specifications showing a 3 to 1 defeat. By winning three games in a row, the Giants have shown their friends that they do not like the gloomy dampness of the rathskeller position in the league. One of these fine days, when they have won enough games, they will come up for air.

Better push the crowd back out of the way, officer, for the Giants seem to be gathering speed as they go along. Some one's apt to get run over.

Manager Charley Herzog has used pitchers of brawn and strength against the Giants with poor results, so yesterday he switched to a high-brow pitcher, King Lear of Princeton. Intelligence in a pitcher, however, is only secondary to the ability to shoot 'em over, where they can't hit them. The Giants didn't hit Lear so very hard, but they bunched the safeties in a couple of innings and got their trio of runs. Cincinnati errors helped the Giants, also. It wasn't a fair shake, either, because the Giants made errors, and they didn't do the Reds a bit of good.

Jeff Tesreau was in good shape and for the most part was encouraged by fast support. He kept the five hits well enough separated to confine the scoring to only one run.

More than 5,000 people were there to see the Giants' commendable efforts to climb up into a place in the sun. There was another brass band on tap yesterday from the Sixty-ninth Regiment. When the sailors go away and the bands don't play under Coogan's Bluff any more, it will seem lonesome up there.

In the first couple of innings, the Giants shuffled the cards a lot, but didn't take a trick. The third inning, though, found them playing for the jackpot. After Tesreau had skied to Leach, Burns struck out. Doyle then got a pass and went down on Lobert's single. Fletcher banged a single to centre, which hopped saucily out of Tommy Leach's grasp and Doyle and Lobert scored.

Robertson opened the sixth with a single through short and Brainerd sacrificed him to second. Chief Meyers hit a safe smash to left and Davey romped home. In the eighth and ninth innings there was trouble brewing for the Giants, but Big Tesreau pitched his way out of difficulty before much damage was done.

With one out in the eighth, Mollwitz shot a double to right, and went to third on Killifer's single to short. Wingo, batting for Lear, forced Killifer at second and while this little thing was being done, Mollwitz scored.

Larry Doyle's error in the ninth gave Groh a life at first. Twombly walked and, mind you, there was no one out. Griffith sacrificed both runners along a station and it looked somewhat bad for Jeff.

Wagner gave the ball a powerful smash which looked as if it was going to carry away one of Tesreau's legs. It didn't scare Jeff a bit, however, and he knocked the ball cold and it lay exhausted at his feet. It was a stinger, and although it was red hot, he picked it up and threw the runner out at first.

The next party at the bat was Count von Kolnitz, Cincinnati's star pinchhitter, but this time he failed to live up to expectations; that is, Manager Herzog's expectations. A long high balloon into Davey Robertson's hands and the game was over. The score:

Fordham Going to Rout the Army?

Accompanied by 2,500 rooters, the Fordham baseball team will go to West Point today on the steamer Grand Republic for the annual game with the undefeated Army team. Fordham has had its new coach, Billy Lush, only a week, but a great improvement has shown itself, especially last Wednesday, when in a ninth inning rally it nosed out Notre Dame and broke its record of fourteen games won. The soldiers have now won thirteen games without a defeat and the Maroon collegians hope to spoil another record today. The Grand Republic will start from the Battery and make stops at 129th Street and at Yonkers. The return trip will be made in time to see the fireworks display on the Hudson. The prep team will also make its annual visit to the cadets of New York Military Academy, and will join the 'Varsity at West Point.

Two Games on South Field.

Columbia's baseball team will appear today against the Seventh Regiment team and will try to even up for the defeat handed it at Cornell on Thursday. The soldiers have been invited to bring their band and add the music to the general festivity of the occasion. Harry Fisher has also extended an invitation, through Rear Admiral Fletcher of the United States Navy, to all officers and non-commissioned men in the fleet to attend the game. The freshmen will meet the Pennsylvania first-year men on South Field at 11 o'clock in their annual game. The visitors have a lead of three straight games in the standing of the last three years.

NEW BASEBALL DISPUTE.

Colonial League's Affiliation with Federals May Cause Trouble.

There is a strong possibility that organized baseball and the Federal League will clash over the Colonial League, which is scheduled to open up in New England next Thursday. Leases for the rental of baseball grounds in New Haven, Hartford, and Springfield have been drawn up, and the Colonial League, of which Robert B. Ward of the Brooklyn Federal Club is one of the backers, is now made up of teams from the following cities: Fall River, Pawtucket, New Bedford, Brockton, Taunton, Hartford, Springfield, and New Haven.

The trouble in the Eastern Association, what was formerly the Connecticut League, early in the season resulted in three of the franchises being forfeited, and those franchises were in the cities which have now taken up the Colonial League. The Eastern Association decided first to open the season with six clubs, but later the National Commission was petitioned to allow them the privilege of suspending for a year and still hold the territory. After this petition had been filed with Secretary Farrell of the commission it was decided to keep the parks in the association closed this year and try to settle the league's troubles and open again next year.

But the Colonial League, which is affiliated with organized ball, despite the fact that Mr. Ward is one of the backers, has stepped in and without permission will place clubs in the three cities formerly occupied by the Eastern Association. The Colonial League is evidently ready to take the consequences of its action, and a new schedule to include the three new cities is being drawn up, and the league will formall open on next Thursday.

But even if the National Commission takes no action on the matter of placing teams in the three cities on the ground that they are invading reserved territory, it is highly probable that the issue will be raised on the question of Federal League players joining any of the clubs. Some of the members of the Colonial League teams have been practicing every morning at the Fed Park in Brooklyn, and it is understood that several of the members of the Brookfeds will be released to one of the teams in the Colonial League. Such action if taken will cause complications and may result in another opening of hostilities between the two forces of baseball.

Mr. Ward is not in the city and will not be back for several days, and it is understood that he has gone West to discuss the Colonial League situation with President Gilmore of the Federal League.

DODGERS SWAMPED BY CUBS' HITTING

Three Brooklyn Pitchers Unable to Stop Visitors, Who Win by a Score of 19 to 4.

The greatest baseball farce of the year was enacted yesterday at Ebbets Field. It was a complete success. After a two-and-a-half-hour session with the Cubs, the Dodgers ought to admit that they are not in the big league class. A group of schoolboys would have proved more effective. After three innings the Robins were down on their knees begging for mercy. The Cubs, however, kept right on pounding the leather, and rolled up the overwhelming total of 19 to 4. Of the four runs that the Dodgers did get across two were a result of the kindly intention of Pete Standridge, who passed two men in a row.

The Bresnahan boys clouted the ball to all corners of the lot. Robbie had selected Raleigh Aitchison to hold the Cubs in check, and he was as effective as a china doll. He was forced to a seat on the bench after one and a third innings. Cadore then took up the work, and gave four hits and a pass before he was pulled out of the game. Ed Appleton then assumed the burden, and it was too heavy a task. He lasted the game out, but that was because Robbie was running short of available slab artists, and some one had to take the punishment. One bright fan yelled to get a Chicago pitcher.

After the second inning the few spectators who had the hardihood to stay took the whole proceeding as a huge joke. When the Dodgers did manage to retire the opposing side they were greeted with cheers, but toward the last that began to lack novelty, and then all began to cuckoo the late hour.

In the first inning the Cubs were content with only two runs, two singles, an error, and a pass contributing to the total. In the second Bresnahan was an easy out, and then began the fusillade that could be heard at the bridge. Six safeties, two of them for three bases, came in a row. Then there was a pass to Saier and two more singles. Eight runs were the total, and twelve batsmen had been up. The Cubs batted around in the third and took five more runs. After that the game was a travesty. The Dodgers didn't care whether they played or not, and no one else did, either. The score:

Cardinals Clean Up in Ninth.

BOSTON, May 14.—Held to two hits and without runs for eight innings today, St. Louis, in the ninth, overcame Boston's lead and won, 5 to 4. Five singles, an error by Maranville, when a double play which would have retired the side without a score was possible, and two misplays by Cather contributed to the visitors' string. Gowdy batted hard. He knocked the ball into centre field for a home run, and again rapped it for a double against a sign on the left field fence offering $25 for any ball striking it. The score:

Half Holiday for Baseball Opening.

Is interest in baseball on the wane? Read this, published in The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle recently:

"The Rochester International League baseball club received the city Government's approving attention when the Common Council adopted a resolution, introduced by Alderman Raymond E. Westbury, to make next Monday afternoon a civic half-holiday. Among other things the resolution declares that the "success of the Hustlers has been one of the best advertisements for Rochester." The resolution:

"'Whereas, The Rochester baseball club has proved one of the best advertisements of the City of Rochester and its success has spread the fame of this city as a growing and prosperous municipality; and

"'Whereas, The continued welfare of the club will benefit the city and civic pride makes it proper that the city should encourage the efforts which have given it one of the best teams engaged in the national sport; now, therefore,

"'Be it ordained by the Common Council of the City of Rochester as follows: Monday afternoon, May 17, 1915, the opening day of the International League in the City of Rochester, is hereby declared to be a civic half-holiday; provided, however, that the offices of the City Treasurer and City Clerk shall be kept open.'"

DOG SHOW STARTS LATE.

Ryan's Little Girl Adjudged Best at Hotel Gregorian.

Miss Frances Ryan's Ryan's Little Girl was adjudged the best dog of either sev in the show last night at the seventh club match of the Boston Terrier Breeders' Association held at the Gregorian Hotel. Miss Ryan's Ryan's Little Boy also took the blue ribbon for the best dog.

There was a notice to exhibitors on the program that judging would start promptly at 8 P. M. and that all entries not in five minutes before that time would be refused. Had the dogs been there by 9:30 P. M. they would have been in lots of time, as the first class was sent into the ring promptly at 10 P. M.

Exhibitors who had come a long way complained, and justly. The meeting was the largest of the season, many coming from different parts of New Jersey in order to help and encourage the association both by their presence and their dogs.

W. E. Swainsen of Washington, D. C., who showed for the first time, had the largest number of entries and took a number of blues.

The awards follow:

Puppies, Three to Six Months Old.—Won by H. C. Mason's Mason's Queen; W. E. Swainson's Vanity Fair, second.

Puppies, Six to Twelve Months.—Won by C. Cross's Jerry C.

Novice Dogs, Under Seventeen Pounds.—Won by C. Cross's Dandy C.; J. Edwards's Tommy Duke, second.

Limit Dogs, Under Seventeen Pounds.—Won by J. Edwards's Tommy Duke; F. Werner's Roman, second.

Open Dogs, Under Seventeen Pounds.—Won by Miss F. Ryan's Ryan's Little Boy; J. Edwards's Tommy Duke, second.

Novice Dogs, Over Seventeen Pounds.—Won by W. E. Swainson's Snipper; W. O. Howlett's Breeno, second.

Limit Dogs, Over Seventeen Pounds.—Won by J. H. Goodwin's Goodwin's Cheeky; W. E. Swainson's Snipper, second.

Open Dogs, Over Seventeen Pounds.—Won by W. E. Swainson's Snipper; J. H. Goodwin's Goodwin's Cheeky, second.

Best Dog.—Won by Miss F. Ryan's Ryan's Little Boy; J. H. Goodwin's Goodwin's Cheeky, reserve.

Limit, Bitches, Over 17 pounds.—Won by J. Edwards's Lady Ringmaster; J. H. Goodwin's Goodwin's Nellie, second.

Best Bitch.—Won by J. H. Goodwin's Goodwin's Fussy; Miss F. Ryan's Ryan's Little Girl, reserve.

Best in Show.—Won by Miss F. Ryan's Ryan's Little Boy; J. H. Goodwin's Goodwin's Fussy, reserve.

HARVARD BLANKS BOSTON COLLEGE

Mahan Allows Only Two Hits—Haughton Declines to Coach.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass, May 14.—Boston College, which recently beat both Georgetown and Tufts, was an easy victim for Harvard on Soldiers' Field today, the Crimson winning, 10 to 0. They were in charge of Captain Hardwick, and there was no coach or baseball committeeman on the bench. Halloran, who was expected to make a great showing against the Crimson, received ragged support, and all of Harvard's nine hits were bunched inside of four innings. In the second inning Hardwick and Brickley bunched two-baggers for a run, and in the third, with the bases full, Hardwick hit a home run to right field. Boston College went into the air after that, and Harvard got five more runs against Halloran in the fourth and fifth innings.

Ned Mahan, pitching for Harvard, had an easy day. Only six visitors reached first base, two seeing second and one reaching third. This happened in the seventh inning, when Maloney made the visitors' first hit, and went to third when Dee made Boston's second and last single of the game.

In the first inning Mahan gave two passes, but after that, except in the seventh, only three batters faced him, those who reached first on errors being thrown out by Harte when they tried to steal.

Captain Hardwick said tonight that he had been unable to secure Percy Haughton as coach to succeed Dr. Sexton. Haughton, however, will try to adjust his business affairs so he can assist. Bill Sweeney, the old Chicago and Boston second baseman, is one of the applicants for the position as head coach here. The score:

KOOB'S SECOND NO-HIT GAME

Kalamazoo Pitcher Makes a Record for a Season.

YPSILANTI, Mich., May 14.—Koob of the Kalamazoo Normal College pitched his second no-hit game of the year here today in a game against Ypsilanti Normal. Kalamazoo won, 6 to 1, the locals' one run being scored on three errors.

Earlier this Spring Koob hurled a no-hit game against Albion College, and held the University of Michigan team to two hits in ten innings.

College Player Breaks Jaw.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 14.—Ohio State's nine bunched hits against Les Jardien today and won from Chicago University, 9 to 6. The three Chicago hits, a homer by F. McConnell, a triple by Flood, and Cole's single, came in the seventh inning. In the fourth inning, Pitcher Potts's left jaw was broken in two places in a collision with First Baseman House. Score:

Colonial Yacht Club Activities.

With a total of 200 members, fifty being added in the last month, and a new frontage of 150 additional feet, the Colonial Yacht Club is beginning a very active season. They expect to enter most of the big races of the season, and have prepared the following schedule for themselves:

June 12, Highland Lighthouse; July 10, Cornfield Lighthouse and return, 210 miles; Aug. 15, around Manhattan Island; Aug. 29, Rockland Lighthouse, followed by a bang and go back race.

The newly elected officers for the year are: N. J. Baker, Commodore; Carl Reinschild, Vice Commodore; Dr. J. K. Van Denburg, Rear Commodore; W. R. Gray, Corresponding Secretary; Victor E. Meest, Financial Secretary; Carl Roedelsperger, Treasurer; Dr. H. M. Burns, Fleet Lieutenant; Cyprian C. Hunt, Chaplain; Leslie Huxtable, Measurer.

New Turf and Field Club Members.

At a meeting of the Turf and Field Club held yesterday the following were elected members of the club: Moncure Robinson, L. Stuart Wing, Henry B. H. Ripley, Robert J. Kelly, E. G. Bruns, James Park, Henry F. Godfrey, Samuel Adams Clark, and Francis G. B. Roche. Upon application several former members were reinstated to membership. The revival of interest in the Turf and Field, whose clubhouse and grounds are considered to be among the most attractive in this country, is an indication of the generally increased interest of society in the coming meeting at Belmont Park, which promises to be the most successful held for many years.

REDS DEFEAT WHITES.

Squadron A Polo Teams Show Excellent Form in Game.

In a fast but one-sided polo game between Squadron A teams the Reds defeated the Whites yesterday at Van Cortlandt Park by the score of 9 goals to 2. Four of the five points made by the winners were registered by L. J. Hunt, who showed really good form for so early in the season. The Reds were more aggressive and appeared to be slightly better mounted. Dr. H. D. Richards, a new member of the squadron and taking up polo seriously for the first time, played a good game at No. 1 for the Whites. Dr. Richards has four serviceable mounts, which are well broken and know the game.

As soon as the ball was thrown in the Reds commenced their attack, and after two minutes of play W. B. Bolton scored the first goal. Hunt tallied again a minute later. Just before the period closed J. F. Johnson made a point for the Whites. The victors increased their lead in the two following chukkers.

At the end of the third several substitutes were put in, and the Whites braced up considerably. A. Snyder made the only goal of the period for the losers. The Whites were far stronger defensively than in attacking, and they generally put up a good fight before their opponents were finally able to score.

The Red team, however, was the stronger and they added four more goals to their score before the final whistle blew at the end of the seventh period, when darkness made it necessary to call the game. The line-up:

Reds—A. J. Smith, T. C. Eastman, L. J. Hunt; back, W. B. Belton, Jr. Whites—Dr. H. D. Richards, J. F. Johnson, W. B. Eaton; back, Howard Craft.

Substitutes—For Reds: R. S. Thomas, Dr. Maxwell, E. A. Hurd; for Whites: A. Snyder, G. H. Barrett, Lorillard Spencer.

THOUSAND ISLANDS POLO.

Five Teams Already Entered for Tournament in August.

Elaborate arrangements are being made for the third annual tournament of the Thousand Islands Polo Club, which will be held from Aug. 18 to Sept. 6, inclusive, at Wellesley Island, Alexandria Bay, New York. The most important trophies are the St. Lawrence River Challenge Cup, presented by Peter Dawson, and played for under Polo Association handicaps, and the Mid-Western Circuit Cup, presented by the Polo Association, and played for under local handicaps.

Up to yesterday the Polo Association had received the names of five clubs which will enter teams. They include: Chagrin Valley Hunt Club of Cleveland, Buffalo Country Club, Westmoreland Polo Club of Greensburg, Pa.; Aiken, and a team from either Philadelphia Country Club or Bryn Mawr.

The club has engaged the services of Robert S. Bullock, as polo professional, to coach and instruct those who desire his services. Bullock came to this country several years ago in charge of the English mounts for the international matches, and remained here. He is a fine player and knows the game thoroughly. He has been with the Onwentsia Club at Lake Forest, Ill., for the last two years. A. G. Miles, Delegate of The Thousand Islands Club, has obtained the services of Bullock expressly to instruct the younger players who may come to the club during the season.

For those players who are unable to ship their ponies, there will be additional mounts, which may be hired. There is plenty of sleeping accommodations at the club, and it will be the stag headquarters for the men throughout the season and for the visiting teams.

It is planned to have polo three days a week, starting July 1, and efforts will be made to play match games each Saturday in July with teams from Long Island or about New York, composed of men who are able to get up to the Islands for the week-end. For the players who will ship their mounts, there is plenty of excellent stabling and accommodation for their grooms.

Polo has started on Long Island, the players are practicing almost every day on Field No. 2 at Meadow Brook. At Phipps' Field, at Westbury, several impromptu games have been played already.

Point Judith a Polo Victor.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—Point Judith defeated Devon by a score of 9½ to 7 in the opening game of the polo tournament at Bryn Mawr today. The winners scored 11 goals, but lost 1½ by penalty. Devon was allowed four goals by handicap and scored 3.

McCarney in American Club.

Billy McCarney has been appointed matchmaker of the American Sporting Club of America, which has its headquarters at Harlem River Casino. Paddy Donnelly, who holds the lease and is the owner of the American Sporting Club, made McCarney the matchmaker yesterday. McCarney is well known to all New Yorkers as the man who brought out Luther McCarthy, who died during a bout with Arthur Pelky. Some years ago McCarney was one of the cleverest lightweights competing in the amateur ranks.

CLABBY AND CHIP ACCUSED OF FAKING

Boxers, Haled Before Athletic Commission, Deny Charge of Frame-up Bout.

Jimmy Clabby, the Indiana middleweight, and George Chip, the Newcastle, Penn., boxer, were called to accounting yesterday at a special meeting of the State Athletic Commission at 41 Park Row for their alleged "faked" bout at the St. Nicholas Rink on Wednesday night. Only two members of the commission were present, Commissioner James K. Price being unable to attend the hearing, so action on the testimony was deferred until the regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon. More witnesses will be called, and the same procedure will be followed by the commission as in the investigation of the fake charges made against Abe Attell after a bout with Knockout Brown. The board accepts this case as a precedent. Newspapermen who witnessed the contest probably will be asked to give their version of the affair.

Billy Roche, the official referee of the St. Nicholas A. C., who ordered the boxers from the ring after they had boxed for eight rounds, gave his side of the fiasco, as did James Dime, manager of Chip, and Larney Lichtenstein, who directs the pugilistic affairs of Clabby.

As was expected, both the principals of the bout testified that they did their best. They gave as an excuse for their poor showing the fact that they felt "tired" for some reason unknown to themselves. The fact that they had boxed three or four times before and were thoroughly acquainted with each other's style was also advanced as a reason that the men did not put up a fast exhibition. Clabby is of the clever type of boxer, while Chip is one who bores in head down, without science and only a determination to reach his opponent, regardless of the result

Referee Roche asserted positively that in his opinion Chip and Clabby were participants in a "frame-up." From the fourth round until he ordered them from the ring in the eigth, Roche swore, he continually cautioned them for not trying. The managers testified that there was absolutely no preliminary arrangement between the men, and also that in their opinion the exhibition was all that it should have been.

Clabby and Chip, with their managers, have agreed to remain in New York until Tuesday, to be present at the continued investigation. The special meeting was hastily called yesterday morning in order that the testimony of the men could be heard in the city in the event that they desired to leave the city before they were tried before the commission.

Opinion is divided as to whether the men did their best, but there is almost a unanimous sentiment among boxing patrons that the decision of the referee should be upheld by the governors of the sport.

WAR IS OVER FOR JOHNSON.

Negro Boxer Says He's at Peace First Time in Several Years.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 14.—Jack Johnson now is a rival attraction to soldiers on the boulevards. Asked if he came here to go to war he replied: "Man, for me war is over. I am at peace the first time in several years." His interviewer said: "Anyway your name goes down in war history, for big German shells are called Jack Johnsons." Jack replied: "Wasn't I in history before this war?"

Asked what he intended to do he said: "I have been invited to be athletic director for a gentleman's club in Havana. I might go there and open a café as a side line. It certainly is one of the last good towns, but on the way here I stopped in Spain to see bullfights. My goodness, man, I certainly felt I wasted my time at prizefighting. These bullfighters are busy all the time and make more money than world's champions, so maybe I will be a bullfighter."

Asked about the Willard fight Johnson said: "That guy aint no fighter, but you can't beat him. Why, man, he's got a reach from here way over there." Jack pointed at buildings across the boulevard.

Local Boxing Bouts Tonight.

Bouts which promise to result in interesting sport have been arranged by four local clubs for tonight. The Fairmont, Irving, Broadway, and Queensboro Clubs present good cards. As usual, the Fairmont management has arranged a first-class bill, which leads off with a ten-round bout between Dick Peters, the West Side lightweight, and Gene Moriarity, a clever Harlem boxer. In another star exhibition Marty Cross, a younger brother of Leach Cross, tackles Jack Curley. The opening number will have as principals Banty Sharp of Steubenville, Ohio, and Denny McFadden, a Harlemite. There will be ten four-round contests in addition to the star bouts.

The Irving A. C. will stage a series of bouts between sailors of the Atlantic fleet in the North River. Jack Keating of the U. S. S. Alabama, holder of the United States Navy heavyweight championship, will box Sam Taylor of the Michigan, who holds the Atlantic fleet heavyweight title belt. In the other ten-round go Jack Smith of the Arkansas, middleweight champion of the navy, will tackle Jack Reck of the Michigan. Joe Smith of the Michigan and George Grant of the Florida will be opposed for six rounds in the semi-final.

The Queensboro show consists of four ten-round bouts and two fours. The main event will introduce Young Joe Stacey of Yorkville and Johnny Reese of Brooklyn. Mike Smith and Joe Mooney are opponents in another ten rounder.

Knockout Brown, once a Manhattan idol, boxes Fighting Harry Fitzpatrick of Brooklyn in the principal bout at the Broadway Sporting Club. Johnny Dohan of Brooklyn and Fighting Joe Hyland come together on the same program. Tommy Buck, a clever Philadelphia boxer, is matched with Eddie Cook of Greenpoint for the opening contest.

Jeffries Recovering from Pneumonia

LOS ANGELES, May 14.—James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, who has been ill of pneumonia for the last four days, was said tonight to be past the crisis of the illness.

CORNELL FAVORITE FOR CREW RACE

Princetonians Cannot See That Anything Is Wrong with the Ithacans.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 14.—In spite of all the reports of backwardness of the crew that have been issuing from Ithaca, Cornell rules the favorite in Princeton tonight for tomorrow's race with Princeton and Yale. Courtney's eight huskies look to be one of the best crews that ever represented the red and white and there is no evidence of the unfinished oarsmanship that was said to be giving Courtney so much worry.

Cornell had two rows today and in the afternoon workout went over the course of tomorrow's contest. The big New York eight finished a hard spin apparently as fresh as when they started. They have powerful leg drive and a quick, vigorous stroke that sends the shell skimming through the water as though driven by a motor.

The Cornellians are minus coach Courtney who sent John Hoyle, the veteran boat builder, to take charge of the men while they are in Princeton. "I couldn't teach them any more in these last few days," said Courtney as the crews left Ithaca, "so there's no use of my going with them."

Yale does not look so strong as Cornell, although in the opinion of Princeton oarsmen, it is the best Eli crew that has ever come to Lake Carnegie. The Yale men are shorter and stockier than either of their opponents. The Tigers and the Ithacans loom up like giants in comparison with their New Haven rivals. The Blue eight was out for an hour this morning and for half an hour this afternoon. Guy Nickalls had nothing to say about his crew nor would he venture an opinion on the outcome of the race.

Princeton's work this afternoon was confined to a ten-minute spin during which Dr. Spaeth had his men practice several racing starts. The Tiger crew was slow in leaving the mark last Saturday and an effort has been made to eradicate this fault.

In commenting on the race Dr. Spaeth said tonight: "Yale has the best crew she ever sent down here. It is a strong, finished eight. Cornell has eight men of splendid physique and if they have had any trouble up there it certainly doesn't show now."

In the drawing for positions this afternoon Cornell drew the west bank, Princeton the middle and Yale the east or canal bank. For freshman race, which will precede the 'Varsity, the order of the crews will be the same. The referee will be William I. Forbes of the University of Pennsylvania, and the judge at the finish will be Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft of the University of Chicago.

WOMEN'S LAWN TENNIS--GOLF--ATHLETICS

TENNIS CHAMPION WINS AND LOSES

Miss Bjurstedt Captures Metropolitan Singles, but Loses in the Doubles.

Victory, then defeat, fell to the lot of Miss Molla Bjurstedt of Norway yesterday in the final rounds of the Metropolitan Women's singles and doubles championship tennis tournament on the West Side Tennis Club courts at Forest Hills, L. I. The national indoor champion scored an easy victory in the singles, defeating Mrs. Barger Wallach in straight sets 6—3, 6—1, but in the doubles title round, with Miss Florence Ballin as a partner, Miss Bjurstedt was overwhelmed by Mrs. Marshall McLean and Mrs. A. G. Mills, 6—2, 6—1.

That the Norwegian expert would win the singles, few who have followed the championship tournament doubted. She has been in splendid form, and her succession of victories have been impressive. Miss Bjurstedt seemed to thrive on speed and her hammer and tongs rallies resulted in a total eclipse for Mrs. Wallach, who showed signs of fatigue near the end of the match. Both players appeared nervous as they came on the court, Miss Bjurstedt through being half an hour later, and Mrs. Wallach owing to the long wait for her opponent.

Mrs. Wallach made a plucky fight in the first set and held her young opponent on even terms up to the seventh game. Meantime the champion was playing a severely hard game, driving with great force and placing with deadly accuracy. Mrs. Wallach tried to overcome her opponent's steady growing advantage with high lobs, but Miss Bjurstedt was waiting as the ball descended and seldom failed to return it. The last three games of the first set found Mrs. Wallach outclassed, with but three games to her credit.

With her opponent rapidly tiring under the aggressive attack, Miss Bjurstedt, in the second set, did not let up for one moment. She rushed up to the net and sent the ball whizzing in every direction. Mrs. Wallach succeeded in carrying two of the first three games to deuce and won the fourth. This was her last real effort, and feeling defeat inevitable she made little defense during the closing games of the match. Miss Bjurstedt scored 12 sets to 4 and 60 points to 30 in the contest.

The defeat of Miss Bjurstedt in the doubles was due rather to the poor support she received from her partner than the superiority of her opponents. Seldom has Miss Ballin been seen to such poor advantage. She was badly off her stroke and out of form. Frequently she raced up to the nets only to send the ball out of court or return it to the net. She repeatedly cut in ahead of Miss Bjurstedt, and when on the point of returning the ball dropped her racquet and let the ball travel over her head, too late for Miss Bjurstedt to reach it. In addition to her other troubles Miss Ballin was the main object of the attack from Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Pope, who realized that she was the weak spot in the combination.

When the champion realized that she was facing certain defeat she let up considerably in her play. This was the signal for Mrs. McLetan and Mrs. Pape to force the issue, and they allowed their opponents to score but one game in the se. The failure of Miss Bjurstedt and her partner did not affect the excellent team work of the successful pair. Mrs. McLean mixed her game and played with judgment and skill, and was admirably supported by Mrs. Pape, whose cross-court shots contributed materially in the victory. In point of figures the champion and Miss Ballin was outplayed 4 to 1 in games and in points 61 to 42. The point score and summary:

SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

TENNIS ENDURANCE MATCH.

Dionne and Chambers Play Long-Drawn-Out Contest in Bronx Tourney.

G. A. L. Dionne, former Captain of the West Side Tennis Club, advanced another round in the Bronx County championship yesterday on the Bedford Park Lawn Tennis Club, when he defeated Charles Chambers two sets to one by the score of 7-5, 2-6, 6-3. The match, which started on Thursday, was a long-drawn-out affair and was not finished until near dusk last night. Many of the rallies were long drawn out and resulted in an endurance contest. In one of the rallies, the seventh game of the final set, fifty-seven returns were made before the winning point was made. Dionne won the first set, but dropped the second. It was nip and tuck for a time in the third until Dionne's steadiness told and he overcame his opponent's chop strokes.

Vanderbilt Ward, the former Yale player and one of the youngest contestants in the championship tourney, was the first to reach the final round. He defeated King Smith of the Seventh Regiment in straight sets after an interesting contest. Dionne will play S. Howard Voshell, the title holder, and the winner of the match will oppose J. H. Steinkampf, which will bring the successful player to the opposite brackets to Ward. The summary:

Bronx Men's Singles Championship.—Fourth Round—G. A. L. Dionne defeated Charles Chambers, 7—5, 2—6, 6—3.

Semi-Final Round—Vanderbilt Ward defeated King Smith, 6—4, 6—4.

Semi-Final Round—Grand and Phillips defeated Reimer and Steinacker, 9—7, 6—3.

Men's Singles, Consolation.—First Round—G. L. Robinson defeated Tobey by default; Oliver defeated Phillips by default; Pfeiffer defeated Radel by default; Adams defeated Johnson by default; Fixman defeated Nolan, 6—1, 6—3; Bassford defeated Barlow by default; Touissaint defeated Hall by default; Raymond defeated Hutchins by default; Walsh defeated Hall by default; Treanor defeated Peaslee by default; Porter defeated Baldwin by default; Hoffman defeated Kruger by default; Hooker defeated King by default; Spaeth defeated Peagram by default; Janes defeated Goold by default.

Trinity Beats Brown at Tennis.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 14.—Trinity's tennis team defeated Brown University today, four matches to two.

Draw for Harlem Tournament.

Sixty-five players were drawn in the Harlem Tennis Club open tournament, which opens today on the club courts at 135th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue. Several interesting contests will mark the first round, the best matches being Arthur M. Lovibond and Vanderbilt Ward and Ingo Hartman and Dr. William Rosenbaum. Many of the best players in the metropolitan district are entered in the tournament.

YALE TO REPEAT ON TRACK?

Elis Picked to Defeat Harvard in Dual Meet at New Haven.

Aherents of the Yale track and field team expect their squad to score another easy victory over the Harvard representatives in their annual dual meet at New Haven this afternoon. The Blue team is much stronger this year than it was last, when they triumphed over the Crimson squad by a score of 66½ to 37½ points. Happenings of last Saturday in the Yale-Princeton and Harvard-Cornell dual meets forecast a Yale victory today, and non-partisan observers of the performances of the two teams this year also look for the Blue to come off successful by a good margin.

Johnny Mack's team is especially strongly fortified with sprinters, who made almost a clean sweep against the Tigers last week. Treadway, Cornell, Ricketts and Stewart form a quartet who should score heavily for Yale. Their chief opposition will be Teschner and Foley.

Harvard appears best in the half mile, with Bingham and Capper against only Loverman of Yale, but in the hurdles the Blue stand in front with Sheddon, who has exhibited fine form so far this season. Oler in the high jump is supreme, and he will make a good fight for first place in the running broad jump against Johnstone of Harvard.

Camp of Harvard has a better mark in the pole vault this year than any of the Yale men, but Carter is likely to show improved form today, and perhaps defeat the Crimson representative.

verton, Holden and Frost of Yale will be matched against Southworth of Harvard, with the chances for victory favoring the latter, who made exceptionally good time in defeating the Cornell cracks last Saturday.

Val Wilkie undoubtedly stands above all the other entrants in the quarter mile, and in the mile Poucher should be a point scorer for the New Haven squad. Loughbridge is another likely point winner with the hammer.

Much interest centres in the meeting of Pennsylvania and Cornell at Ithaca. The winner of the Intercollegiate championship two weeks hence should turn up in either of these colleges. Cornell had a hard fight with Harvard last week, while Pennsylvania had little trouble disposing of Dartmouth, but these meets are no criterion of victory, but the Pennsylvania boys are also sure they will win.

Roos May Not Compete for Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 14.—Yale and Harvard track athletic officials were in session from 7 o'clock tonight to midnight discussing the case of William Roose, the intercollegiate champion shot-putter. At midnight the conference adjourned, leaving the Roos case dangling in the air. Yale claimed that he is eligible to compete in the dual track games here tomorrow on the ground that nothing in the dual agreement prohibits him, although he attended Columbia University one year and then went two years to Yale. The Harvard management tonight produced an agreement drawn up in 1906 which would disqualify Roos on the ground that he has already completed three years. Yale claims that this agreement was drafted, but never signed. Efforts to learn the facts from Walter Camp, the Yale athletic advisor, proved futile. He will decide the case tomorrow morning on the basis of the agreement which was really made in 1906. Yale claims that the agreement made in 1901 is still in existence.

JUNIOR TRACK GAMES JULY 17

Celtic Park Likely to be Chosen for Metropolitan Meet.

The Junior Track and Field Championship Committee of the Metropolitan Association, decided yesterday at a meeting at 21 Warren Street, to hold their annual title games on July 17. No site was selected for the games, but in all probability they will be contested at Celtic Park, according to Fred J. V. Delany, Chairman of the committee. The field of Stevens Institute at Hoboken received consideration from the committee, but will not be available on July 17 because the school will be closed for the Summer on that date. It had been originally decided to stage the meet on June 12, but the date was changed upon protest from the Hungarian-American Athletic League and Scandinavian-American Athletic League, who hold their annual championships on June 13. There are fifteen clubs in each of these organizations.

Thomas Lynch Games at Celtic Park

The Thomas Lynch Association will hold an athletic meet at Celtic Park, Long Island City, tomorrow. Six track and field events are scheduled, in which all the leading stars of the Irish-American A. C. will appear. As an added attraction to these games the Pentathlon, scratch, an Olympic event, has been added. Included in the list of events necessary for this special Greek competition are a running broad jump, throwing the javelin, 200-meter run, throwing the discus, and a 1,500-meter run. Twenty entries have been received for this event, the most noted being Pat O'Connor, last year's winner of the junior all-around championships; Mike J. Fahey, Lester J. Harper, Dan Shea, and Thomas McLoughlin. In the 35-pound weight for distance, the entries of Paddy Ryan, Matt McGrath, Pat McDonald, and Alex McDougall have been received. Two games of Gaelic football will be played immediately after the track and field sports. The competing teams are Kerry versus Kilkenny and Cork versus Kildare.

Dwyer Most Useful Student.

Walter W. Dwyer, guard of the Blue and White basket ball team and President of the Columbia 1915 class, received the Charles S. Rolker prize by vote of his class yesterday. Dwyer has been prominent in athletics continually since entering college. He played baseball one year and has been a member of the basket ball team for the other three. He is also Chairman of the Student Committee on Athletics. The prize is awarded to the student who is judged most valuable to the student body for his athletic and scholastic activities in his four years. Dwyer was unopposed. The prize consists of $50 cash.

Middle States Intercollegiates.

Seven athletes of Stevens Institute, Hoboken, N. J., and five from New York University left yesterday for Haverford, Penn., to compete in the annual championships of the Middle States Intercollegiate A. A. Mel Sheppard, coach at Stevens, and H. Von Elling, the N. Y. U. trainer, had charge of their respective teams. Lafayette won the meet last year and has another strong team this Spring. Lehigh University promises to give the Lafayette Representatives a hard fight for the championship honors.

Wisconsin Track Victory.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., May 14.—The University of Wisconsin track team team defeated University of Illinois today by 71 to 55. Mason of Illinois won the two-mile run in 9:39, lowering the conference record. Mucks of Wisconsin won the shot put with 47 feet 3⅝ inches, and Stiles of Wisconsin took the broad jump with 24 feet 1¼ inches, also beating the conference record.

POWER SQUADRON CRUISE.

500-Mile Event to Start from Manhasset Bay July 31.

Commodore Franklin P. Pratt of the Hudson River Division of the American Power Squadron has appointed the following men as lieutenants for the season: George Saltford, Poughkeepsie Yacht Club; Major Bleeker, Tappan Zee Yacht Club; E. W. Marshall, Yonkers Yacht Club; C. Horenberger, New York Motorboat Club; Carl Reinschild, Colonial Yacht Club; George Hoertel, Hudson River Yacht Club.

The annual cruise of the squadron will begin at Manhasset Bay on July 31, when they go east for a week or ten days. Invitations have been extended to all other squadrons to join, and it is expected that Albany will send some boats down the river, that New Haven will join, and that Boston will also enter. The total distance to be covered by the squadron will be about 500 miles. The rendezvous begins on the day of the Gold Cup race at Manhasset.

Chief Commander Roger Upton will officially inspect the Hudson River Squadron on May 30-31 at Croton Point. This will be the first gathering of the division for the season, and it is expected that the holiday will make it quite a rendezvous.

YOUNG GOLFERS REACH GOLF FINAL

Marston and Carter Opponents Today for Oakland Tournament Title.

Maxwell R. Marston of Baltusrol was the hero of the second and semi-final rounds of the invitation tournament at the Oakland Golf Club yesterday, when through a brand of golf which would do credit to a champion he earned the right to play Philip V. G. Carter, the Metropolitan junior champion, in the thirty-six-hole decisive test today.

Marston's first victim was Roy D. Webb of Englewood, the tall Baltusrol youth winning by 3 and 2 and going around in 73, a stroke less than the amateur record established last week by Francis Ouimet, the national amateur champion. Webb had a 76.

Later on Marston played Henry J. Topping of Greenwich, French runner-up last year. Again the margin was 3 and 2 in favor of the Baltusrol man, and once more he played such sterling golf that there was no denying him. Even so, Topping hung fast and by putting up a fine brand of golf held his fast-going opponent even to the turn. There was no stopping Marston after that, however, and he won handily enough.

Carter and Percy R. Pyne, 2d, of Princeton had a hard match in the morning, matters standing all even at the end of the ninth hole. Although he displayed excellent ability on the greens, Pyne was unable to keep the pace of his younger opponent toward the end and lost, 3 and 1.

Carter then took on Hamilton K. Kerr of Greenwich. The quality of golf was not equal to that of the earlier round, but it was a grueling match and Carter won on the nineteenth. Through the medium of a fine approach on the seventeenth, Kerr became 1 up at a critical stage, but Carter through a fine tee shot on the home hole was enabled to record a three and square the match. A pulled tee shot into a bunker cost Kerr the extra hole and the match. The summary:

First Sixteen.—Second Round—Philip V. G. Carter, Nassau, beat Percy R. Pyne, 2d, Princeton, 3 and 1; Hamilton K. Kerr, Greenwich, beat Louis P. Gwyer, Siwanoy, 6 and 5; Henry J. Topping, Greenwich, beat Prestley S. Maclaughlin, Scarsdale, 1 up, (19 holes;) Maxwell R. Marston, Baltusrol, beat Roy D. Webb, Englewood, 3 and 2.

GOLF HOME FOR N. Y. A. C.

Athletic Clubmen to be Affiliated with Quaker Ridge C. C.

Arrangements have been completed whereby 200 members of the New York Athletic Club will become affiliated with the newly organized Quaker Ridge Country Club, in Westchester County. The Quaker Ridge course is being rapidly constructed, and the first nine holes will be put in commission in two weeks and the remainder completed as early as possible.

The Country Club invited the Mercury Foot organization to sanction the affiliation, and Fred R. Fortmeyer, in a letter to William J. Murphy of the Country Club, said that the matter had been placed before the Board of Governors and that he had been directed to acknowledge the proposal, which had been favorably acted upon.

The Quaker Ridge links is within fifteen minutes' motor ride of the New York Athletic Club's country home at Travers Island, and it is believed that there will be no difficulty in getting 200 golfing members to also join the Quaker Ridge. This number will practically fill the membership of the Country Club, and moreover, will give the New York A. C. the balance of power in voting privilege. Already there are a number of persons who are member sof both organizations.

For the last two or three years the New York Athletic Club has been seeking some affiliation so as to provide golf for its members, negotiations having been carried on with the Siwanoy Country Club and the Fox Hills Golf Club, but the announcement of last night is the first intimation that an understanding had been reached.

OUIMET IN FINE FORM.

Champion Plays Fast Golf in Brookline Tournament.

BROOKLINE, Mass., May 14.—The fast play of Francis Ouimet, the national amateur golf champion, was the feature of the first round of match play for the Spring Cup at the Country Club today. In a match with H. P. Farrington of Woodland Ouimet made the third hole, 435 yards, and the eighth, 375 yards, in three strokes each. The summary:

First Round.—G. H. Lyall, Bellevue, beat S. K. Sterne, Tatnuck, 1 up, (19 holes;) Francis Ouimet, Woodland, beat H. P. Farrington, Woodland, 5 and 3; Jesse Guilford, Bellevue, beat M. F. O'Connell, Alpine, 2 and 1; W. P. Seeley, Brooklawn, beat G. H. Pushee, Weston, 1 up; T. M. Claflin, the Country, beat C. W. Bass, Portsmouth, 4 and 2; C. M. Amory, Essex County, beat W. C. Chick, the Country, 1 up; J. H. Sullivan, Jr., Woodland, beat P. W. Whittemore, the Country, 1 up, (19 holes;) B. W. Estabrook, the Country, beat H. H. Wilder, the Country, 5 and 4.

Second Round—Ouimet defeated Lyall, 4 and 3; Guilford defeated Seeley, 5 and 4; Claflin defeated Amory, 3 and 2; Sullivan defeated Estabrook, 4 and 3.

CYCLIST LINART INJURED.

Fractures Ribs and Otherwise Hurt in Spill at Newark.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 14.—Victor Linart, the Belgian cyclist, was badly hurt while training at the Newark Velodrome today. Linart was following a motor cycle, the pace being furnished by Jimmy Hunter, when the front tire of his wheel burst, and he was hurled over his handlebars, striking the planking on his face and rolling to the bottom of the incline.

Linart wore no headgear, as is customary for pace followers to carry for protection. He was picked up unconscious, and hurried to the City Hospital in an ambulance. Physicians there found that the foreign cyclist in addition to cuts and bruises about the head and shoulders, had sustained a fracture of the ribs and some internal injuries. His condition is regarded as serious.

Linart came to this country last Fall, being a refugee from Antwerp. He reached America in time to compete in the six-day race at Madison Square Garden. He also competed in the six-day grind in this city and in Chicago. This season he was signed to ride behind the motors, at which he is best. He was to have competed at the opening meeting at the Boston track, as well as at the Sheepshead Bay saucer.

Morris H. S. Marksmen Lead.

The Public Schools Athletic League has just announced the marksmen and sharpshooter qualifications for this year. Morris High School leads in both classes by a wide margin, seventy-five boys having earned the marksmen title and thirty-seven that of sharpshooter. Erasmus Hall High School ranks second with Commercial and Manual Training following in that order. The girls of Curtis High School have taken up shooting and four of them have qualified as marksmen. The competitions were held by fifteen schools and 302 marksmen qualified and the total number of sharpshooters was 197.

As a compliment to General George W. Wingate, President of the Public Schools Athletic League, the Wyandach Club of Long Island has presented a sub-target gun to Evander Childs High School of the Bronx. Practically all of the high schools have for a number of years been using such a contrivance and interschol sub-target tournaments are held each year. The gun is electrically controlled and eliminates the danger of cartridges. Dr. Paul Mann, who was so successful when coaching the Morris High School shooters, will have charge at Evander Childs High School.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Show Large Declines on Precautionary Selling—Continued Progress in Trade.

The transfer of stocks from weaker hands to stronger ones went on throughout yesterday's session on the Stock Exchange. In recognition of the uncertainty over the outcome of our note to Germany the market was under selling pressure throughout the day and the declines ran to considerable proportions. This was not because the market lacked support, but because there was no disposition at such a time to bid stocks up or do otherwise than to take on a scale down those offered for sale. Opinion is still much divided as to the response which Germany will make, and this division of views must needs last until Berlin has indicated what its attitude is to be. In the face of such a situation it is highly expedient that the stock market position should be strengthened as it was strengthened by yesterday's liquidation and absorption of stocks by stronger interests than those which sold. An advance in prices would have the directly opposite effect, for it would have left the market more exposed to the ill effects of any adverse news. It is this consideration which caused the financial community generally to welcome yesterday's decline. It was a measure of protection and one which was rendered all the more necessary by reason of the abrupt advance which had occurred early in the week.

After reading the President's message some in Wall Street thought that it increased the possibility of a rupture with Germany, but this could have been so only in the minds of those who had expected that this Government would fall short of taking a position which it was inevitable that it should take if it was to adhere to the stand which it had previously taken in its representations to the German Government. In the highest banking circles the President's message gave the greatest possible satisfaction, and the view was expressed that Mr. Wilson had done all that was possible to make it easy for Germany to accede to our demands. Therein the situation was regarded as having been bettered instead of having been rendered more tense by the publication of the full text of our note to Germany. Under the circumstances the decline in prices due to the fact that buyers took stocks as they were offered down instead of bidding them up did not in any sense represent disappointment over the tenor of our note to Germany. It merely reflected a spirit of caution befitting the occasion, and a resolution that liquidation of the kind which went on yesterday lessens the danger to which the market is exposed during the time when news of the very greatest importance is awaited.

Underlying yesterday's buying lay the belief that our strong financial and commercial position will serve to minimize the effect of any adverse news. If adverse news should come, while on the other hand it gives strong assurance of continued progress if the present grave situation resolves itself favorably. From trade sources come fresh testimony of the favorable course which events have been taking in business. Progress has apparently continued despite the serious international question with which the country has been dealing for the past week. It is particularly gratifying that business and finance find themselves in so sound a position at this time.

LONDON MARKET QUIET.

Dealers Awaiting Outcome of German-American Situation.

LONDON, May 14.—Money was plentiful and discount rates were difficult to maintain today.

Overnight war news from Flanders cheered the stock market, but business is not expected to increase pending more definite reports and the outcome of the German-American situation. Investment stocks were supported, but the other sections were dull.

Uncertainty was apparent in the American section, where the dealings were half-hearted. Canadian Pacific weakened in the afternoon and the rest of the list drooped and closed uncertain.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Under the Clouds' Shadows.

The question was raised the other day by one of the country's most prominent men, who happens to be at the head of a large national bank, as to whether the United States had not acquired a callousness to war and its outrages only different in degree from the indifference shown by people in the midst of the struggle. He made this suggestion when he saw how superficial an effect the loss of the Lusitania and its cargo of helpless humanity had on business. He might have had his views confirmed yesterday had he talked with many people in the financial district. When one remembers the disturbance that events infinitesimal in their importance by comparison with recent happenings had on the country's security markets it is hard to explain the unruffled calm which most business men have been displaying. The President has delivered a note to Germany that may easily invite an answer which would mean war, and yet nine men out of ten read the note and continued with their plans for the next few weeks as though assured that a special Providence would look out for this country. In Broad Street several hundred idlers divided their attention between a Socialist, an anti-Socialist, and a speaker for woman suffrage; the curb market remained interested in mining and profit sharing stocks; brokers saw prices decline to levels that were above those touched in one half hour when the Lusitania news arrived without any semblance of extraordinary excitement. "The world is upside down," said a man whose wealth might shrink by hundreds of thousands of dollars in the event of war. "I don't think we are going to fight, but then, I said to the last that Europe would not fight, so my judgment may be bad. But it does not seem to worry me, nor to worry any one very much."

Resources for War.

Another banker expressed the belief that war might easily be brought about, but said that it would not seriously interfere with the average American's pursuit of happiness. "We are not taxed as the people of older countries are taxed," he said. "If we declare war, or if it is declared for us, we must start to build up the army and navy. For that purpose we could raise $500,000,000 or twice that sum, and still have an economic advantage over our international competitors. By the time that we were ready to invade Germany let us hope that the necessity will have passed."

Frisco's Reorganization.

This is not a propitious time for floating new security issues that cannot count upon patriotic support, and it was not surprising yesterday to learn that the committees which had about completed a plan for rehabilitating the St. Louis & San Francisco decided to wait for more settled conditions before attempting the new financing which would be a necessary part of the new plan. Recent offerings have met with success, but they have all been of the highest grade, carrying a large interest return. The public has not shown any desire for issues without those desirable attributes.

Pump Company Reorganization.

As soon as holders of International Steam Pump securities in Holland and England have been informed of the reorganization plan, which has been ratified by the bond and stockholders' protective committees, the terms will be made public. This will probably occur within a day or two. Some of the leading features of the program have been learned in a general way. The amount of cash to be provided will be in the neighborhood of $3,500,000, which will, it is understood, be raised by a moderate assessment on the two classes of stock. The company has outstanding about $29,000,000 common and preferred shares, and a levy of $12 per share would be sufficient to raise the amount mentioned, although it is not known that this will be the figure. A new company is to be formed with three classes of stock, it is said, the total of which will be substantially smaller than the present aggregate of stock. Present owners of the 5 per cent. bonds will probably receive second preferred stock in exchange for their holdings.

Commercial Paper Dull.

The status of our relations with Germany has worked to reduce the output of commercial paper, and the caution of borrowers for mercantile purposes is especially noticeable to brokers, because business was rather light before the Lusitania was sunk. So far rates have not been affected any more than have rates for loans secured by Stock Exchange collateral. Three and a half per cent. is reported as the minimum discount price for the bulk of six months' bills in the market.

MOP. Note Extension.

When announcement was made several weeks ago that the $25,000,000 three-year 6 per cent. notes of the Missouri Pacific Railway, due June 1, would have to be extended, the response among the holders was not general. It was said yesterday that less than $3,000,000 of the notes had been deposited, representing mainly the small holders. An active campaign to get the notes extended was begun yesterday. A Director of the Missouri Pacific admitted that some of the holders were still incensed over the eleventh-hour proceedings of last year, when the notes were extended for the first time. A number of the holders, at that time, demanded their cash and got it. It was said that nearly $5,000,000 was raised at the last moment to save the Missouri Pacific from a receivership action. The Director pointed out that there would, under no conditions, be a repetition of last year's performance. Any holder, who was of a mind to "hold out," he said, might as well know now that he would be compelled to sue in the courts for the principal of the notes in his possession.

Receivership Improbable.

The Missouri Pacific bankers say that they do not expect any trouble in effecting another extension of the notes. A receivership, they say, is improbable even in these war-strained times. One man closely connected with the financial problems of the Missouri Pacific said:

"Even if several holders should resort to the courts to get cash for their notes, such action would not be tantamount to an application for receivers. A small percentage of the $25,000,000 notes, by order of a court, might be paid from cash or earnings. If holders of 20 per cent. of the notes should band together, however, and demand payment of the principal of their notes through the courts, the situation would be serious. Certainly the Missouri Pacific would not be able to pay out $5,000,000 in cash. Such a situation would invite receivership action. We hope to avoid all trouble, however, and to offer a financial plan for the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific, which will suit all concerned. This plan will be announced after the note extension is arranged for."

It is understood that the financial plan to be announced will call for the payment of the $25,000,000 extended notes at maturity next year. The bankers, it was said, consider it advisable to release the collateral behind these notes, particularly the $22,000,000 St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway first and refunding 6 per cent. gold bonds.

FINANCIAL.

New Orleans, April 26th, 1915.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by constitutional amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon, on the 26th day of May, 1915, for the purchase of $500,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorised by and to be issued under and subject to the act aforementioned, and the constitutional amendment ratifying same, and of the numbers, denominations and maturities of the authorized issue of $2,000,000, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue as given and prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being Ordinance No. 8623, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 2349 Commission Council Series, approved April 20th, 1915, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Three hundred and fifty of said bonds are of the denomination of $1000 and three hundred of the denomination of $500, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, evidenced by coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, respectively of each year.

Said bonds are the second issuance out of the total amount authorized by said act and constitutional amendment, and are of the numbers, amounts and maturities, as follows, to-wit:

Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($350,000) of said bonds shall be of the denomination of $1,000 each, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) of the denomination of $500 each, and of the numbers, amounts and maturities as follows, to-wit:

One hundred (100) bonds, Nos. 6601 to 6700, inclusive, of the denomination of $1,000, aggregating in face value $100,000, maturing July 1, 1955;

One hundred (100) bonds, Nos. 6301 to 6600, inclusive, of the denomination of $1,000, aggregating in face value $100,000, maturing July 1, 1954;

Fifty (50) bonds, Nos. 6451 to 6500, inclusive, of the denomination of $1,000, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1953;

One hundred (100) bonds, Nos. 5901 to 6000, inclusive, of the denomination of $500, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1953;

Fifty (50) bonds, Nos. 6401 to 6450, inclusive, of the denomination of $1,000, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1952;

Fifty (50) bonds, Nos. 6351 to 6400, inclusive, of the denomination of $1,000, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1951;

One hundred (100) bonds, Nos. 5701 to 5800, inclusive, of the denomination of $500, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1951.

Said bonds are subject to call by the City of New Orleans on the first day of July, 1939, or on any interest day thereafter, at par and accrued interest on thirty (30) days notice of its intention to so redeem, published in the official newspaper of the City of New Orleans.

They are, by the aforesaid act and constitutional amendment, exempt from all State, Parish, and Municipal taxes, and may be legally invested for the estates of minors and of interdicts, and are receivable by State, Parish, and Municipal officers, where, by law, deposits of bonds are allowed or required to be made.

The payment of the principal and interest of said bonds is made a preferential charge upon the net revenues of the Public Belt Railroad of the City of New Orleans, and are and will be issued under and subject to the aforementioned statutes and ordinances, all of which are hereby referred to and made part of this advertisement for greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $500,000 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall likewise be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $500,000, in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to W. B. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Utilities, the Public Belt Railroad Commission, or to the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired. A. G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Under the unsettling influence of nervousness as to the outcome of the tense international situation between the United States and Germany, there was a steady drift downward in prices on the Consolidated Stock Exchange practically throughout the day. Many stocks rallied slightly in the closing trading. Slow liquidation appeared to be under way all day, making the list the more vulnerable to bearish operations.

COTTON DECLINES ON NOTE TO GERMANY

Opens with Moderate Recession, but Later Breaks Sharply in Sympathy with Stocks.

SHORT SELLING IN EVIDENCE

Census Report on Mill Consumption Is Construed as Bullish and Induces Good Buying.

As a result of weakness which developed in the afternoon, cotton yesterday slumped sharply in sympathy with the weakness in stocks and closed at a net decline of 20 to 24 points. The selling appeared to be largely for short account, as longs are pretty thoroughly liquidated. The pressure, as seems quite natural, was based chiefly on the belief that Germany would promptly reject the proposals contained in the American note. Good weather in the South also was a factor operating in favor of lower prices.

The market opened steady at a decline of 5 to 7 points. There was good buying, based on the rather bullish showing of the census report on supply and distribution, giving consumption by American mills during April. The report placed the consumption at 513,610 bales, against 499,646 last year. Stocks of cotton held by manufacturers at the end of April were placed at 1,831,000 bales, against 1,572,000 last year. The stock of cotton in independent warehouses was given at 2,850,000 bales, against 1,353,000 last year. The amount of linters consumed during April was placed at 36,000 bales, against 26,000 last year.

The total consumption by American mills for the nine months ending with April is placed at 4,091,000 bales, against 4,264,000 last year. It is believed, however, that there will be a continued gain throughout the remainder of the season, and that the aggregate by the first of August will be in excess of last season.

Sentiment is now very bullish, with selling based largely on apprehension over international developments. All sorts of theories are advanced, and about the only argument given in favor of a steady market is the possibility that Germany, for fear of precipitating a clash with Italy, may be somewhat conciliatory in her reply to the United States.

The week-end figures were without any influence. The into-sight for the week was placed at 30,217 bales, against 85,374 last year. The total for the season is 14,279,000 bales, against 14,339,000 last year. Exports for the day amount to only 100 bales, which went to the Continent. The total is 7,501,000 against 8,418,000 last year.

Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged, Houston 20 points decline. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 15 points decline, 9.70 for middling upland. The range of contract prices (closed steady) was as follows:

STOCKS IN SHARP DECLINE.

Investors Hold Off and Traders Are Active Short Sellers.

The stock market registered again yesterday the product of nervousness among traders and investors over the complications with Germany, through net declines extending from 2 to more than 7 points. Throughout the day the all-absorbing topic of discussion in commission houses was the text of President Wilson's note, and the general impression gained was that the future held many uncertainties for security prices. Selling began at the opening, when declines in the neighborhood of a point occurred in many leading stocks, and continued steadily until a slight rally occurred near the close. Recoveries in most cases, however, were confined to fractions.

There were evidences of support whenever the decline showed signs of becoming hurried, and institutional buying on a broad scale was reported. While this last represented support also, it was not of the sort that worked to bring about substantial upturns of quotations, although it helped materially to prevent any sudden breaks.

United States Steel, which closed Thursday at 53, opened at 52 and soon sold down to 51⅜. Then it recovered to 52⅜, afterward swung down to 49⅞ and left off at 50¼. Union Pacific started with an opening decline of ⅝ at 123½, later receded to 121 and ended the day at 121½. Amalgamated, after opening at 65½, dropped to 62½, and rallied to 63¼.

The experiences of these shares was typical of the standard list, although more extended movements occurred in the war stocks. Bethlehem Steel, from an initial price of 136, shot downward to 125, and afterward advanced to 128 at the close. Pressed Steel Car at one time was down 7½ points, Westinghouse was off 4½, and American Locomotive 4½ points also.

Professional operators for the fall had their part in the day's recession, although the same caution which kept potential buyers out of the market helped to curtail short selling, too. Brokers of whom advice was sought by customers rather generally took a neutral position, saying they could not tell which way the market was likely to swing within the next few days. In some houses, it was said, customers were advised to do nothing in stocks until the reply of the German Government had been received.

The bond market lost considerable ground, led by a decline of a full point in the New York Central debenture 6s. The average fall of forty representative bonds was more than half a point, a sharp movement for a single day.

ARGENTINE LOAN CLOSED.

United States Half of $50,000,000 Bond Issue Sold Within a Week.

Announcement was made last night by the National City Bank that the entire issue of $25,000,000 of Argentine Government five-year 6 per cent. bonds had been sold. The issue was placed on sale less than a week ago, and the quick distribution by the syndicate, in the midst of the war troubles, has been favorably commented on in Wall Street. The last sale of the bonds, amounting to $1,000,000, was made last night.

The Argentine loan is for $50,000,000. Half of it was offered here and the other half in London. The sales in England have been very disappointing. Reports on Thursday stated that only 12 per cent. of the bonds had been disposed of.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Board of Directors of the Electric Bond Deposit Company has authorized the payment of a dividend of three-quarters of 1 per cent., payable June 1 to stockholders of record May 15. It is announced that a similar dividend will be paid monthly on the preferred stock until all accumulated dividends are paid.

On account of the limited orders for anthracite the mines of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company will be shut down today for an indefinite period.

The report of the Utah-Apex Mining Company for the quarter ended March 31 shows net profits, over and above fixed charges, of $46,665. It is announced that the company is prepared to retire the $49,000 bonded indebtedness at face value.

Harry B. Spencer was elected a Director of the Southern Railway Company yesterday to succeed the late Colonel A. B. Andrews.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Increased pressure of new wheat offerings from the Southwest caused further skepticism regarding the accuracy of the sensationally bullish crop advices which have been flooding the market recently, and after an early upturn, prices turned weak and at the close of the day were 1⅞ to 2½c net lower. In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.60½ and No. 2 hard at $1.62, c. i. f. track; No. 1 Northern Duluth; $1.57⅝, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.60⅝ c. i. f. Buffalo.

CORN.

Further reports of favorable weather conditions in Argentina as well as weakness in Europe and a decline in wheat caused active selling in the corn market, and closing prices were ¾ to 1⅛c net lower. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 84½c, prompt shipment.

OATS.

There were further rumors of export business in oats, but they lacked confirmation, and the market eased off in sympathy with wheat and corn, closing at ⅛ to 1¼c net lower. The local cash market was weak, standard being quoted at 58½ to 59c; No. 2 white, 59 to 59½c; No. 3 white, 57½ to 58c; No. 4 white, 57c; fancy clipped white, 59½ to 61c; ordinary clipped white, 58½ to 60c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was firm at the start owing to a show of strength in the hog position, where prices were 5 to 10 points higher, but during the day an easier tone developed and prices declined sharply, with heavy liquidation and selling on stop-loss orders. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 12,000; estimated for Saturday, 9,000. Kansas City received 3,500 and Omaha 6,000.

COFFEE.

Nervousness over the political situation had a tendency to discourage new business in the coffee market and to cause the closing out of old commitments. Furthermore, offers of old crop coffees from Rio were lower, and the market during the day was heavy, closing with a slight rally, although 7@11 points below the final of Thursday. Total sales for the day were 23,250 bags.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,990 pkgs. Attracted by the lower prices quoted of late, buyers are taking hold better, and the market has a steadier tone on the choice and fancy grades of creamery; the lower qualities are easy. Renovated barely sustained, while ladles and packing stock continue in buyers' favor. Creamery extras, (92 score,) 27½c; higher scoring, 28@28½c; firsts, 26@27c; seconds, 24½@25½c; thirds, 22@24c; creamery, old, common to prime, 22@26c; State dairy, finest, 27@27½c; good to prime, 25½@26½c; common to fair, 22@25c; renovated, extras, 23@23½c; firsts, 22@22½c; lower grades, 20@21c; imitation creamery, firsts, 21½@22c; ladles, current make, firsts, 21@21½c; seconds, 20@20½c; lower grades, 18½@19½c; packing stock, current make, No. 2, 19@19½c; lower grades, 18@18½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 17,880 cases. Arrivals are lighter, but a larger proportion is being offered on the open market. The proportion of very fine to fancy qualities is small, and for such values are fairly steady. General trade is sluggish, and there are accumulations of average good and lower grades, for which there is strong pressure to sell at weak and irregular prices. The full range of values shows little change, but the average of sales of the medium and lower grades is lower. Dirties and checks of very high quality are steady, but the market is burdened with undergrades, which drag at weak and irregular prices. Nearby white eggs fairly steady for the very finest qualities, but trade is quiet, and there is a considerable accumulation, for which comparatively easy prices have to be accepted. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 22½@23c; storage packed, extra firsts, 21½@22c; storage packed, firsts, 20½@21½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 21½@22c; regular packed, firsts, 20@21c; seconds, 18@19½c; thirds and poorer, 16@17½c; storage packed, dirties, No. 1, 17@18c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1, 17@17½c; No. 2 and poorer, 14½@16½c; checks, good to choice, dry, 15½@16½c; culls and inferior, 10@15c; State, Pennsylvania, and near-by hennery whites, fine to fancy, 23@23½c; ordinary to good, 21½@22½c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 21@22½c; Western, gathered whites, 21@22c; State, Pennsylvania, and near-by hennery browns, 22@23c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 20@21½c; duck eggs, State and near by, Indian Runner, 25@27c; Baltimore, per dozen, 22@24c; Western, 18@21c; Tennessee and other Southern, 16@20c.

Bank Acceptances

The New York State banking law specifically confers upon banks and trust companies in New York State the power to accept for payment at a future date drafts drawn upon themselves by their customers.

Acceptances are in common use in Europe and are an important factor there in the open discount market.

With the object of assisting in the establishment of such a market here, we have been dealing in first class paper of this character since the present state law was passed.

Our pamphlet, "Bank Acceptances," may be had upon application.

STOCKHOLDERS' PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE

To the Stockholders:

Believing that there is a substantial value in the stock of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company and that the condition of the Company makes it feasible to reorganize to the great benefit of shareholders, the undersigned, at the request of a large number of shareholders, have formed a committee for the purpose of preparing and submitting a plan of reorganization.

It will be their endeavor to formulate a plan that will permit the Company to expand along sound lines in accordance with the requirements of the great territory which it aims to serve and to place the property, physically and financially, in such condition that it may rank with the most efficient railroads in similar and nearby territory.

It is not the intention of the Committee to call for a deposit of shares at the present time, but if nothing unforeseen occurs, to wait until a plan has been formulated so that stockholders when depositing may fully understand the condition of the Company's affairs and the details of the proposed plan.

The working out of such a plan is already engaging the attention of your Committee, who are giving it immediate and earnest consideration, and it is hoped that when completed it will meet the unanimous approval of the shareholders.

APPELLATE DIVISION FOR A THAW JURY

JUSTICE HENDRICK UPHELD

Harry K. Thaw was successful yesterday in the second step taken by his lawyers to have his sanity passed upon by a jury, when the Appellate Division dismissed the writ of prohibition sued out by the Attorney General's office restraining Supreme Court Justice Hendrick from proceeding with a jury trial next Monday. Unless the Attorney General's office takes the case to the Court of Appeals immediately, the trial will proceed.

Assistant District Attorney Johnstone, representing the Attorney General's office, yesterday, when asked what action, if any, would be taken by the Attorney General, said that there would probably be a conference at which future action would be decided upon.

Thaw's attorneys, including John B. Stanchfield and Abel I. Smith, won their first move when they obtained the jury trial order from Justice Hendrick. The latter, in passing upon the point, said that he would bring the case before a jury in order to have the advice of such a body in determining the question of Thaw's sanity.

The objection of the Attorney General's office to Justice Hendrick's decision was mainly that he, the Justice, alone was empowered to pass upon the question, and that he had acted outside his jurisdiction in sending the question of fact to a jury. Against this contention Mr. Stanchfield argued that the law was clear to the effect that the whole procedure lay within the discretion of the Justice.

The opinion of the court, written by Justice Laughlin and concurred in by all the Justices, explains that the Attorney General's office did not proceed in the proper manner in determining the question, in that the State's attorneys sued out a writ of prohibition. In hinting at the way in which the Attorney General may yet prevent the jury trial, the court goes into a recitation of the facts and the law and says:

"The Special Term of the Supreme Court over which the respondent, Hendrick, is presiding has jurisdiction to determine the question of Thaw's sanity. That is conceded. But it is contended by the relator, the Attorney General, that the court is threatening to proceed in excess of its jurisdiction in calling a jury to its aid.

"The general rule is that a writ of prohibition will lie to enjoin a court or other tribunal from proceeding without jurisdiction or in excess of its jurisdiction.

"We are of the opinion, however, that the excess of jurisdiction, as distinguished from want of jurisdiction, for which a writ of prohibition will lie, does not relate to the prevention of errors of law or of the procedure in an action or proceeding over which the court has jurisdiction, but to a threatened exercise of jurisdiction to make a determination or decision which the court has not the power to make."

The court then says that the prohibition writ will lie only where there is no other remedy, either by appeal, by writ of certiorari, by a suit in equity or otherwise.

SIX ARRESTED AS SHARPERS

Charged with attempting to swindle Harry Landau of 351 East Seventy-seventh Street out of $12,000 by means of a "money-making machine," six men were locked up in Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon charged with attempted grand larceny. They were Philip Schmielz, a musician, of 351 East Seventy-seventh Street; Louis Silverman, a broker, of 244 Morris Avenue, the Bronx; Benjamin Padolsky, a tailor, of 161 Hopkins Street, Brooklyn; Israel Dressler, a café keeper, of 17 West Twenty-fourth Street; William Padolsky, a peddler, of 161 Hopkins Street, Brooklyn, and David Kaplan, a machinist, of 240 Seigel Street, Brooklyn.

Landau told Police Inspector Cray that he was taken to the saloon owned by Dressler and shown a machine containing a rectangular box. When a button was pushed new bills of any denomination were apparently produced. A conference was called for yesterday afternoon when Landau said, he was to hand over $12,000 for his part in the cost of the machine and his share in the royalties. He became suspicious, however, and notified the police.

PENICK & FORD ABSOLVED.

Dropped as Defendants in Suit Against Corn Products Company.

Penick & Ford, manufacturers of molasses and mixed table syrups in New Orleans with offices here at 17 Battery Place, as well as the individual members of the firm, William S. Penick, James P. Ford, and Frederick T. Bedford, have been dropped from the list of defendants in the Sherman law suit brought by the Government against the Corn Products Refining Company and the so-called Glucose Trust. Judge Mayer in the Federal District Court yesterday made an order dismissing the case against these particular defendants.

Special Assistant Attorney General Lindsley explained that Penick & Ford had complied with all the demands made by the Government in the suit, and Judge Mayer issued an injunction against the Corn Products Refining Company, prohibiting it from acquiring any stocks or bonds or other securities of Penick & Ford. It also prohibited Penick & Ford from having any officers, Directors, agents, or employes in common with the Corn Products Refining Company.

TO END JURY EXEMPTION.

Another Wickersham Proposal Would Modify Trial by Jury.

ALBANY, May 14.—George W. Wickersham, majority leader of the Constitutional Convention, and Chairman of its Judiciary Committee, presented two proposals today which are regarded as foreshadowing judiciary reforms to be recommended by the convention.

One of the Wickersham proposals provides for a new section in Article III. under which all existing exemptions from jury duty would be abolished and the Legislature in the future would be restrained from enacting any law exempting from jury duty any person not in the service of the United States or the State. The question of repealing existing exemptions was up for discussion before the Judiciary Committee this week, and it is supposed that the Wickersham proposal comes before the convention with the support of that body.

Another proposal introduced by Mr. Wickersham would give the Legislature the right to enact laws providing for the trial of civil cases before a jury composed of less than twelve members. The proposal also provides that trial by jury may be waived in all civil cases by agreement and in all criminal cases, except where the penalty is death or life imprisonment, with the consent of both parties expressed in open court.

Meier Steinbrink, Republican delegate from Kings, presented a proposal looking to the consolidating of the county courts in the counties composing New York City with the City Court, the Municipal Court, and the City Court into the City Court of the City of New York. The justices of the consolidated courts in office would be permitted to serve out their terms and their successors would be elected for terms of ten years.

Martin Saxe, Chairman of the Committee on Taxation, announced for June 1 at 8 P. M., in the Senate chamber, a public hearing on the Nixon proposal to wipe out the exemption from taxation now enjoyed by churches, schools, cemetery associations, and private charities.

HATTERS SUE FOR $25,000.

Want Interest of Funds Attached by Boycott Action.

NORWALK, Conn., May 14.—Suits aggregating $25,000 were brought today by the United Hatters of North America against banks in Norwalk and Danbury and against D. E. Loewe & Co. of Danbury to recover accrued interest on funds of the hatters, which were attached when the Loewe company brought the boycott action against the hatters in 1903. The cases are returnable to the Superior Court of Fairfield County June 1.

The hatters' case in one form or another has been in litigation for about twelve years. Recently a judgment for Loewe & Co. to recover more than $250,000 was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States. The judgment is now collectible, and the United Hatters of North America, in convention in New York this week, are considering plans for its payment, in order that the individual hatters may not lose their homes.

The hatters make no objection to payment of the amounts on deposit at the time of the attachment, but claim that the interest, which now amounts to nearly as much as the original principal, belongs to them. In addition they ask for an injunction restraining D. E. Loewe & Co. from collecting, and the defendant banks from paying, "said dividends or interest money" to any one except the plaintiff.

BART DUNN QUITS JERSEY.

Leaves the Home of His Fiancee and Starts for New York.

Special to The New York Times.

SUMMIT, N. J., May 14.—Bart Dunn, convicted Tammany Hall road contractor, left here about noon today for New York. He was accompanied by his fiancée, Mrs. Olivia Lakeland, and Dr. Edward E. Howe of this city. Dunn was removed last night from Fair Oaks Sanitarium to the home of Mrs. Lakeland, where he passed the night. Mrs. Lakeland, who declares she has already spent $20,000 to help Dunn, said this morning:

"Do you know how he could have saved himself? If he had deserted Murphy and his party and gone over to Sulzer and Hennessey, Bart Dunn would be free today. Dunn was true to his friends and refused to turn on them as others did. Sulzer sent two times to Bart to come to Albany and see him, but he threw the messages into the wastebasket. Then Hennessey sent for him and when he refused to go threatened him. His indictment was the result of a frame-up. I have heard it charged that Fourteenth Street was paying Dunn's bills. That is untrue. Murphy is doing nothing for him and has done nothing. The action today does not mean any let-up in the battle we will wage before the Court of Appeals to have the conviction set aside."

FAST B. & O. TRAIN WRECKED

Two Riders Killed and Six Others Missing in Ohio Accident.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., May 14.—Two train riders were killed, two were injured, perhaps fatally, and six are missing under the wrekage of fourteen steel cars that were piled in front of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad station at Belmont, near here, by the wreck of a fast freight train late today.

The train was going at great speed when a drawbar is reported to have broken and derailed fourteen cars, in one of which twenty vagrants are said to have been riding.

DISCOVERIES NEAR COMET.

Two Bodies Observed from Yerkes Observatory by Prof. Barnard.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 14.—Professor Barnard of the Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., has discovered two companion bodies near Mellish's comet, according to an official announcement received at the Harvard University today.

One of the bodies, observed on May 12, was conspicuous and had a distance from the comet of 28 seconds and a position angle of 285 degrees. The other body was faint and occupied an intermediate position in the same line.

ASK COURT TO DEFER WIRELESS DECISION

Tuckerton Station Now Only Means of Communication with Germany.

WAR'S EFFECT ON THE SUIT

French Company Argues That Court Has Nothing to Do with Disabilities Created by Conflict.

After hearing argument Vice Chancellor Stevens in the Chancery Court in Newark yesterday reserved decision pending the filing of briefs in the case of the Compagnie Universelle de Telegraphie et de Telephonic Sans Fil to compel the surrender of the Tuckerton Radio Station, held by a German company.

The defendants asked the Court of Chancery to suspend the exercise of its jurisdiction until the close of the war, alleging that the Tuckerton station was Germany's sole remaining means of communication with the United States and with the Western World in general, owing to the fact that all cable communication with Germany had been cut off by her enemies, and that the Sayville (L. I.) station was only a receiving station and of relatively small power.

Attorney George Zabriskie, in behalf of the French company, urged that the Court had nothing to do with any disabilities created by the state of war, because that merely prevented enforcement of the contract in the courts of Germany and France, but did not affect rights asserted in a neutral country. He characterized the plea as raising a mere question of courtesy, but Vice-Shancellor Stevens pointed out that, in view of the allegations of the plea, admitted to be true, that commercial dealings between the parties were prohibited by the laws of France and Germany, and that the German defendants would be subject to severe penalties in their own country if they should transfer any property or pay any money to the French company, the plea presented much more than a question of courtesy.

Mr. Untermyer, for the defendants, urged that by generally acknowledged principles of international law the contract between these parties was suspended by the war, and said he might, with much show of reason, argue that the contract had been entirely abrogated, but preferred to take the milder course of mese suspension. He pointed out the importance to the United States and its citizens of maintaining communication with Germany by means of the Tuckerton station, and read the allegations of the plea to the effect that the real and principal object of tht suit was to obtain possession of the Tuckerton station and shut it down, thus isolating Germany.

Mr. Untermyer argued that the positive interests of the United States require that the status quo be maintained, because the Tuckerton station was largely used by the United States Government for communication with Ambassador Gerard and was the only practicable means for the transmission of commercial messages by citizens of the United States and those of Mexico and Sou... America and of the Far East to Germany.

The Vice Chancellor expressed interest in the new questions that were presented and reserved decision.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.

Fifteen-Year-Old Boy's Brave Effort to Save Little One Fails.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., May 14.—Fifteen-year-old Peter Seyer peered from the rear window of his home on the third floor of a flat house at 100 Fourth Street this afternoon, when he heard children yelling in the back yard, and saw 5-year-old Andrew Sevento, whose home was on the first floor, in flames.

Young Sevento and several playmates had filled a big wash boiler with papers and lighted them after little Andrew had poured on some kerosene oil. The oil had splashed on his clothes and they had caught fire.

Seyer saw the other children run, and, without thinking of the danger to himself, jumped out of the window into the rear yard. He landed heavily, but sprang toward the blazing child and wrapped the boy in his coat, putting out the flames before he sank down himself, an ankle, sprained by his leap, giving way under him.

Neighbors soon came and little Andrew was hurried to St. Mary's Hospital, where he died tonight. Young Seyer went to bed, but he will be all right in a few days.

CLAFLIN FEES $66,000.

Judge Learned Hand Awards the Receivers $33,000 Each.

Judge Learned Hand, in the Federal District Court, yesterday fixed the fees of Joseph B. Martindale and Frederic A. Juillard as receivers for the H. B. Claflin Company at $33,000 each. It had been expected that their remuneration would be calculated on a percentage basis, and that the receivers would get from $50,000 to $150,000 each. Judge Hand, however, said that he thought that the percentage basis was erroneous for such a case, except as fixing the maximum.

The corporation which took over the Claflin assets, the Judge said, had the option of paying other fees to the receivers, and if it desired to add to their compensation it might obtain an order authorizing it to do so.

LINER REPLACES STRIKERS.

St. Louis Refuses to Pay $20 War Bonus and Ships New Stokers.

One hundred and fifty striking oilers, stokers and coal passers, who refused to sign articles with the American liner St. Louis on Thursday morning unless the International Mercantile Marine Company increased the war risk bonus from $5 to $20 for each man, went to the pier at 9 o'clock yesterday morning to hear the final decision of the company.

When informed by Purser Howard Hinsley that the $20 would not be granted, the men declined to sign up and left in a body. Then shipping agencies were notified and they sent 150 men to replace the strikers. The new men were signed on and went on board the St. Louis, where they will remain until the liner sails at noon today for Liverpool.

In order to prevent any possibility of rioting at the American Line pier at the foot of West Twenty-second Street, the company has engaged guards who will be on duty until the St. Louis sails.

GOLDWATER MAY RUN CARS.

Offers to Show Shonts How to Operate a Street Railroad.

Health Commissioner Goldwater has decided to go into the business of operating street cars. He admits that, officially, he may be going beyond the bounds of the HelahtDepartment, but he has published his unofficial offer to Theodore P. Shonts, President of the New York Railways Company, in the official Weekly Bulletin of the Department of Health under the heading, "An Offer to Help Mr. Shonts."

Mr. Shonts wrote to the Health Commissioner on April 13 to tell him that, if he were to obey the department's order and run on Sixth Avenue in the rush hour sufficient cars to provide seats for two-thirds of the passengers, he would be exceeding the track capacity and it would be impossible to keep up a satisfactory movement of the cars.

Dr. Goldwater announces that, after a careful study of the question and after conferences with the representatives of the company, he is convinced the maximum service is not being operated. So he writes:

> Now, in order to put the matter to a test, upon which the future action of this department may reasonably be predicated, I am writing to ask whether your company would be willing, for an experimental period to be agreed upon, to permit a representative of this department to take charge of the dispatching of cars on this line. I firmly believe that a duly authorized person, supplied with sufficient rolling stock and help, and thoroughly imbued with the importance to the public of the issue involved, could successfully operate over this line, during the rush hours, at least 10 per cent. more cars than the number which you now declare to be, in your opinion, the maximum service. The experiment here proposed would have value for both of us and for the public, and I hope that you will decide to permit it to be made.

Dr. Goldwater explains that in operating street cars he would not be acting in his official capacity, for his authority is limited to issuing an order to the company.

ADAPTING GARY PLAN HERE.

Educators to Discuss School System Next Friday Night.

The Gary, Ind., plan of operating public schools, and its adaptation to New York City, will be discussed at a conference upon the Gary and Ettinger plans in the New York City public schools in the East Hall of the Russell Sage Foundation Building, 130 East Twenty-second Street, on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. The conference will be under the auspices of the Public Education Association of this city, and the subject will be presented by those who are actually adapting the plans to the school needs here.

In adapting the Gary plan to the New York City schools, under the direction of William A. Wirt, Superintendent of Schools of Gary, Ind., there have developed two different methods, one under the direct supervision of Mr. Wirt himself, and the other under the direction of Associate Superintendent Ettinger, who was designated by the Department of Education to co-operate with Mr. Wirt in putting the plan into effect.

Mr. Wirt will be presnt to answer questions and take part in the open discussion to follow the addresses. The presidng officer will be Commissioner John Martin, Chairman of the Committee on Vocational Education of the Board of Education, and the speakers will be Miss Harriet M. Johnson of the Public Education Association, who will give a general outline of the Gary plan based on her personal study of the schools in Gary; Angelo Patri, Principal of Public School 45 in the Bronx, who will tell how the plan is being worked out in his school; William E. Grady, Principal of Public School 64, Manhattan, who will tell how the Ettinger plan is being put into operation in his school, and Dr. John Dewey of Columbia University, who will summarize the discussion to follow and point out the significance of the plans for vocational education.

The conference will be open to members of the Public Education Association and the Department of Education, and to all those who are interested in the problem of public education.

CHILDS COMPANY ACCUSED.

Restaurant Concern Charged with Putting Water Into Milk.

The Childs Company, which operates a chain of restaurants, with main offices at 200 Fifth Avenue, was represented in Jefferson Market Court yesterday by the Treasurer, S. Willard Smith, on whom two summonses had been served charging his corporation with violating the sanitary code by adulterating milk with water and also removing the cream. Magistrate Harris put the case over for trial in Special Sessions.

O. A. H. Von Rosenberg, Inspector of the Board of Health, charged that on Feb. 27 he stopped one of the Childs milk wagons at Christopher Street Ferry and found that forty quarts of milk had been adulterated with water and the cream removed. Inspector Samuel Goldman made a similar charge against the company based on an examination of milk on a Childs wagon March 27 at the West Twenty-third Street Ferry.

1 FIREMAN DEAD, 2 DYING.

Four Others Injured in Fire That Destroyed Newark Tannery.

As a result of injuries suffered at the fire which destroyed the tannery of George Stengel, Incorporated, on Weston Avenue, near Frelinghuysen Avenue, Newark, early yesterday morning, Lieutenant William Flood of Engine Company 6 is dead, and Deputy Chief Matthew P. A. McDermitt and Fireman John A. Stuetz are in a dying condition in the City Hospital. Four other fire fighters are in the same institution, but their injuries are not serious.

The fire fighters were caught under a falling wall while attacking the blaze in the rear of the plant. The men were buried under tons of bricks and mortar, and were rescued with difficulty by fire fighters who went to their rescue. The loss to the plant is roughly estimated at $250,000. The origin of the blaze has not been determined.

DETROIT STRIKE AGREEMENT

Mayor Brings Opposing Factions Together for Settlement.

DETROIT, May 14.—By unanimous vote the striking motormen and conductors of the Detroit United Railway today agreed to a plan for settlement of the labor trouble which began yesterday morning. The plan for a settlement of the strike was drawn up by Mayor Oscar B. Marx and Charles B. Warren, President of the Detroit Board of Commerce, after conferences with officials of the company and the striking carmen.

The immediate resumption of car service is provided for, and the appointment of an Arbitration Board of three members to decide upon the merits of the demands of the employes.

'MOTHER' JONES ASKS AID FOR LABOR MEN

Tells Story of Colorado Strike to Industrial Commission and Gives Idea of Better Laws.

GUNMEN USED IN STRIKES

California Labor Leader Charges Corporations with Employing Them in Labor Disputes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—"Mother" Jones today continued her testimony before the Industrial Commission and told the story of the Colorado coal mine strike and the shooting of women and children in the tent colony at Ludlow in a most dramatic manner. When the time came for her to give her ideas of remedial measures in the labor struggle she demanded that all private detective agencies and organizations should be prohibited by law and with them the system of gunmen employment agencies.

"The Government should take over the detective agencies and run them honestly," said Mrs. Jones, "and the Government should also own mines and railroads and run them honestly. The belief that the militia of the States and the troops of the regular army are always to be used against the laboring man is producing a feeling that the Government is against the workingman and it is making anarchists out of men who would otherwise be the very best and most orderly sort of citizens—just as good as your fathers and mine. The feeling that is growing every day in this great country of ours is going to result in terrible consequences if we do not soon find a remedy and check it."

As an illustration of her view, "Mother" Jones recited the story of 150 miners that were indicted in Colorado for acts of violence in resisting machine guns, sharpshooters and the militia, who she asserted, fired on the wives and children. But not a single operator or manager was indicted, she said, although there was an abundance of evidence of their acts in violation of the law and the Congressional investigation proved that they had employed gunmen and that women and children were slaughtered in consequence.

Daniel Davenport, counsel for the Anti-Boycott Association, made a brief statement to the commission defending the position taken by the employers, and the legal conduct of the celebrated Danbury hatters case, which resulted in the affirmation, by the Supreme Court of the United States, of the imposition of a heavy fine upon the boycotters. Mr. Davenport was asked by Chairman Walsh for the names of the employers and firms comprising the Anti-Boycotters Association which prosecuted the case against the hatters. He declined to give them on the ground that the identity of his clients was a matter of confidence and privilege.

Anton Johannsen, a California labor organizer, voiced a deep dissatisfaction with justice, under which, he declared, "the rich man goes free and the poor man goes to jail."

Reviewing the activities of the International Iron Workers' Union, which culminated in the trial of the McNamara brothers and other union leaders for dynamiting, and the strikes of the building trades in Los Angeles and Stockton, Cal., Johannsen told the commission a picturesque story of strike methods, and charged that the use of gunmen and thugs by employers was widespread.

Commissioner Weinstock asked Johannsen if he justified the use of violence, specifically referring to the dynamiting cases.

"It may be," said the witness, "that the iron workers fought back with dynamite. I do not justify the killing of any man. You talk about the twenty-six lives lost in The Los Angeles Times Building, but what of the 300, or 400, or 500 men killed by the steel trust in the metal trades. I say put them all in jail."

Johannsen will continue his testimony tomorrow, when Clarence Darrow and Walter Drew are also expected to testify.

Carpet Wool Supply.

Complaint is made that very little of the carpet wool being brought into this country finds its way into the open market. While it is generally believed that the larger carpet manufacturing concerns have fair stocks on hand, the smaller mills and carpet yarn spinners are said to be running short of the raw material. Wool houses here have very limited stocks on which to draw. In fact, importers and brokers have little in the way of supplies to meet requests from buyers. It is practically impossible to get Indian or Russian wools, while it is so uncertain how China shipments will come forward that dealers are wary of accepting orders for future business to cover next season.

Additions Made to Wool List.

Arrangements have been completed whereby wool waste and camel's hair noils may be brought in to this country under the arrangement between the Textile Alliance and the British government. The addition of these items to the list of wools that can be imported through the offices of the Alliance will have its significance chiefly in respect to the filling of army contracts. The cloth used for uniforms contains an appreciable percentage of wool waste, and the difficulty for the mills engaged in this sort of work has been to get sufficient supplies of wool waste or shoddy. The importation of this material will also affect the price of cheaper woolens to some extent, inasmuch as these goods also contain shoddy.

Comment on the German Note.

President Wilson's note to Germany, with its possible far-reaching effects, was the principal theme in wholesale dry goods circles yesterday. While most of the sentiment was of an optimistic character based on the belief that Germany will comply with all or most of the demands made by the United States, there were others who thought the situation more or less ominous. Few believe that war will result, but should worse come to worst, jobbers generally take the view that business is on a firm basis and cannot be easily upset whatever the turn of events. The fact that Germany is so completely tied down by the present European conflict is also regarded as another reason for assurance at this time.

Keeping Departments Distinct.

Although the operation of the coat and suit department and the dress department as two distinct branches of a retail business may mean additional expense, there are reasons why the plan is a more profitable one. The merchandise manager of one of the large stores in this city states that, where the two lines are carried together, one is always bound to be slighted at certain times. Thus when, during the past season, there was an unusually brisk demand for suits salespeople were withdrawn from the dresses where the two departments were combined. With a separate buyer and organization for the dresses, he said that a good business might have been done in this line even when the suits were selling at their best.

Good Business in Wash Goods.

During the week jobbers have been doing a very satisfactory business in the wash goods line. Buyers have proved partial to the present season novelties and have taken them freely, this action being based chiefly on the ground that the new ideas have been selling well by the retailers who found the goods popular among the ultimate consumers at the very start of the season. Transactions have been particularly heavy in striped fabrics, while colored goods are running well. Summer weather in many sections of the country is resulting in quick sales by store keepers, who in turn are looking to the jobbers for additional supplies. There is always so much uncertainty in the trade as to how novelties will take, that handlers here are more than pleased with the present demand.

Protecting American Trademarks.

The United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has from time to time received complaint that American trade marks on certain American goods, especially cotton piece goods, which have become established and popular in China, have been imitated by Japanese manufacturers. The New York branch of the bureau has been advised that, under a certain treaty, registry of such trade marks in Tokio would protect American manufacturers against infringements in China. A report on the subject by Julean H. Arnold, United States Commercial Attaché, at Shanghai, has been received at the New York office, and manufacturers interested may inspect the same by applying to Stanley H. Rose, Acting Commercial Agent in Charge, Room, 409 Custom House.

To Represent Ecuador.

Vicente Gonzales of New York, Latin American Trade Adviser and Foreign Exchange Expert for the National Association of Manufacturers, has been appointed official representative of the Government of Ecuador at the coming Pan-American Conference to be held in Washington, May 24. The appointment of Mr. Gonzales is regarded as a particularly happy one in business circles in this city, since his long residence and experience in this country and South America have made him especially familiar with the need for stimulating trade between the two continents. In Peru and Ecuador he conducted the campaigns for putting the currency of both countries on a gold standard basis. He drafted the present tariff law of Ecuador, which went into effect in 1905, and the Code of Commerce which became effective in 1907.

Toymakers' Prospects Good.

While the domestic toy manufacturers at the present time do not find the demand of a very brisk nature, jobbers have bought freely and there is every indication that more goods will be sold this year than ever under the abnormal conditions existing last season. Buyers for the retail stores are holding off on the chance that they may be able to secure German goods, but the situation abroad does not give much promise of fulfilling their desire. Manufacturers are of the opinion that much of the business that has been won from the importers through war conditions will remain after hostilities cease. In the first place, it is pointed out that lines have been broadened to include certain goods that were formerly obtainable only in Europe. Besides this, the buyers have learned that they were not fully posted on what this market could supply if the need arose. There has been a notable increase in the number of toy manufacturers during the last six months.

Printcloths Trade Restricted.

Prices in the gray goods market continued firm yesterday, as has been the case throughout the week. There was a good inquiry yesterday for drills and some export business on sheetings for Red Sea and other markets. Bids for small lots of printcloths were made, but it was apparent that the prospective buyers were asking price concessions which the mills were unwilling to meet. Those seeking goods at a lower level than prevailing prices were disappointed. The uncertainties of the political situation are, however, having the effect of restricting operations. Many seem to think it would be better for the market if the President's note resulted in hostilities with Germany, since, it is argued, factors would know where they stand and how to adjust matters. Uncertainty, these factors claim, has the effect of bringing things to a standstill. Leading commission houses yesterday quoted spot goods as follows:

39 -inch,	80-80s..6¼c	38½-inch,	64-56s..3⅞c

DRY GOODS TRADE BETTER.

Retailers Buying Liberally for Their Fall Stock.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Wholesale shipments of dry goods have run about the same as during the corresponding period a year ago. Sales for future delivery show a fair percentage of increase.

"Retailers are anticipating their Fall needs liberally in some lines and are buying for immediate business as their sales requirements demand. Weather conditions have been favorable to the turning of retail stocks of seasonable merchandise.

"There has been a good attendance of buyers in the market and collections are better than during the same period a year ago."

COTTON EXPORTS GROW.

672,008 Bales Sent Abroad Last Month—Imports Also Improve.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Cotton used during April was 513,610 bales, exclusive of linters, compared with 499,646 in April last year, the Census Bureau announced today. During the nine months ended April 30 cotton used was 4,091,285 bales, against 4,264,856 in the same period the previous year.

Cotton on hand April 30 in manufacturing establishments was 1,831,035 bales, against 1,572,058 yast year, and in independent warehouses 2,850,189 bales, against 1,353,295 last year.

Exports in April were 672,008 bales, against 398,223 last year. Imports were 54,479 bales, against 32,917 last year.

Spindles operated during April numbered 30,933,236, against 31,014,038 last year.

BUSINESS SHOWING GAINS.

Commercial Agencies Say War Talk Has Had Little Effect.

Commenting on the condition of trade and the business of the banks, Dunn's Review says:

> The developments of the week afford new proof of the essential stability and power of the financial and business structure. While there is uncertainty as to the final outcome, there is faith in the ability of the nation to adapt itself with financial readiness to every contingency that may arise. Outside of the stock, cotton, and other equally sensitive markets, the effect of the new war developments has not materially changed the generally favorable aspect of the trade situation. With scarcely an exception, statistical comparisons by which business activity is measured reflect progressive improvement, and that the steady gain in bank clearings is not wholly due to the expansion in speculative operations is indicated by the continued increases at many of the leading centres outside of New York.
>
> Bank exchanges this week at the leading cities in the United States again make quite a favorable comparison with a year ago, the total amounting to $3,210,971,438, an increase of 23.6 per cent. as compared with the $2,597,624,631 of the same week last year and of 19.5 per cent. as contrasted with the corresponding week in 1913, when $2,622,015,021 was reported. Clearings at New York continue far in excess of the two immediately preceding years, the gains in that centre being, respectively, 34.7 and 28 per cent.

Bradstreet's says:

> Possible international political complications affect sentiment and prices in speculative markets, particularly securities, grain, and cotton, and perhaps throw shadows over optimistic expectations of a boom in trade, but thus far foreign developments have failed of especial untoward effect upon domestic trade or industry. In fact, and allowing for seasonal shifting from one branch of distribution to another, growth over a rather wide area seems to be the chief characteristic, and in industrial quarters evidences of increasing activity are patent, though, of course, certain enterprises and sections of the country must still be counted among the economic laggards.

Extra Police for Coney Island.

Chief Inspector Schmittberger yesterday announced the annual transfer of policemen to Coney Island for the Summer season. He detailed to duty there one Lieutenant, three Sergeants, sixty-eight foot patrolmen, and six mounted patrolmen. They will report to the Captain of the Coney Island Precinct at 8 o'clock this evening, and will stay on duty there until the close of the Summer season.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Tassels, Tea, and Films Among the Articles Considered.

C. Willenborg & Co. lost yesterday before the Board of General Appraisers in claims under the present tariff as to loosely hanging silk threads, which in some instances are connected by a short piece of silk cord to a small circular ornament, which is also made in part of silk. They were described on the firm's invoices as "tassels" or "ornaments." Collector Malone took duty at 60 per cent. under the provision for "ornaments" however made. The importers claimed classification under the provision for "cords and tassels" composed of silk with a customs tax of 45 per cent. ad valorem. Judge Howell decided that, as silk tassels are not separately provided for in the law, the Collector's classification must stand.

It was decided that H. C. Banwell, London, sales manager for the National Cash Register Company, is liable for the full duty accruing on importations of photographic films and magic lantern slides brought in under the Tariff act of 1909. The films were taxed 1½ cents per foot, while the slides came in for a tax of 45 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures in chief value of metal. Mr. Banwell, it seems, brought the articles along to illustrate a lecture he was to deliver at his company's offices in Dayton, Ohio. The testimony showed that there was a failure to file an affidavit stating that the importer is a professional lecturer, nor was a bond filed for the re-exportation of the articles at the end of six months. In view of the failure to comply with the regulations the claim for free entry was overruled.

M. J. Corbett & Co. were sustained in contentions regarding the rate of duty to accrue on importations of black hat plush. It was returned for duty at 50 per cent. ad valorem as plush composed in chief value of silk. The importers asserted that the merchandise is used exclusively for men's hats, and is commercially known as "hatters' plush" within the meaning of the law. The board agreed and held that the goods should be allowed to enter at only 10 per cent. ad valorem.

IMPORTS AGAIN LESS.

Some of the Main Items Brought to This Port Last Week.

Imports at this port took another tumble in the week ended May 8, according to the Custom House report made public yesterday. Dry goods entries were $500,000 greater than the week before. The week's total inward movement amounted to $16,636,882, compared with $18,817,808 in the week before, and $20,548,603 in the week before that. Indigo made a good showing with a value of $56,930, while aniline colors were appraised at $13,666. Dyewood extract reached the high value of $158,586, while dyewood and fustic entries were small. Argols brought in were worth $98,329. No alizarine colors were reported.

Jewelry, precious stones and watches were appraised at $419,002, while hides and findings had a value of $1,766,977, of which undressed hides totaled $1,662,116. India rubber, manufactures and wastes were returned at $1,331,872. Sugar imports totaled $3,609,804, and wool $1,051,989. Coffee entries totaled $1,158,782, and raw cocoa $577,468. Cotton imports were valued at $125,389. Antimony imports were returned at $83,976. Fresh beef entries were down to $2,275.

Dry goods entered for consumption totaled $1,856,711, silk entries being appraised at $745,696. In the preceding week the consumption entries of dry goods were valued at $1,385,397. Withdrawals from bonded warehouses last week aggregated $556,609, while dry goods warehoused totaled $389,470. The latter figures are the lowest for any single week for a long time.

FINANCIAL CONGRESS PLANS.

McAdoo Tells Pan-American Delegates of Work to be Done.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Secretary McAdoo has written a letter to each of the delegates to the Pan-American Financial Conference, here May 24, outlining, in a general way, the purposes of the meeting, and giving a preliminary view of the way it is expected to do its work.

The letter explans that no definite program has been fixed and most of the work will be done in committees, composed of the delegates of the United States named to confer with the respective visiting delegations for the purpose of learning the peculiar problems which face each country. These deliberations are to be confidential in so far as the visitors desire, and any conclusions they wish to make public will be given to the conference at one of the two or three general sessions to be held on the opening day.

A representative of each visiting nation will be asked to respond to an address of welcome by President Wilson with a five-minute reply.

Competition for Merinos.

LONDON, May 14.—The offerings at the wool auction sales today amounted to 7,500 bales. A fine selection of merinos brought out animated competition between French, Russian and home buyers and rates hardened. Lambs' wool was firm at the last auction rates.

M'ANENY URGES VETO OF DIRECT TAX BILL

Levy Would Add $14,000,000 to City's Budget, Acting Mayor Tells Gov. Whitman.

HITS REAL ESTATE VALUES

Executive Urged to Wield Axe More Freely on Expenses—Governor Cuts Out $168,000 More.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 14.—In his capacity as Acting Mayor, President George McAneny of the New York Board of Aldermen appeared before Governor Whitman today and urged him to veto the Direct Tax bill, which would add $14,000,000 to the city's budget next year. He backed up his appeal with an array of figures presented with a view of convincing the Governor that the direct tax could be vetoed without any material injury to the State administration.

Mr. McAneny's speech was sandwiched in between hearings on the budget held in connection with Governor Whitman's hunt for unnecessary items. In the course of a busy day the Governor considered the appropriations made for the Prison Department, the State Engineer's Department, the Department of Education, and the Department of Public Works. He pruned from these four departments an aggregate of $168,349, bringing the grand total up to $1,580,114 for the five days during which the financial bills have been under the knife.

President McAneny sat through nearly all the forenoon and watched the Governor's axe in operation. It was not until after the luncheon recess that he had an opportunity to be heard. It was very clear that he was not a welcome visitor to the Executive Chamber, and that his quest was not popular either with the Governor or the financial experts from Controller Prendergast's office, who have been going over the appropriation bills with a view to discovering items that might be eliminated.

Mr. McAneny began by saying that he came to urge the Governor to veto the Direct Tax bill.

"I do not make that request as a special plea for New York City," he said. "I am sure that the veto would be of vast benefit to every locality in the State, and that it would be popular with the people. There are many incorporated villages up-State that would be hit quite as hard by the proposed direct tax, in proportion to their resources, as would be New York City, although we would be hit so hard that already, in anticipation of the tax, a most serious situation has arisen in the real estate field, a situation that is certain to affect almost every other line of business in the city."

Mr. McAneny pointed out that the direct tax would add $14,000,000 to the city's budget.

"It will add 17½ per cent. to the local tax rate," he said, "bringing this up to about 2.15. That is equal to a $4 rate up-State, for our assessments in New York City in many instances run above 100 per cent., while up-State the average is about 50 per cent. of the market value, or perhaps a little higher."

Urges Freer Use of the Axe.

Mr. McAneny said he regretted that the Legislature, before framing the financial bills, had not followed the Governor's method and held public hearings. He pointed out that the $19,000,500 proposed direct tax and the additional $4,000,000 in indirect revenues had become necessary because of an increase in this year's budget of about $18,000,000 above that of last year, and an estimated falling off of about $5,000,000 in the revenues from indirect sources. Mr. McAneny expressed the opinion that the huge increase in the expenditures of the State certainly should leave room for cutting beyond anything the Governor had accomplished in that direction, and that the prospects with regard to indirect revenues, temporarily dimmed by the European war cloud, had brightened sufficiently to leave room for hope that they would come up pretty close to last year's indirect revenues.

"We might begin with the $9,000,000 contribution to the sinking funds, which is the largest item to be met," said Mr. McAneny. "I feel that there is authority for the State Controller to meet that by tax certificates issued against the collections by the County Treasurers throughout the State. Or, if you do not want to resort to that method, for which there is warrant in law, the Constitutional Convention might provide a way by which the large surplus at present in the sinking funds might be used to provide this year's contribution."

Taking up the $3,600,000 appropriation in connection with the construction work on the Barge Canal, Mr. McAneny suggested that, while the Governor probably pursued the wisest course in signing that measure so as to eliminate any risk of existing contracts being invalidated, provision should be made to have that sum restored to the general fund out of the proceeds of the $27,000,000 bond issue which has been passed by the Legislature and approved by the Governor and which will become effective after the people have ratified the act at a referendum this Fall.

"I understand that your Excellency already has cut some $1,500,000 out of the appropriations," said Mr. McAneny. "I hope you will cut out $3,000,000 before you get through with the work. I certainly think I could suggest fully $1,000,000 more that could have been cut safely from the appropriations of the departments already examined. This is a year when the taxpayers' money should not be spent for anything beyond immediate emergencies."

"I do not know whether you understand," said the Governor, "that the grand total of appropriations provided for in the financial bills is $64,500,000 and that I was compelled to cut out $1,500,000 before I could come within the prospective revenues, direct tax and all."

"Yet, I feel," said President McAneny, "that with the $9,000,000 sinking fund contributions taken care of, the rest will take care of itself with proper management."

Items He Wants Eliminated.

Mr. McAneny, in closing, suggested that these items be eliminated:

For grade crossing A, $25,000 of money reappropriated; this would still leave $752,000 appropriated by the Legislature this year.

Hospital construction, $600,000; the Governor shook his head.

Hospital maintenance, $266,000; again the Governor made a gesture of dissent.

Salaries in Highway Department, $235,000; Mr. McAneny said this should be met by the special appropriation out of the general fund, amounting to almost $4,000,000, which the Governor signed before he decided upon any public hearings.

Mohansic State Hospital, $300,000 for construction purposes.

For special highway in Green County, $140,000 of money reappropriated; this is not part of the highway system, but is a special appropriation. The Governor indicated that the item would be eliminated.

The Governor wielded the axe very freely today. Here are the reductions ordered in the various departments taken up: Education department $32,238, prisons $132,214, common prisons $1,346, common new prisons $2,551.

The greater part of the slash in the Education Department was in reappropriations. In the prison department the largest item retired was $50,000 for the employment of convicts on road construction.

Dr. Jerome Ransom, surgeon at Clinton Prison, by presenting certain facts stayed the Governor's blue pencil from an item of $84,300 for construction and equipment for Clinton Prison. Dr. Ransom said that $75,000 of the sum was for the erection of a general hospital in connection with Dannemora Prison, with a ward for tubercular patients. He said that there were but eighteen beds in the rooms used for tuberculous patients, where there were 407 inmates now in the prison suffering from the disease, and half as many in other prisons awaiting an opportunity to be sent to Dannemora. The doctor said that he disliked to keep these invalids in the small cells and he could not take them without the prison walls because of the prison restrictions. The conditions existing now are such that there is an increase of the disease, whereas there was a falling off before the congested conditions prevailing ensued.

The eliminated items of today were under these heads: Prisons—Maintenance, $50,000; Auburn Prison, $11,790; Clinton Prison, $15,312; Dannemora Prison, $18,400; Great Meadows Prison, $2,730; Matteawan Reformatory, $6,500; Sing Sing Prison, $12,000; State Farm at Valatie, maintenance, $10,400; State Prison for Women, $2,000; Commission of Prisons, maintenance, $1,146; Commission on New Prisons, expenses, $2,551.

Charles S. Wilson, the new Agricultural Commissioner, has written a letter to Governor Whitman asking him to veto an item in the supply bill for $1,500 for repairing and rebuilding the department's automobile, so as "to relieve the department of all criticism." Mr. Wilson says the automobile was purchased for $3,500 ten months ago; the salary of the chauffeur is $2,750; expenses, $1,063, and maintenance, $3,970, a total of $11,283. He recommends the sale of the automobile.

PEACE SUNDAY TOMORROW.

Ministers Will Also Discuss the President's Note to Germany.

Tomorrow is "Peace Sunday," and the New York Peace Society will hold a meeting in the evening in the Broadway Tabernacle, at the corner of Fifty-sixth Street. Nine months of war will be discussed by Professor John Bates Clark and Professor Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia University, and the Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Brown of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. It was said yesterday that, apart from the "Peace Sunday" exercises, many ministers will speak tomorrow on some phase of the situation growing out of President Wilson's note to Germany.

Union Theological Seminary holds its commencement next week, and a feature of it will be an address Thursday evening by the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, one of the trustees, on "The Practical Aims of a Liberal Evangelicalism." The Rev. Dr. Coffin is the leader in the New York Presbytery of the liberals.

The Rev. Dr. Worth M. Tippy of Cleveland begins tomorrow his pastorate of Madison Avenue Methodist Church, on the corner of Sixtieth Street. He was one of the speakers at the Methodist men's dinner last night.

The Episcopal Church has named tomorrow as a day of prayer for church unity. The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Episcopal Commission, will preach in Trinity Church on the subject. Reports are that, in spite of wars, new religious bodies in the Far East have subscribed to the plan of a world conference on faith and order, and an American deputation of ministers and laymen is ready to go to Europe in the interest of such a conference the moment conditions permit.

Next week the Presbyterian General Assembly meets in Rochester. The big topic will be a report of an investigating committee on the Union Seminary in this city.

NEW CATHOLIC CEMETERY.

Cardinal Farley's Committee Buys Large Tract at Valhalla.

Roman Catholics will have a burial place of their own in one of the most beautiful parts of Westchester County, a cemetery which will be built and maintained in such manner as will place it among the most attractive spots of its kind in this part of the country. Under the direction of Cardinal Farley, the Trustees of St. Patrick's Cathedral, through their Cemetery Committee, Bryan L. Kennelly (Chairman), Ernest Iselin, Louis Amy, Thomas L. Feitner and Andrew Dougherty, and John G. Agar, Chairman of the Executive Committee, have purchased a tract of 129 acres, adjoining the Kensico Cemetery at Valhalla, which is to be developed at once.

New York City Catholics now have but one large cemetery in this part of the country, Calvary, in Long Island City. It has no such attractions as are offered at Kensico, where plots of good size may be had on which family burial plots may be laid out or mausoleums built. There are many well to do Catholics in this diocese who desire such facilities, but would rather have them on ground owned and consecrated by the Church. Such opportunities will be afforded by the new cemetery.

The property purchased lies directly between Kensico and Fairlawn Cemeteries on the Harlem Division of the New York Central Railroad. There will be a station at the entrance to the property, and funeral trains will be able to make the run from Grand Central Station in fifty minutes. Part of the plan of development consists of the building of a good-sized lake, and a system of wide macadam roads. The general plan of development will be on the lawn plan without fences of any kind, similar to that of Kensico and Woodlawn.

WIFE SUES J. T. WHITSON.

California Publisher Arrested on Visit to New York.

Mrs. Hannah Whitson caused the arrest of her husband, John T. Whitson, yesterday in a suit for separation, on the ground of abandonment and nonsupport, and later in the day began a suit against him in the Supreme Court for $46,000, which she said it cost her separate estate to provide for herself and her two children since Jan. 1, 1906. Mr. Whitson's original name was Edmund A. Kopple. He had it changed in San Francisco in 1900. On April 14, 1896 he and the plaintiff were married. They lived in San Francisco for four years and then Mr. Whitson came here to promote the Whitson Auto Press Company.

Mrs. Whitson said she came here with her two children, Bertram and Gladys, in 1905. Her husband lived in a fine bachelor apartment and she and her children were put in rooms in one of the smaller hotels. The auto press company became involved and he turned over some of the shares of the company to Victoria Gerken, whose husband, Mrs. Whitson says, brought suit against Mr. Whitson for alienation of his wife's affections.

Then Mr. Whitson left the State and his wife found herself alone and practically penniless. She got work as a saleswoman and a mercantile buyer and so supported her children. She learned that her husband had returned to California. He is now the Vice President of the Luther Burbank Press at Santa Rosa. She says he is living in an apartment there with a woman.

Bertram, the plaintiff's son, made an affidavit in which he said the first time he had seen his father in ten years was on May 7 last, when at his father's request he met him at the Hotel St. Regis. Mr. Whitson furnished $2,000 bail and was released.

BANK MESSENGER HELD UP.

Dragged Into East Side Hallway, Beaten, and Robbed of $1,000.

Isidore Klein, 22 years old, of 158 East 106th Street, a messenger in the employ to the Public Bank of New York, 116th Street and Madison Avenue, was assaulted and robbed of $1,000 dollars yesterday afternoon after being dragged into the hallway of 211 East Seventy-fourth Street. He was severely beaten by two young men, apparently Italians, and had to be attended by Dr. Salsberg of Flower Hospital, before he could return home.

Klein was on his way with the cash in a black wallet to the Bank of Europe, Seventy-fourth Street and First Avenue. As he walked from Madison Avenue along Seventy-fourth Street the robbers attacked Klein with their fists, took the wallet and ran.

Klein staggered to the street and yelled. A crowd collected and Policeman Fraser took him to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station.

McAFEE CHOSEN SECRETARY

Presbyterian Board of Home Missions Reserves Action.

The Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, a body handling $1,800,000 a year, coming from Presbyterians all over the country, yesterday reversed its former attitude and elected Joseph E. McAfee a layman, to be one of its three secretaries. A month ago the same board elected two, but refused to elect Mr. McAfee, after his seven or eight years of service with it, because of opposition to policies put forward by him, and also because, as the Rev. Dr. Wilton Merle Smith said, he "lacked the evangelistic spirit."

The election yesterday carried with it the full rights as secretary, an important place in the administration of large sums of money, and it is said to have indorsed a better business policy at the same time. It was also said yesterday that laymen came forward in behalf of Mr. McAfee and pledged new support if the new policy was adopted.

There was keen satisfaction throughout the Presbyterian Building, Fifth Avenue and Twentieth Street, over the election. Nearly the whole Presbyterian Church has been discussing the case for a fortnight.

TO ENTERTAIN CHINESE.

Merchants and Bankers of China Will Visit City on June 1.

Plans for the entertainment in New York of the Chinese Industrial Commission, which is making a tour of the United States with the co-operation of the Department of Commerce, have been completed by the general committee appointed by Mayor Mitchel. The commission, which is composed of prominent Chinese merchants and financiers, will visit the city for the week of June 1.

The Chinese commission will arrive here from Philadelphia on the morning of June 1 under the guidance of C. B. Yandell, representing the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the Pacific Coast. Mayor Mitchel will receive its members at the City Hall at 11:30, and the party will then go to the Biltmore, where a luncheon at 1 o'clock will be given by the American Manufacturers' Export Association. The Chinese Minister will be the guest of honor.

In addition to this luncheon the commission will be entertained by the Merchants' Association at another on June 2 at the Astor, prior to a motor trip through the city. On Thursday the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York will give a reception and luncheon, and on the evening of this day the American Asiatic Association will entertain with a dinner and theatre party. On Friday a morning river excursion encircling the city is planned and on Saturday the commission will be entertained by the American Missionary Societies at luncheon.

TRICK TO SAVE BONDSMAN.

Two John Straubs Appear for Sentence—Seven Sent to Jail.

Two John Straubs, one 22 years old, a printer, and the other 52 years old, and a soda mixer, and both giving their address as 667 Quincy Street, Brooklyn, were sent to jail yesterday by County Judge Humphrey in Long Island City together with Martin Mulvey, 35 Monroe Street; James J. Dillon, 68 Somer Street; Joseph Reynolds, 605 Mason Street; Michael Reilly, 162 Hoyt Street and Frank Muth, 754 Myrtle Avenue, all of Brooklyn.

John Straub was one of six prisoners arrested on Aug. 28 last year in a raid on a pool room at 95 Queens Boulevard, Winfield. They were indicted as common gamblers and released on bail. In Court last Thursday through their attorney they agreed to plead guilty to a misdemeanor. Then a detective who had been in the raiding party told the district attorney he was sure there was a "ringer" in the batch of prisoners. The Court postponed sentence and released the men in the custody of their bondsmen.

John Straub, 52 years old, the soda mixer, hearing that his case was called for trial and in order to save his bondsman hurried back from Baltimore and without consulting with his companions hastened to the Queens County Court. He was promptly locked up. His finger prints corresponded to those of the John Straub arrested in the raid.

All unmindful that the original John Straub had appeared and was then in jail his five companions with a spurious John Straub were in Court yesterday for sentence expecting to be released with a fine. Judge Humphrey informed them there was one prisoner too many. They may all be punished for attempting to deceive the Court.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, May 14.—A disturbance that was over Utah Thursday night had moved to Western Nebraska with considerable increase in intensity, and general showers have fallen to the northward and westward and also locally in Iowa, North Illinois, and Indiana. Over the remainder of the country fair weather prevailed.

High temperatures continue in the Plains States and the South, while from the lake region east they remain low. In the extreme Northwest and in the North Pacific States it is considerably cooler, with rapidly rising pressure, and with a moderately high pressure area off the North Pacific Coast.

There will be showers Saturday and Sunday in the upper Mississippi Valley and the Northwest and on Saturday in the Central Plains States, followed by fair weather Sunday. In the lake region and the Ohio Valley generally fair weather Saturday will be followed by showers Saturday night or Sunday, while over the remainder of the country the weather will be fair Saturday and Sunday.

It will be cooler Saturday in the Plains States and the Northwest and probably on Sunday in the Missouri and Middle Mississippi Valleys.

Winds for Saturday and Sunday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate northwest to north; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate variable; South Atlantic Coast, moderate south.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Saturday and Sunday.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Saturday, Sunday, cloudy.

Western New York—Fair Saturday. Sunday, unsettled; showers in west portion.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1914.	1915.		1914.	1915.

OPPORTUNITY!

A business man in Tampa, Fla., wanted to widen his field for commissions, so he placed the following advertisement in the "Business Opportunities" column of The New York Times:

Do you want your merchandise sold in Florida? Have the best method. No outlay of money to you; 15 years of selling to the retail and jobbing trade in the State. State commissions in your letter. Bank and business reference furnished if desired. Address Henry H. Abrams, Box 763, Tampa, Florida.

The New York Times received this letter from Mr. Abrams:

Enclosed find check to cover the amount for the advertisement that appeared in The New York Times of the 4th inst.

I want to say that the advertisement certainly covered the field from every line of business that I can think of.

(Signed) HENRY H. ABRAMS.

The use of the "Business Opportunities" column of THE TIMES will give you access to those who have the means and power to buy your offerings or utilize your services.

Post-card your advertisements to The New York Times or telephone Bryant 1000.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Episcopal Missionary Society Sells 243 Broadway—Residence Purchase Near Fifth Avenue—Astor Leasehold Trade—$651,625 Mortgage on Fifth Avenue Corner—Old House Sold at Riverdale.

Lower Broadway opposite City Hall Park furnished an interesting deal yesterday in the sale of the five-story office building at 243 Broadway, midway in the block between Park Place and Murray Street, by the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The property has an extension at 2½ Murray Street where the frontage is 12.7 feet, the Broadway frontage being 25.1 with a total depth of 126.6. The property is 51 feet south of the Murray Street corner.

The Missionary Society came into possession of the property in 1910 as a bequest from the late Mary Rhinelander King, having been owned by the family for over half a century. The sale marks the first change of ownership in the block for about fifteen years. The Importers' and Traders' Bank occupies the immediate Murray Street corner and the 25 foot plot between that and the parcel sold is owned by the Munroe estate. The assessed value of the 243 Broadway property with the Murray Street extension for 1914 was $303,000.

John Seeley Ward, Jr., Buys $80,000 Dwelling.

John Seeley Ward, Jr., has purchased from Solomon Tim 10 East Eighty-second Street, a four-story private dwelling on a lot 20.6 by 102. The buyer will occupy the property which is located midway between Madison and Fifth Avenues.

John J. Kavanagh, who negotiated the transaction, recently sold for Mr. Ward the dwelling at 60 East Eighty-first Street and subsequently resold it together with Nos. 58, 62, and 64, comprising the southwest corner of Park Avenue, to the Northcote Realty Company, Edgar A. Levy president, for improvement with a twelve-story apartment, which together with the land, will represent an investment of $1,000,000.

The property just purchased by Mr. Ward was held at $80,000.

Upper Manhattan Apartment Sale.

The six-story apartment house at 571 and 573 West 175th Street, covering a plot 50 by 142, has been sold to an investor by the Nehring Company for the Mose Goodman Corporation, Mose Goodman, Treasurer. The building was recently completed by the sellers. It has been held at $85,000, and was a cash transaction.

Deal on Water Street.

The three-story building, 383 Water Street, occupying a lot 20 by 80 feet, has been sold by Morris Weinstein to M. Benevento. The property is located between Oliver Street and Catherine Slip. M. Schlossheimer was the broker.

House of Industry Buys in Twenty-third Street.

The Five Points House of Industry has purchased for its New York headquarters and receiving office the building at 454 West Twenty-third Street, near Tenth Avenue. It was bought from Albert J. Appell, and title was recorded yesterday, subject to a $15,000 mortgage. The old building on Worth Street was taken by the city for the new court house centre and about two years ago the society moved to Pomona, Rockland County, N. Y. The city headquarters have been at 442 West Twenty-third Street.

Division Street Sale.

The two three-story buildings at 47 and 49 Division Street, a plot 50.1 by 68.8, near Market Street, have been sold by M. Goldstein for Samuel Kaufman to an investor.

Investor Buys Loft.

Kurz & Uren, Inc., have sold for Hubener-Escher Company, the seven-story loft building, 24, 26, 28 Downing Street, on a plot 60 by 75, located on the easterly side of Downing Street, between Bleecker and Bedford Streets. The buyer is an investor.

Astor Leasehold Traded.

Samuel K. Jacobs has exchanged the Astor leasehold property at 3, 5, and 7 West Thirty-fifth Street for twelve acres of waterfront property at Stamford, Conn., valued at $150,000. Nelson, Lee & Green, who negotiated the trade, sold the leasehold which has eighteen years to run, to Mr. Jacobs one year ago for the Brunswick Realty Company, who erected the eleven-story building now on the site and who took the original lease from the Astor Estate. The sale a year ago involved cash and the northwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street.

$651,625 Mortgage on Fifth Avenue Corner.

The 302 Fifth Avenue Corporation, which is erecting a twelve-story building on the old Dinsmore property, northwest corner of Thirty-first Street, 29.4 by 125 and irregular, took title to this property yesterday from Jacob H. Schiff. The latter took back a mortgage of $651,625.

Recent Buyers.

The D. H. Jackson Company is the buyer from the John E. Condit Estate of the six-story Lansdown apartment house at 352 to 356 West Forty-sixth Street, 75 by 100, the sale of which was announced yesterday. It was held at $200,000. John P. Finneran was the broker.

August Miller is the buyer of 2,138 Lafontaine Avenue, sold recently by John F. Fetzer.

Margaret Staad is the buyer of 419 East 160th Street, sold recently by Emil Geschwenner.

Old Farmhouse Sold.

The Delafield Estate has just sold to Willett R. Skillman, said to be the oldest house in the Van Cortlandt, Riverdale, and Fieldston district. The house just sold stands on the Albany Post Road, just north of the old southerly line of the Phillipse Manor, which land is marked by a line of great boulders, and in places by a stone wall running from the Post Road across Fieldston, all the way to the Hudson River, a few hundred yards south of Dogwood Brook, and forms one of the landmarks of the district.

The old house, built of stone and hewn timbers, with walls over two feet in thickness, and covered with vines planted many years ago, was probably the gate house or southern border house of the Phillipse property, and represents in its plan and style the times long before the Revolution. Some of the old iron work, the long hammered hinges, and other relics may still be seen, and these will be preserved in the alterations under the supervision of Dwight J. Baum, architect, to make the farmhouse an attractive dwelling.

Bronx Borough Sales.

The Schoen Westchester Realty Company and Mr. Rines have sold to an investing client 1,350 Washington Avenue, a six-story new law tenement with stores, on a plot 50 by 101 by 115.

William H. Hancox has purchased from Red Roof Realty Company a lot 25 by 61 feet on the east side of the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, extending through to Ryer Avenue, 115 feet north of 187th Street. H. A. Douglas & Co. were the brokers.

Brooklyn.

Frank A. Seaver & Co. have sold a plot of nine lots on the northwesterly corner of Eighteenth Avenue and Seventieth Street, for Ethel Norton, to an investor.

Burrill Brothers have sold the three-story and basement brownstone private house, 808 President Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, for Mrs. Catherine Mangels to an investor for occupancy.

Sale in Broadway-Flushing.

Frederick R. Long of Flushing has sold to Elsie Lanthier of Broadway-Flushing, for her own occupancy, the English cottage on the west side of Twentieth Street, 160 feet north of State Street, Broadway-Flushing, for a consideration of about $14,000.

Long Island.

Gustave A. Cooper has sold to Morris Rollnick a plot, 80 by 100, improved with a stucco dwelling, on the corner of Nineteenth and State Streets, Flushing. The J. Albert Johnston Company negotiated the sale.

Westchester County.

Lewis M. Fouts, a banker, from Boca Grande, Fla., has purchased a plot on Hillcrest Avenue, Park Hill, on which he is having constructed a home for his own occupancy.

Commercial Leases.

Duross Company has leased the store 242 West Fourteenth Street to John S. Johnson.

Charles B. Walker has leased for the Trinity Corporation, Building 4 Desbrosses Street, to N. Goodman & Sons.

Anthony Lo Forte has leased for the Rothschild Realty Company the store and basement, about 38,000 square feet, in the Knickerbocker Building, southeast corner Fifth Avenue and Sixteenth Street, to E. & Z. Van Raalte, importers and manufacturers of laces and veilings.

The Charles F. Noyes Company has leased the store and basement at 32-34 Frankfort Street for John V. Black to B. H. Strauss.

City and Country House Rentals.

Pease & Elliman have leased for Gustav Kayfmann to Dr. William P. Healy the four-story house at 46 East Eighty-third Street.

A. Kane & Co. have leased for Eugene Higgins the four-story dwelling at 2,201 Seventh Avenue.

Angell & Co. have leased at Scarsdale the Hobart Upjohn dwelling to Dr. Nelson E. Westcott, the home of Dr. G. W. Murdock to Theodore C. Wood, and at Hartsdale, in the Greenacres section, the dwellings of Charles A. Wustlich and Charles A. Gunn.

Realty Notes.

The property at 226 West Twenty-eighth Street, which was to have been sold at auction by Herbert A. Sherman last Tuesday, has been sold at private sale by the owner, Adele Comyns.

The New York Building Managers' Association will hold its next meeting on June 1, when several electrical engineers will address the meeting.

GANGSTERS GAVE VICTIMS A TRIAL

Had "General and Special Sessions Courts" for Offenders, Says Fein.

TWO MORE ARRESTS MADE

Unionist Farmer Charged with Complicity in Lieberwitz Murder—200 Indictments Expected.

Benjamin Fein, known among gangsters as "Dopey Benny," was brought from the Tombs yesterday to the office of District Attorney Perkins, where for more than three hours he continued to tell assistants in the District Attorney's office about the inner workings of the New York gangster system.

One of the new items brought up by Fein was the matter of the "General Sessions Court" and the "Special Sessions Court" operated by gangsters for the trial of offenders against union leaders.

In connection with the two courts, one of which was for the trial of minor offenses, charged with crimes such as workin govertime ,and the other for the trial of major offenses such as "scabs," the gangsters operated an arsenal.

In the arsenal, besides revolvers and blackjacks, there was kept a large quantity of ammunition and unlimited supply of sawed-off lead pipe. The arsenal was maintained in a room adjoining the "General Sessions Court" so that there would be no delay in handling a man sentenced by the ganster court to have a thumb broken so that he could no longer work in the needle trades, or have his ear slashed so that he would be humbled before his fellows as one who did not live up to all the union requirements. These matters were all said to have been handled by a joint body of union leaders and gangsters called The Cloakmakers' Club.

Women as "Gun Bearers."

Fein also recounted in great detail how the gangsters, in order to avoid arrests under the Sullivan law, used their women friends as "gun bearers." When a fight started the thugs would seize the weapons carried in the women's muffs and return them when the fray was over.

A man appeared at Police Headquarters yesterday, whose name the police would not divulge, and told the story of his own experience as a victim of the "General Sessions Court." His offense, he said, was that of working without the sanction of his union in a shop whose proprietors had given some kind of offense. He was ordered to report to union headquarters to be "disciplined," and when he failed to report as ordered, gangsters took him before the gangsters' tribunal, where he was sentenced to have an ear slashed, and a ganster inflicted an ugly wound from which the scar still remains. When he reached his home his wife made a great outcry and summoned policemen and detectives. The gangsters became alarmed, had the man sent to a hospital, and, finally, paid him money enough for a trip to a Middle Western town. The victim never dared to tell about his experience until he became convinced that the police really intended to rid the community of gangsters.

The police arested yesterday John Wedenger, a cloak manufacturer, living at 52 East Ninety-ninth Street, with a place of business at 39 West Twenty-ninth Street. He was the first employer to be taken in the round-up of those who are alleged to have been associated with gunmen in the wreaking of private vengeance against business enemies. Wedenger was charged with first degree murder. He was one of eight men indictd for first degree murder as a result of Fein's confession that he and his gangsters were hired to beat up Herman Lieberwitz in the headquarters of the Cloakmakers' Union at 85 East Fourth Street. Lieberwitz died in Bellevue from the result of his injuries. He was a union man, who went on strike here at the order of the union, but in order to keep his family accepted work in Hunter, N. Y., at a shop under boycott. Wedenger, at the time of the assault five years ago, was an official of the cloakmakers' union, but he has since gone into business for himself.

Held for General Sessions.

Louis Rabinowitz, a baker of 108 Norfolk Street, was arrested yesterday on a charge of first degree assault, and was held in $,500 bail for General Sessions. According tod Fein's confession, Rabinowitz joined with five others, all of whom were indicted, in a plot to maim Max Fleischer, who offended Rabinowitz and others because he was growing popular as an organizer of the Bakers' Union, a job claimed exclusively by one Max Kazimirsky. On Feb. 14, 1914, Fleischer was assailed in a restaurant at 196 Delancey Street and wounded with knives, clubs, and a beer bottle. Fleischer spent several weeks in Bellevue recovering from his wounds, but until Fein's confession, the assault remained one of the mysteries of gangster battles.

At Police Headquarters it was said that several hundred police mysteries, such as the Fleischer case, had been cleared up by Fein's confession.

District Attorney Perkins decided yesterday that on account of the large number of gangsters and labor union officials already indicted, and the larger number who may soon be indicted, he would apply to the Judges of General Sessions to have two courts set aside during the Summer months for the trial of those arrested as a result of Fein's revelations.

Predicts 200 Indictments.

Deputy Police Commissioner Frank Lord, in a letter to Acting Mayor McAneny, made public at the Mayor's office yesterday, predicted that 200 indictments would be returned as a result of Fein's confession. The prediction rather startled the Acting Mayor, as the largest number of indictments so far discussed by District Attorney Perkins was about fifty, thirty-four of which had already been returned against twenty-three labor leaders and eleven gangsters, several of whom were claimed by the unions as union men and not gangsters.

"I wish to call attention to the gangster problem," Mr. Lord wrote, "and to urge that the whole administration be prepared to handle the gangster problem from a constructive, rather than a negative point of view. Effective work by the police and the District Attorney's office has resulted in securing confessions in large numbers. It is estimated that there will be 200 indictments and our institutions are not equipped to deal with these gangsters as they should be dealt with. Unless they are convicted of felonies the law will not permit their being held long enough to do anything with them any way. I am under the impression that the leading gangsters will be convicted of felonies and that a great number of helpers and hangers-on will be convicted of misdemeanors. There is some hope for these thin, emaciated, drug-using boys who are moral and physical cowards, except when charged with drugs."

Mr. Lord urged upon Acting Mayor McAneny that the new law providing for indeterminate sentences be made operative by action of the Board of Estimate, so that each gangster as he goes to jail will know that he can get out by behaving himself and will have to remain in jail if he remains obstinate toward the reformatory discipline of the prison. Mr. Lord also urged that funds be provided to build a shelter for prisoners on Rikers Island, where they could be forced to work. He urged that $65,000 in corporate stock be provided to build the necessary shelters.

RECTOR'S extends a cordial welcome to the naval officers and to the other visitors in the city.

In the main dining room of this famous restaurant—with its cool summer dress, grass floor coverings and large open (but screened) windows on three sides,—is served the finest food, in generous portions, at moderate prices. There is no dancing, but a fourteen piece symphony orchestra and a smart musical revue with a number of Broadway favorites provide entertainment.

The wonderful table d'hote dinner, at $1.25, is served nightly, from 6 to 9, in the magnificent ball room on the floor above. Here dancing may be indulged in from afternoon to close. Exhibition dancing by expert professionals is provided and the midnight revue is a feature. Visitors will learn, as New Yorkers already know, that for the finest food, service and entertainment
